All women know that it is beauty, rather than genius, which all generations of men have worshipped in the sex. Can it be wondered at, then, that so much of woman's time and attention should be directed to the means of developing and preserving that beauty! The most important adjunct to beauty is a clear, smooth, soft and beautiful skin. With this essential a lady appears handsome, even if her features are not perfect.

Ladies afflicted with Tan, Freckles, Rough or Discolored Skin, should lose no time in procuring and applying

Laird's Bloom of Youth.

It will immediately obliterate all such imperfections, and is entirely harmless. It has been chemically analyzed by the Board of Health of New York City, and pronounced entirely free from any material injurious to the health or skin. Over two million ladies have used this delightful toilet preparation and in every instance it has given entire satisfaction. Ladies, if you desire to be beautiful, give Laird's Bloom of Youth a trial, and be convinced of its wonderful efficacy. Sold by Fancy Goods Dealers and Drugists everywhere.

Price, 75c. per Bottle. Depot, 83 John St., N.Y.

This new work has already received strong words of commendation from competent judges who have had the opportunity of examining it, as the following will show:

Commonwealth, Boston, Mass.

"This is a sensible book, written in a clear, plain, yet delicate style; a book which ought to be in the hands of all women and girls old enough to need its counsel. It treats of topics on which hinge much of the world's woe, because of silent suffering, pale cheeks and broken constitutions."

Enquirer, Philadelphia, Penn.

"It is a plain, sensible talk on subjects usually considered too delicate to be either spoken or written about, but here put in a way that cannot offend anybody. It is a book that every mother should read and then put in her daughter's hand."

N. Y. Times.

"A book of sound advice to women."

Christian Intelligencer, N. Y. City.

"Written by a woman who speaks from the standpoint of an educated experience. Its style is simple, chaste and earnest, and it treats of subjects which it vastly concerns wives, mothers and daughters to know."

National Tribune, Washington, D. C.

"The information which this book affords is precisely what every woman ought to have."

Zion's Herald, Boston, Mass.

"In clear and plain style, with the modesty and the knowledge which an educated woman has of her subject, is preserved just what the young head of a family ought to know about herself and those who may come under her care. It is an admirable book of its kind."

New York Star.

"The work opens with a chapter on physical culture, which is followed by essays on physiology in general. The feeding of children, the rights of children, the question of education, etc., are all discussed, and the work is fully illustrated."

N. Y. Medical Times.

"It treats of the importance of physical culture and hygiene. The chapters on 'Intemperance and Tobacco' are especially worthy of note. Such books as this manual are to be welcomed as helpers-on in the good cause of uplifting and perfecting humanity."

Scientific American, N. Y.

"The importance of physical culture for women, with especial reference to their duties in the household and the raising and care of children, are prominently treated in this book."

Indianapolis Journal, Indiana.

"Some work of this kind is indi-pensable and this one seems to be perfectly suited to the purpose for which it was prepared."

Presbyterian Banner, Pittsburg, Pa.

"Prepared by a woman who has herself received a medical training, it contains for mothers instruction and warning that should be carefully considered."

MEMOIR OF ROBERT BURNS.

Robert Burns was born on the 25th day of January, 1759, in a small house about two miles from the town of Ayr, and within a few hundred yards of Alloway Church, which his poem of Tam o' Shanter has rendered immortal. The name, which the poet and his brother modernized into Burns, was originally Burnes, or Burness. (Their father, William Burnes, was the son of a farmer in Kincardineshire, and had received the education common in Scotland to persons in his condition of life; he could read and write, and had some knowledge of arithmetic. His family having fallen into reduced circumstances, he was compelled to leave his home in his nineteenth year, and turned his steps toward the south in quest of a livelihood. He undertook to act as a gardener, and shaped his course to Edinburgh, where he wrought hard when he could obtain employment, passing through a variety of difficulties. From Edinburgh William Burnes passed westward into the county of Ayr, where he engaged himself as a gardener to the laird of Fairly, with whom he lived two years; then changed his service for that of Crawford of Doonside. At length, being desirous of settling in life, he took a perpetual lease of seven acres of land from Dr. Campbell, physician in Ayr, with the view of commencing nurseryman and public gardener, and, having built a house upon it with his own hands, married in December, 1757, Agnes Brown. The first fruit of this marriage was Robert, the subject of these memoirs. Before William Burnes had made much progress in preparing his nursery, he was withdrawn from that undertaking by Mr. Ferguson, who purchased the estate of Doonholm, in the immediate neighbourhood, and engaged him as his gardener and overseer, and this was his situation when our poet was born. When in the service of Mr. Ferguson, he lived in his own house, his wife managing her family, and her little dairy, which consisted of two, sometimes of three milch cows; and this state of unambitious content continued till the year 1766. His son Robert was sent by him, in his sixth year, to a school in Alloway Miln, about a mile distant, taught by a person of the name of Campbell; but this teacher being in a few months appointed master of the workhouse at Ayr, William Burnes, in conjunction with some other heads of families, engaged John Murdoch in his stead. The education of our poet, and of his brother Gilbert, was in common; and whilst under Mr. Murdoch, they learned to read English tolerably well, and to write a little. He also taught them the elements of English grammar, in which Robert made some proficiency—a circumstance which had considerable weight in the unfolding of his genius and character; as he soon became remarkable for the fluency and correctness of his expression, and read the few books that came in his way with much pleasure and improvement.

It appears that William Burnes approved himself greatly in the service of Mr. Ferguson, by his intelligence, industry, and integrity. In consequence of this, with a view of promoting his interest, Mr. Ferguson leased to him the farm of Mount Oliphant, in the parish of Ayr; consisting of upwards of seventy acres (about ninety, English Imperial measure), the rent of which was to be forty pounds annually for the first six years, and afterwards forty-five pounds.
Mr. Ferguson also lent him a hundred pounds to assist in stocking the farm, to which he removed at Whitsuntide, 1766. But this, in place of being of advantage to William Burns, as it was intended by his former master, was the commencement of much anxiety and distress to the whole family, which is forcibly described by his son, Gilbert, in a letter to Mrs. Dunlop:

"Mount Oliphant, the farm my father possessed in the parish of Ayr, is almost the very poorest soil I know of in a state of cultivation. A stronger proof of this I cannot give, than that, notwithstanding the extraordinary rise in the value of lands in Scotland, it was, after a considerable sum laid out in improving it by the proprietor, let a few years ago five pounds per annum lower than the rent paid for it by my father thirty years ago. My father, in consequence of this, soon came into difficulties, which were increased by the loss of several of his cattle by accidents and disease. To the buffettings of misfortune, we could only oppose hard labour and the most rigid economy. We lived very sparingly. For several years butcher's meat was a stranger in the house, while all the members of the family exerted themselves to the utmost of their strength, and rather beyond it, in the labours of the farm. My brother, at the age of thirteen, assisted in thrashing the crop of corn, and at fifteen was the principal labourer on the farm, for we had no hired servant, male or female. The anguish of mind we felt at our tender years, under these straits and difficulties, was very great. To think of our father growing old (for he was now above fifty) broken down with the long-continued fatigues of his life, with a wife and five other children, and in a declining state of circumstances, these reflections produced in my brother's mind and mine sensations of the deepest distress. I doubt not but the hard labour and sorrow of this period of his life, was in a great measure the cause of that depression of spirits with which Robert was so often afflicted through his whole life afterwards. At this time he was almost constantly afflicted in the evenings with a dull headache, which, at a future period of his life, was exchanged for a palpitation of the heart, and a threatening of fainting and suffocation in his bed, in the night-time.

"By a stipulation in my father's lease, he had a right to throw it up, if he thought proper, at the end of every sixth year. He attempted to fix himself in a better farm at the end of the first six years, but failing in that attempt, he continued where he was for six years more. He then took the farm of Lochlea, of 130 acres, at the rent of twenty shillings an acre, in the parish of Tarbolton, of Mr ——— ———, then a merchant in Ayr, and now (1797) a merchant at Liverpool. He removed to this farm at Whitsuntide, 1777, and possessed it only seven years. No writing had ever been made out of the conditions of the lease; a misunderstanding took place respecting them; the subjects in dispute were submitted to arbitration, and the decision involved my father's affairs in ruin. He lived to know of this decision, but not to see any execution in consequence of it. He died on the 13th of February, 1784."

Of this frugal, industrious, and good man, the following beautiful character has been given by Mr. Murdoch:—"He was a tender and affectionate father; he took pleasure in leading his children in the path of virtue; not in driving them as some parents do, to the performance of duties to which they themselves are averse. He took care to find fault but very seldom; and therefore, when he did rebuke, he was listened to with a kind of reverential awe. A look of disapprobation was felt; a reproof was severely so; and a stripe with the tups, even on the skirt of the coat, gave heartfelt pain, produced a loud lamentation, and brought forth a flood of tears.

"He had the art of gaining the esteem and good-will of those that were labourers under him. I think I never saw him angry but twice: the one time it was with the foreman of the band, for not reaping the field as he was desired: and the other time it was with an old man, for using smuttie innuedoes and double entendres. Were every foul-mouthed old man to receive a seasonable check in this way, it would be to the advantage of the rising generation. As he was at no time overbearing to inferiors, he was equally incapable of that passive, pitiful, paltry spirit, that induces some people to keep booing and bowing in the presence of a great man. He always treated superiors with a becoming respect; but he never gave the smallest encouragement to aristocratical arrogance. But I must not pretend to give you a description of all the many qualities, the rational and Christian virtues, of the venerable William Burns. Time would fail me. I shall only add, that he carefully practised every known duty, and avoided everything that was criminal; or, in the apostle’s words, ‘Herein did he exercise himself, in living a life void of offence towards God and towards men.’ Oh for a world of men of such dispositions! We should then have no wars. I have often wished, for the good of mankind, that it were as customary to honour and perpetuate the memory of those who excel in moral rectitude, as it is to extol what are called heroic actions: then would the mausoleum of the friend of my youth overtop and surpass most of the monuments I see in Westminster Abbey!"

Under the humble roof of his parents, it appears indeed that our poet had great advantages; but his opportunities of information at school were more limited as to time than they usually are among his countrymen, in his condition of life; and the acquisitions which he made, and the poetical talent which he exerted, under the pressure of early and incessant toil, and of inferior, and perhaps scanty nutriment, testify at once the extraordinary force and activity of his mind. In his frame of body he rose nearly five feet ten inches, and assumed the proportions that indicate agility as well as strength. In the various labours of the farm he excelled all his competitors. Gilbert Burns declares that in mowing, the exercise that tries all the muscles most severely, Robert was the only man that, at the end of a summer’s day, he was ever obliged to acknowledge as his master. But though our poet gave the powers of his body to the labours of the farm, he refused to bestow on them his thoughts or his cares. While the ploughshare under his guidance passed through the sward, or the grass fell under the sweep of his scythe, he was humming the songs of his country, musing on the deeds of ancient valour, or rapt in the illusions of Fancy, as her enchantments rose on his view. Happily the Sunday is yet a sabbath, on which man and beast rest from their labours. On this day, therefore, Burns could indulge in a freer intercourse with the charms of nature. It was his delight to wander alone on the banks of Ayr, whose stream is now immortal, and to listen to the song of the blackbird at the close of the summer’s day. But still greater was his pleasure, as he himself informs us, in walking on the sheltered side of a wood, in a cloudy winter day, and hearing the storm rave among the trees; and more elevated still his delight to ascend some eminence during the agitations of nature, to stride along its summit while the lightning flashed around him, and, amidst the howlings of the tempest, to apostrophize the spirit of the storm. Such situations he declares most favorable to devotion—‘Rapt in enthusiasm, I seem to ascend towards Him who walks on the wings of the wind!’ If other proofs were wanting of the character of his genius, this might determine it. The heart of the poet is peculiarly awake to every impression of beauty and sublimity; but, with the higher order of poets, the beautiful is less attractive than the sublime.

The gayety of many of Burns’ writings, and the lively and even cheerful colouring with which he has portrayed his own character, may lead some persons to suppose, that the melancholy which hung over him towards the end of his days was not an original part of his constitution. It is not to be doubted, indeed, that this melancholy acquired a darker hue in the progress of his life; but, independent of his own and of his brother’s testimony, evidence is to be found among his papers that he was subject very early to those depressions of mind, which are perhaps not wholly separable from the sensibility of genius, but which in him rose to an uncommon degree.
The energy of Burns' mind was not exhausted by his daily labours, the effusions of his muse, his social pleasures, or his solitary meditations. Some time previous to his engagement as a flux-dresser, having heard that a debating-club had been established in Ayr, he resolved to try how such a meeting would succeed in the village of Tarbolton. About the end of the year 1780, our poet, his brother, and five other young peasants of the neighbourhood, formed themselves into a society of this sort, the declared objects of which were to relax themselves after toil, to promote sociality and friendship, and to improve the mind. The laws and regulations were furnished by Burns. The members were to meet after the labours of the day were over, once a week, in a small public house in the village; where each should offer his opinion on a given question or subject, supporting it by such arguments as he thought proper. The debate was to be conducted with order and decorum; and after it was finished, the members were to choose a subject for discussion at the ensuing meeting. The sum expended by each was not to exceed three-pence; and, with the humble potation that this could procure, they were to toast their mistresses and to cultivate friendship with each other.

After the family of our bard removed from Tarbolton to the neighbourhood of Mauchline, he and his brother were requested to assist in forming a similar institution there. The regulations of the club at Mauchline were nearly the same as those of the club at Tarbolton; but one laudable alteration was made. The fines for non-attendance had at Tarbolton been spent in enlarging their scanty potations: at Mauchline it was fixed, that the money so arising should be set apart for the purchase of books; and the first work procured in this manner was the Mirror, the separate numbers of which were at that time recently collected and published in volumes. After it followed a number of other works, chiefly of the same nature, and among these the Lounger.

The society of Mauchline still subsists, and was in the list of subscribers to the first edition of the works of its celebrated associate.

Whether, in the humble societies of which he was a member, Burns acquired much direct information, may perhaps be questioned. It cannot however be doubted, that by collision the faculties of his mind would be excited, that by practice his habits of enunciation would be established, and thus we have some explanation of that early command of words and of expression which enabled him to pour forth his thoughts in language not unworthy of his genius, and which, of all his endowments, seemed, on his appearance in Edinburgh, the most extraordinary. For associations of a literary nature, our poet acquired a considerable relish; and happy had it been for him, after he emerged from the condition of a peasant, if fortune had permitted him to enjoy them in the degree of which he was capable, so as to have fortified his principles of virtue by the purification of his taste, and given to the energies of his mind habits of exertion that might have excluded other associations, in which it must be acknowledged they were too often wasted, as well as debased.

The whole course of the Ayr is fine; but the banks of that river, as it bends to the eastward above Mauchline, are singularly beautiful, and they were frequented, as may be imagined, by our poet in his solitary walks. Here the muse often visited him.

At this time Burns' prospects in life were so extremely gloomy, that he had decided upon going out to Jamaica, and had procured the situation of overseer on an estate belonging to Dr. Douglas; not, however, without lamenting, that want of patronage should force him to think of a project so repugnant to his feelings, when his ambition aimed at no higher object than the station of an exciseman or gauger in his own country. But the situation in which he was now placed cannot be better illustrated than by introducing the letter which he wrote to Dr. Moore, giving an account of his life up to this period. As it was never intended to see the light: elegance, or perfect correctness of composition, will not be expected. These however, will be compensated by the opportunity of seeing our poet, as he gives the incidents of his life, unfold the peculiarities of his character with all the careless vigor and open sincerity of his mind.

"Sir:

For some months past I have been rambling over the country; but I am now confined with some lingering complaints, originating, as I take it, in the stomach. To divert my spirits a little in this miserable fog of ennui, I have taken a whim to give you a history of myself. My name has made some little noise in this country; you have done me the honour to interest yourself very warmly in my behalf; and I think a faithful account of what character of a man I am, and how I came by that character, may perhaps amuse you in an idle moment. I will give you an honest narrative; though I know it will be often at my own expense;—for I assure you, sir, I have, like Solomon, whose character, except in the trifling affair of wisdom, I sometimes think I resemble—I have, I say, like him, 'turned my eyes to behold madness and folly,' and, like him, too frequently shaken hand with their intoxicating friendship. *

* * * After you have perused these pages, should you think them trifling and impertinent, I only beg leave to tell you, that the poor author wrote them under some twitching qualms of conscience, arising from a suspicion that he was doing what he ought not to do—a predicament he has more than once been in before.

"I have not the most distant pretensions to assume that character, which the p ye-coated guardians of escutcheons call a Gentleman. When at Edinburgh last winter, I got acquainted in the Herald's Office; and looking through that granary of honours, I there found almost every name in the kingdom; but for me,

My ancient but ignoble blood
Has crept through scoundrels ever since the flood.

Gules, Purpure, Argent, &c., quite disowned me.

"My father was of the north of Scotland, the son of a farmer, and was thrown by early misfortunes on the world at large; where, after many years' wanderings and sojournings, he picked up a pretty large quantity of observation and experience, to which I am indebted for most of my pretensions to wisdom. I have met with few who understood men, their manners, and their ways, equal to him; but stubborn, ungainly integrity, and headlong, ungovernable irascibility, are disqualifying circumstances; consequently, I was born a very poor man's son. For the first six or seven years of my life, my father was gardener to a worthy gentleman of small estate in the neighborhood of Ayr. Had he continued in that station, I must have marched off to be one of the little underlings about a farm house; but it was his dearest wish and prayer to have it in his power to keep his children under his own eye till they could discern between good and evil; so, with the assistance of his generous master, my father ventured on a small farm on his estate. At those years I was by no means a favourite with anybody. I was a good deal noted for a retentive memory, a stubborn sturdy something in my disposition, and an enthusiastic idiot piety. I say idiot piety, because I was then but a child. Though it cost the schoolmaster some thrashings, I made an excellent English scholar; and by the time I was ten or eleven years of age, I was a critic in substantives, verbs, and participles. In my infant and boyish days, too, I owed much to an old woman who resided in the family, remarkable for her ignorance, credulity, and superstition. She had, I suppose, the largest collection in the country of tales and songs concerning devils, ghosts, fairies, brownies, witches, warlocks, spunkies, kelpies, elf-candles, deadlights, wraiths, apparitions, cantraips, giants, enchanted towers, dragons, and other trumpery. This cultivated the latent seeds of poetry; but had so strong an effect on my imagination, that to this hour, in my nocturnal rambles, I sometimes keep a sharp look-out in suspicious places; and though nobody can be more skeptical than I am in such matters, yet it often takes an effort of philosophy to shake off these idle terrors. The earliest composition that I recollect taking pleasure in was The Vision of Mirza, and a hymn of Addison's, beginning 'How are thy servants blessed, O Lord?' I particularly remember one half-stanza, which was music to my boyish ear—

For though on dreadful whirls we hung
High on the broken wave.

I met with these pieces in Mason's English Collection, one of my school-books. The two first books I ever read in private, and which gave me more pleasure than any two books I ever read since, were, The Life of Hannibal, and The History of Sir William Wallace. Hannibal gave my young ideas such a turn, that I used to strut in raptures up and down after the recruiting drum and bagpipe, and wish myself tall enough to be a soldier; while the story of Wallace poured a Scottish prejudice into my veins, which will boil along there till the flood-gates of life shut in eternal rest.

"Polemical divinity about this time was putting the country half mad: and I, ambitious of shining in conversation parties on Sundays, between sermons, at funerals, &c., used a few years afterwards to puzzle Calvinism with so much heat and indiscretion, that I raised a hue-and-cry of heresy against me, which has not ceased to this hour.

"My vicinity to Ayr was of some advantage to me. My social disposition, when not checked by some modifications of spirited pride, was, like our catechism definition of infinitude, without bounds or limits. I formed several connections with other yokers who possessed superior advantages, the youngling actors, who were busy in the rehearsal of parts in which they were shortly to appear on the stage of life, where, alas! I was destined to drudge behind the scenes. It is not commonly at this green age that our young gentry have a just sense of the immense distance between them and their ragged play-fellows. It takes a few dashes into the world, to give the young great man that proper, decent, unnoticing disregard for the poor, insignificant, stupid devils, the mechanics and peasantry around him, who were perhaps born in the same village. My young superiors never insulted the cloutery appearance of my plough-boy carcass, the two extremes of which were often exposed to all the inclemencies of all the seasons. They would give me stray volumes of books among them, even then, I could pick up some observations; and one, whose heart I am sure not even the Munny Begum scenes have tainted, helped me to a little French. Parting with these my young friends and benefactors, as they occasionally went off for the East or West Indies, was often to me a sore affliction; but I was soon called to more serious evils. My father's generous master died; the farm proved a ruinous bargain; and, to clench the misfortune, we fell into the hands of a factor, who sat for the picture I have drawn of one in my Tale of Two Dogs. My father was advanced in life when he married; I was the eldest of seven children; and he, worn out by early hardships, was unfit for labour. My father's spirit was soon irritated, but not easily broken. There was a freedom in his lease in two years more; and, to weather these two years, we retrenched our expenses. We lived very poorly: I was a dexterous ploughman for my age; and the next eldest to me was a brother (Gilbert), who could drive the plough very well and help me to thrash the corn. A novel-writer might perhaps have viewed these scenes with some satisfaction; but so did not I; my indignation yet boils at the recollection of the factor's insolent threatening letters, which used to set us all in tears.

"This kind of life—the cheerless gloom of a hermit, with the unceasing moil or a galley-slave, brought me to my sixteenth year: a little before which period I first committed the sin of rhyme. You know our country custom of coupling a man and woman together as partners in the labours of the harvest. In my fifteenth autumn, my partner was a bewitching creature a year younger, than myself. My scarcity of English denies me the power of doing her justice in that language, but you know the Scottish idiom—she was a bonnie, sweet, sonsie lass. In short, she, altogether unwittingly to herself, initiated me into that delicious passion, which, in spite of acid disappointment, gin-horse prudence, and book-worm philosophy, I hold to be the first of human joys, our dearest blessing here below! How she caught the contagion, I cannot tell: you medical people talk much of infection from breathing the same air, the touch, &c.; but I never expressly said I loved her. Indeed, I did not know myself why I liked so much to loiter behind with her, when returning in the evening from our labours; why the tones of her voice made my heart-strings thrill like an Æolian harp; and particularly why my pulse beat such a furious rattan when I looked and fingered over her little hand to pick out the cruel nettle-stings and thistles. Among her other love-inspiring qualities, she sung sweetly; and it was her favourite reel to which I attempted giving an embodied vehicle in rhyme. I was not so presumptuous as to imagine that I could make verses like printed ones, composed by men who had Greek and Latin; but my girl sung a song, which was said to be composed by a small country laird's son, on one of his father's maids, with whom he was in love! and I saw no reason why I might not rhyme as well as he: for, excepting that he could smear sheep, and cast peats, his father living in the moorlands, he had no more school-craft than myself.

"Thus with me began love and poetry; which at times have been my only, and till within the last twelve months, have been my highest enjoyment. My father struggled on till he reached the freedom in his lease, when he entered on a larger farm, about ten miles farther in the country. The nature of the bargain he made was such as to throw a little ready money into his hands at the commencement of his lease; otherwise the affair would have been impracticable. For four years we lived comfortably here; but a difference commencing between him and his landlord as to terms, after three years' tossing and whirling in the vortex of litigation, my father was just saved from the horrors of a jail by a consumption, which, after two years' promises, kindly stepped in, and carried him away, to 'where the wicked cease from troubling, and where the weary are at rest.'

"It is during the time that we lived on this farm that my little story is most eventful. I was, at the beginning of this period, perhaps the most unguarded, awkward boy in the parish—no solitaire was less acquainted with the ways of the world. What I knew of ancient story was gathered from Salmon's and Guthrie's geographical grammars; and the ideas I had formed of modern manners, of literature and criticism, I got from the Spectator. These, with Pope's Works, some plays of Shakespeare, Tull and Dickson on Agriculture, The Pantheon, Locke's Essay on the Human Understanding, Stackhouse's History of the Bible, Justice's British Gardener's Directory, Boyle's Lectures, Allan Ramsay's Works, Taylor's Scripture Doctrine of Original Sin, A Select Collection of English Songs, and Harvey's Meditations, had formed the whole of my reading. The collection of songs was my vade mecum. I pored over them driving my cart, or walking to labour, song by song, verse by verse; carefully noting the true, tender, or sublime, from affectation and fustian. I am convinced I owe to this practice much of my critic craft, such as it is.

"In my seventeenth year, to give my manners a brush, I went to a country dancing-school.—My father had an unaccountable antipathy against these meetings; and my going was, what to this moment I repent, in opposition to his wishes. My father, as I said before, was subject to strong passions; from that instance of disobedience in me, he took a sort of a dislike to me, which I believe was one cause of the dissipation which marked my succeeding years. I say dissipation, comparatively with the strictness, and sobriety, and regularity of Presbyterian country life; for though the Will-o'-Wisp meteors of thoughtless whim were almost the sole lights of my path, yet early ingrained piety and virtue kept me for several years afterwards within the line of innocence. The great misfortune of my life was to want an aim. I had felt early some stirrings of ambition, but they were the blind gropings of Homer's Cyclops round the walls of his cave. I saw my father's situation entailed on me perpetual labour. The only two openings by which I could enter the temple of Fortune, was the gate ofiggardly economy, or the path of little chicaning bargain-making. The first is so contracted an aperture, I never could squeeze myself into it;—the last I always hated—there was contamination in the very entrance! Thus abandoned of aim or view in life, with a strong appetite for sociability, as well from native hilarity, as from a pride of observation and remark; a constitutional melancholy or hypochondriacism, that made me fly solitude; add to these incentives to social life, my reputation for bookish knowledge, a certain wild logical talent, and a strength of thought, something like the rudiments of good sense; and it will not seem surprising that I was generally a welcome guest, where I visited, or any great wonder that, always where two or three met together, there I was among them. But far beyond all other impulses of my heart, was un pêchent à l'amourable moitié du genre humain. My heart was completely tender, and was eternally lighted up by some goddess or other; and as in every other warfare in this world, my fortune was various—sometimes I was received with favour, and sometimes I was mortified with a repulse. At the plough, scythe, or reap-hook, I feared no competitor, and thus I set absolute want at defiance; and as I never cared farther for my labours than while I was in actual exercise, I spent the evenings in the way after my own heart. A country lad seldom carries on a love-adventure without an assisting confidant. I possessed a curiosity, zeal, and intrepid dexterity, that recommended me as a proper second on these occasions; and I dare say I felt as much pleasure in being in the secret of half the loves of the parish of Tarbolton, as ever did statesman in knowing the intrigues of half the courts of Europe.—The very goose-feather in my hand seems to know instinctively the well-worn path of my imagination, the favourite theme of my song; and is with difficulty restrained from giving you a couple of paragraphs on the love-adventures of my comppeers, the humble inmates of the farm-house and cottage; but the grave sons of science, ambition, or avarice, baptize these things by the name of Follies. To the sons and daughters of labour and poverty, they are matters of the most serious nature: to them the ardent hope, the stolen interview, the tender farewell, are the greatest and most delicious parts of their enjoyments.

Another circumstance in my life which made some alteration in my mind and manners, was that I spent my nineteenth summer on a smuggling coast, a good distance from home, at a noted school, to learn mensuration, surveying, dialling, &c., in which I made a pretty good progress. But I made a greater progress in the knowledge of mankind. The contraband trade was at that time very successful, and it sometimes happened to me to fall in with those who carried it on. Scenes of swaggering riot and roaring dissipation were till this time new to me: but I was no enemy to social life. Here, though I learnt to fill my glass and to mix without fear in a drunken squabble, yet I went on with a high hand with my geometry, till the sun entered Virgo, a month which is always a carnival in my bosom, when a charming fillette, who lived next door to the school, overset my trigonometry, and sent me off at a tangent from the sphere of my studies. I, however, struggled on with my
"It was in vain to think of doing any more good at school. The remaining week I staid, I did nothing but craze the faculties of my soul about her, or steal out to meet her; and the two last nights of my stay in the country, had sleep been a mortal sin, the image of this modest and innocent girl had kept me guiltless.

"I returned home very considerably improved. My reading was enlarged with the very important addition of Thomson's and Shenstone's Works; I had seen human nature in a new phasis: and I engaged several of my school-fellows to keep up a literary correspondence with me. This improved me in composition. I had met with a collection of letters by the wits of Queen Anne's reign, and I pored over them most devoutly; I kept copies of any of my own letters that pleased me; and a comparison between them and the composition of most of my correspondents flattered my vanity. I carried this whim so far that though I had not three farthings' worth of business in the world, yet almost every post brought me as many letters as if I had been a plodding son of a day-book and ledger.

"My life flowed on much in the same course till my twenty-third year. Vice l'amour, et vice la bagatelle, were my sole principles of action. The addition of two more authors to my library gave me great pleasure; Sterne and McKenzie—Tristram Shandy and The Man of Feeling—were my bosom favourites. Poesy was still a darling walk for my mind: but it was only indulged in according to the humour of the hour. I had usually half a dozen or more pieces in hand; I took up one or the other, as it suited the momentary tone of the mind, and dismissed the work as it bordered on fatigue. My passions, when once lighted up, raged like so many devils till they got vent in rhyme; and then the conning over my verses, like a spell, soothed all into quiet. None of the rhymes of those days are in print, except, Winter, a Dirge, the eldest of my printed pieces; The Death of Poor Mailie, John Barleycorn, and songs, first, second, and third. Song second was the ebullition of that passion which ended the forementioned school business.

"My twenty-third year was to me an important era. Partly through whim, and partly that I wished to set about doing something in life, I joined a flax-dresser in a neighbouring town (Irvine) to learn his trade. This was an unlucky affair. My *; and, to finish the whole, as we were giving a welcoming carousal to the new year, the shop took fire, and burnt to ashes; and I was left, like a true poet, not worth a sixpence.

"I was obliged to give up this scheme; the clouds of misfortune were gathering thick round my father's head; and what was worst of all, he was visibly far gone in a consumption; and, to crown my distresses, a belle fille whom I adored, and who had pledged her soul to meet me in the field of matrimony, jilted me with peculiar circumstances of mortification. The finishing evil that brought up the rear of this infernal file was, my constitutional melancholy being increased to such a degree, that for three months I was in a state of mind scarcely to be envied by the hopeless wretches who have got their mittimus—Deport from me, ye accursed!

"From this adventure, I learned something of a town life; but the principal thing which gave a turn was a friendship I formed with a young fellow, a very noble character, but a hapless son of misfortune. He was a son of a simple mechanic; but a great man in the neighbourhood taking him under his patronage, gave him a genteel education, with a view of bettering his situation in life. The patron dying just as he was ready to launch out into the world, the poor fellow in despair went to sea; where, after a variety of good and ill fortune, a little before I was acquainted with him, he had been set ashore by an American privateer, on the wild coast of Connaught, stripped of everything. I cannot quit this poor fellow's story without adding, that he is at this time master of a large West-Indian, belonging to the Thames.

"His mind was fraught with independence, magnanimity, and every manly virtue. I loved and admired him to a degree of enthusiasm, and of course strove to imitate him. In some measure I succeeded; I had pride before, but he taught it to flow in proper channels. His knowledge of the world was vastly superior to mine, and I was all attention to learn. He was the only man
I ever saw who was a greater fool than myself, where woman was the presiding star; but he spoke of illicit love with the levity of a sailor, which hitherto I had regarded with horror. Here his friendship did me a mischief, and the consequence was, that soon after I resumed the plough, I wrote the Poet's Welcome.* My reading only increased, while in this town, by two stray volumes of Pamela, and one of Ferdinand Count Fathom, which gave me some idea of novels. Rhyme, except some religious pieces that are in print,
I had given up; but meeting with Ferguson's Scottish Poems, I strung anew my wildly-sounding lyre with emulating vigour. When my father died, his all went among the hell-hounds that growl in the kennel of justice; but we made a shift to collect a little money in the family among us, with which, to keep us together, my brother and I took a neighbouring farm. My brother wanted my hair-brained imagination, as well as my social and amorous madness; but, in good sense, and every sober qualification, he was far my superior.

*I entered on this farm with a full resolution, 'Come, go to, I will be wise!' I read farming books; I calculated crops; I attended markets: and, in short, in spite of 'the devil, and the world, and the flesh,' I believe I should have been a wise man; but the first year, from unfortunately buying bad seed,— the second, from a late harvest,—we lost half our crops. This overset all my wisdom, and I returned, 'like the dog to his vomit, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.'

"I now began to be known in the neighbourhood as a maker of rhymes. The first of my poetic offspring that saw the light was a burlesque lamentation on a quarrel between two reverend Calvinists, both of them dramatis persona in my Holy Fair. I had a notion myself, that the piece had some merit; but to prevent the worst, I gave a copy of it to a friend who was very fond of such things, and told him that I could not guess who was the author of it, but that I thought it pretty clever. With a certain description of the clergy, as well as hilarity, it met with a roar of applause. Holy Wiifie's Prayer next made its appearance, and alarmed the kirk-session so much, that they held several meetings to look over their spiritual artillery, if haply any of it might be pointed against profane rhymers. Unluckily for me, my wanderings led me on another side, within point-blank shot of their heaviest metal. This is the unfortunate story that gave rise to my printed poem The Lament. This was a most melancholy affair, which I cannot yet bear to reflect on, and had very nearly given me one or two of the principal qualifications for a place among those who have lost the chart, and mistaken the reckoning, of Rationality. I gave up my part of the farm to my brother,—in truth, it was only nominally mine,—and made what little preparation was in my power for Jamaica. But, before leaving my native country forever, I resolved to publish my poems. I weighed my productions as impartially as was in my power; I thought they had merit; and it was a delicious idea that I should be called a clever fellow, even though it should never reach my ears—a poor negro-driver,—or perhaps a victim to that inhospitable clime, and gone to the world of spirits! I can truly say, that paucity inconnue as I then was, I had pretty nearly as high an idea of myself and my works as I have at this moment, when the public has decided in their favour. It ever was my opinion, that the mistakes and blunders, both in a rational and religious point of view, of which we see thousands daily guilty, are owing to their ignorance of themselves.—To know myself has been all along my constant study. I weighed myself alone; I balanced myself with others; I watched every means of information, to see how much ground I occupied as a man and as a poet: I studied assiduously Nature’s design in my formation—where the lights and shades in my character were intended. I was pretty confident my poems would meet with some applause; but, at the worst, the roar of the Atlantic would deafen the voice of censure, and the novelty of West Indian scenes make me forget neglect. I threw off six hundred copies, of which I had got subscriptions for about three hundred and fifty.—My vanity was highly gratified by the reception I met with from the public; and besides, I pocketed, all expenses deducted, nearly twenty pounds. This sum came very seasonably, as I was thinking of indenting myself, for want of money to procure my passage. As soon as I was master of nine guineas, the price of waiting me to the torrid zone, I took a steerage passage in the first ship that was to sail from the Clyde; for Hungry ruin had me in the wind.

"I had been for some days skulking from covert to covert, under all the terrors of a jail; as some ill-advised people had uncoupled the merciless pack of the law at my heels. I had taken the last farewell of my friends; my chest was on the road to Greenock; I had composed the last song I should ever measure in Caledonia, ‘The gloomy night was gathering fast,’ when a letter from Dr. Blacklock, to a friend of mine, overthrew all my schemes, by opening new prospects to my poetic ambition. The Doctor belonged to a set of critics, for whose applause I had not dared to hope. His opinion that I would meet with encouragement in Edinburgh for a second edition fired me so much, that away I posted for that city, without a single acquaintance, or a single letter of introduction. The baneful star, that had so long shed its blasting influence in my zenith, for once made a revolution to the Nadir; and a kind Providence placed me under the patronage of one of the noblest of men, the Earl of Glencairn. Oublie moi, Grand Dieu, si jamais je l’oublie!

"I need relate no farther. At Edinburgh I was in a new world; I mingled among many classes of men, but all of them new to me, and I was all attention to catch the characters and ‘the manners living as they rise.’ Whether I have profited, time will show."

Burns set out for Edinburgh in the month of November, 1786, and arrived on the second day afterwards, having performed his journey on foot. He was furnished with a letter of introduction to Dr. Blacklock from Mr. Laurie, to whom the Doctor had addressed the letter which has been represented as the immediate cause of his visiting the Scottish metropolis. He was acquainted with Mr. Stewart, Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University, and had been entertained by that gentleman at Catrine, his estate in Ayrshire. He had been introduced by Mr. Alexander Dalzel to the Earl of Glencairn, who had expressed his high approbation of his poetical talents. He had friends, therefore, who could introduce him into the circles of literature, as well as of fashion, and his own manners and appearance exceeding every expectation that could have been formed of them, he soon became an object of general curiosity and admiration.

The scene that opened on our bard in Edinburgh was altogether new, and in a variety of other respects highly interesting, especially to one of his disposition of mind. To use an expression of his own he found himself "suddenly translated from the veriest shades of life," into the presence, and indeed into the society, of a number of persons, previously known to him by report as of the highest distinction in his country, and whose characters it was natural for him to examine with no common curiosity.

From the men of letters in general, his reception was particularly flattering.

A taste for letters is not always conjoined with habits of temperance and regularity; and Edinburgh, at the time of which we speak, contained perhaps an uncommon proportion of men of considerable talents, devoted to social excesses, in which their talents were wasted and debased.

Burns entered into several parties of this description, with the usual vehemence of his character. His generous affections, his ardent eloquence, his brilliant and daring imagination, fitted him to be the idol of such associations; and accustoming himself to conversation of unlimited range, and to festive indulgences that scorned restraint, he gradually lost some portion of his relish for the more pure, but less poignant pleasures, to be found in the circles of taste, elegance and literature. The sudden alteration in his habits of life operated on him physically as well as morally. The humble fare of an Ayrshire peasant he had exchanged for the luxuries of the Scottish metropolis, and the effects of this change on his ardent constitution could not be inconsiderable. But whatever influence might be produced on his conduct, his excellent understanding suffered no corresponding debasement. He estimated his friends and associates of every description at their proper value, and appreciated his own conduct with a precision that might give scope to much curious and melancholy reflection. He saw his danger, and at times formed resolutions to guard against it; but he had embarked on the tide of dissipation, and was borne along its stream.

By the new edition of his poems, Burns acquired a sum of money that enabled him not only to partake of the pleasures of Edinburgh, but to gratify a desire he had long entertained, of visiting those parts of his native country most attractive by their beauty or their grandeur; a desire which the return of summer naturally revived. The scenery of the banks of the Tweed, and of its tributary streams, strongly interested his fancy; and, accordingly, he left Edinburgh on the 6th of May, 1787, on a tour through a country so much celebrated in the rural songs of Scotland. He travelled on horseback, and was accompanied, during some part of his journey, by Mr. Ainslie, writer to the signet, a gentleman who enjoyed much of his friendship and his confidence.

Having spent three weeks in exploring the interesting scenery of the Tweed, the Jed, the Teviot, and other border districts, Burns crossed over into Northumberland. Mr. Kerr and Mr. Hood, two gentlemen with whom he had become acquainted in the course of his tour, accompanied him. He visited Alnwick Castle, the princely seat of the Duke of Northumberland; the hermitage and old castle of Warksworth; Morpeth, and Newcastle. In this town he spent two days, and then proceeded to the southwest by Hexham and Wardrue, to Carlisle. After spending a day at Carlisle with his friend Mr. Mitchell, he returned into Scotland by way of Annan.

Of the various persons with whom he became acquainted in the course of this journey, he has, in general, given some account, and almost always a favourable one. From Annan, Burns proceeded to Dumfries, and thence through Sanquhar, to Mossgiel, near Mauchline, in Ayrshire, where he arrived about the 8th of June, 1787, after a long absence of six busy and eventful months. It will easily be conceived with what pleasure and pride he was received by his mother, his brothers and sisters. He had left them poor, and comparatively friendless; he returned to them high in public estimation, and easy in his circumstances. He returned to them unchanged in his ardent affections, and ready to share with them, to the uttermost farthing, the pittance that fortune had bestowed.

Having remained with them a few days, he proceeded again to Edinburgh, and immediately set out on a journey to the Highlands.
From this journey Burns returned to his friends in Ayrshire, with whom he spent the month of July, renewing his friendships, and extending his acquaintance throughout the county, where he was now very generally known and admired. In August he again visited Edinburgh, whence he undertook another journey, towards the middle of this month, in company with Mr. M. Adair, afterwards Dr. Adair, of Harrowgate.

The different journeys already mentioned did not satisfy the curiosity of Burns. About the beginning of September he again set out from Edinburgh, on a more extended tour to the Highlands, in company with Mr. Nicol, with whom he had contracted a particular intimacy, which lasted during the remainder of his life. Mr. Nicol was of Dumfriesshire, of a descent equally humble with our poet. Like him he rose by the strength of his talents, and fell by the strength of his passions. He died in the summer of 1797. Having received the elements of a classical instruction at his parish school, Mr. Nicol made a very rapid and singular proficiency; and by early undertaking the office of an instructor himself, he acquired the means of entering himself at the University of Edinburgh. There he was first a student of theology, then a student of medicine, and was afterwards employed in the assistance and instruction of graduates in medicine, in those parts of their exercises in which the Latin language is employed. In this situation he was the contemporary and rival of the celebrated Dr. Brown, whom he resembled in the particulars of his history, as well as in the leading features of his character. The office of assistant-teacher in the High-School being vacant, it was as usual filled up by competition; and in the face of some prejudices, and perhaps of some well-founded objections, Mr. Nicol, by superior learning, carried it from all the other candidates. This office he filled at the period of which we speak.

Mr. Nicol and our poet travelled in a post-chaise, which they engaged for the journey, and passing through the heart of the Highlands, stretched northwards about ten miles beyond Inverness. There they bent their course eastward, across the island, and returned by the shore of the German Sea to Edinburgh. In the course of this tour, they visited a number of remarkable scenes, and the imagination of Burns was constantly excited by the wild and sublime scenery through which he passed.

A few days after leaving Blair of Athole, our poet and his fellow-traveller arrived at Fochabers. In the course of the preceding winter Burns had been introduced to the Duchess of Gordon at Edinburgh, and presuming on this acquaintance, he proceeded to Gordon Castle, leaving Mr. Nicol at the inn in the village. At the castle our poet was received with the utmost hospitality and kindness, and the family being about to sit down to dinner, he was invited to take his place at the table, as a matter of course. This invitation he accepted, and after drinking a few glasses of wine, he rose up, and proposed to withdraw. On being pressed to stay, he mentioned, for the first time, his engagement with his fellow-traveller; and his noble host offering to send a servant to conduct Mr. Nicol to the castle, Burns insisted on undertaking that office himself. He was, however, accompanied by a gentleman, a particular acquaintance of the Duke, by whom the invitation was delivered in all the forms of politeness. The invitation, however, came too late; the pride of Nicol was inflamed to the highest degree by the neglect which he had already suffered. He had ordered the horses to be put to the carriage, being determined to proceed on his journey alone; and they found him parading the streets of Fochabers, before the door of the inn, venting his anger on the postillion, for the slowness with which he obeyed his commands. As no explanation nor entreaty could change the purpose of his fellow-traveller, our poet was reduced to the necessity of separating from him entirely, or of instantly proceeding with him on their journey. He chose the last of these alternatives; and seating himself beside Nicol in the post-chaise, with mortification and regret he turned his back on Gordon Castle; where he had promised himself some happy days.

Burns remained at Edinburgh during the greater part of the winter, 1787-8, and again entered into the society and dissipation of that metropolis.

On settling with his publisher, Mr. Creech, in February, 1788, Burns found himself master of nearly five hundred pounds, after discharging all his expenses. Two hundred pounds he immediately advanced to his brother Gilbert, who had taken upon himself the support of their aged mother, and was struggling with many difficulties in the farm of Mossgiel. With the remainder of this sum, and some farther eventual profits from his poems, he determined on settling himself for life in the occupation of agriculture, and took from Mr. Miller, of Dalswinton, the farm of Ellisland, on the banks of the river Nith, six miles above Dumfries, on which he entered at Whitsunday, 1788. Having been previously recommended to the Board of Excise, his name had been put on the list of candidates for the humble office of a gauger, or exciseman; and he immediately applied to acquiring the information necessary for filling that office, when the honourable Board might judge it proper to employ him. He expected to be called into service in the district in which his farm was situated, and vainly hoped to unite with success the labours of the farmer with the duties of the exciseman.

When Burns had in this manner arranged his plans for futurity, his generous heart turned to the object of his most ardent attachment, and listening to no considerations but those of honour and affection, he joined with her in a public declaration of marriage, thus legalising their union, and rendering it permanent for life.

It was not convenient for Mrs. Burns to remove immediately from Ayrshire, and our poet therefore took up his residence alone at Ellisland, to prepare for the reception of his wife and children, who joined him towards the end of the year.

The situation in which Burns now found himself was calculated to awaken reflection. The different steps he had of late taken were in their nature highly important, and might be said to have, in some measure, fixed his destiny. He had become a husband and a father; he had engaged in the management of a considerable farm, a difficult and labourious undertaking; in his success the happiness of his family was involved; it was time, therefore, to abandon the gayety and dissipation of which he had been too much enamoured; to ponder seriously on the past, and to form virtuous resolutions respecting the future.

He commenced by immediately rebuilding the dwelling house on his farm, which, in the state he found it, was inadequate to the accommodation of his family. On this occasion, he himself resumed at times the occupation of a labourer, and found neither his strength nor his skill impaired. Pleased with surveying the grounds he was about to cultivate, and with the rearing of a building that should give shelter to his wife and children, and, as he fondly hoped, to his own gray hairs, sentiments of independence buoyed up his mind, pictures of domestic content and peace rose on his imagination; and a few days passed away, as he himself informs us, the most tranquil, if not the happiest, which he had ever experienced.

His fame naturally drew upon him the attention of his neighbours, and he soon formed a general acquaintance in the district in which he lived. The public voice had now pronounced on the subject of his talents; the reception he had met with in Edinburgh had given him the currency which fashion bestows; he had surmounted the prejudices arising from his humble birth, and he was received at the table of the gentlemen of Nithsdale with welcome, with kindness, and even with respect. Their social parties too often seduced him from his rustic labours, and it was not long, therefore, before, Burns began to view his farm with dislike and despondence, if not with disgust.
He might indeed still be seen in the spring directing his plough, a labour in which he excelled; or with a white sheet containing his seed-corn, slung across his shoulders, striding with measured steps along his turned-up furrows, and scattering the grain in the earth. But his farm no longer occupied the principal part of his care or his thoughts. It was not at Ellisland that he was now in general to be found. Mounted on horseback, this high-minded poet was pursuing the defaulters of the revenue among the hills and vales of Nithsdale, his roving eye wandering over the charms of nature, and Muttering his wayward fancies as he moved along.

Besides his duties in the Excise and his social pleasures, other circumstances interfered with the attention of Burns to his farm. He engaged in the formation of a society for purchasing and circulating books among the farmers of his neighbourhood, of which he undertook the management; and he occupied himself occasionally in composing songs for the musical work of Mr. Johnson, then in the course of publication. These engagements, useful and honourable in themselves, contributed, no doubt, to the abstraction of his thoughts from the business of agriculture.

The consequences may be easily imagined. Notwithstanding the uniform prudence and good management of Mrs. Burns, and though his rent was moderate and reasonable, our poet found it convenient, if not necessary, to resign his farm to Mr. Miller, after having occupied it three years and a half. His office in the Excise had originally produced about fifty pounds per annum. Having acquitted himself to the satisfaction of the Board, he had been appointed to a new district, the emoluments of which rose to about seventy pounds per annum. Hoping to support himself and his family on his humble income till promotion should reach him, he disposed of his stock and of his crop on Ellisland by public auction, and removed to a small house which he had taken in Dumfries, about the end of the year 1791.

Hitherto Burns, though addicted to excess in social parties, had abstained from the habitual use of strong liquors, and his constitution had not suffered any permanent injury from the irregularities of his conduct. In Dumfries, temptations to "the sin that so easily beset him" continually presented themselves; and his irregularities grew by degrees into habits. These temptations unhappily occurred during his engagements in the business of his office, as well as during his hours of relaxation; and though he clearly foresaw the consequence of yielding to them, his appetites and sensations, which could not pervert the dictates of his judgment, finally triumphed over the powers of his will.

Still, however, he cultivated the society of persons of taste and respectability, and in their company could impose upon himself the restraints of temperance and decorum. Nor was his muse dormant. In the four years which he lived at Dumfries, he produced many of his beautiful lyrics, though it does not appear that he attempted any poem of considerable length.

Burns had entertained hopes of promotion in the Excise; but circumstances occurred which retarded their fulfilment, and which, in his own mind, destroyed all expectation of their being ever fulfilled.

In the midst of all his wanderings, Burns met nothing in his domestic circle but gentleness and forgiveness, except in the gnawings of his own remorse. He acknowledged his transgressions to the wife of his bosom, promised amendment, and again received pardon for his offences. But as the strength of his body decayed, his resolution became feeble, and habit acquired dominating strength.

From October, 1795, to the January following, an accidental complaint confined him to the house. A few days after he began to go abroad, he dined at a tavern, and returned about three o'clock in a very cold morning, benumbed and intoxicated. This was followed by an attack of rheumatism, which confined him about a week. His appetite now began to fail; his hand shook, and his voice faltered on any exertion or emotion. His pulse became weaker and more rapid, and pain in the larger joints, and in the hands and feet, deprived him of the enjoyment of refreshing sleep. Too much dejected in his spirits, and too well aware of his real situation to entertain hopes of recovery, he was ever musing on the approaching desolation of his family, and his spirits sunk into a uniform gloom. It was hoped by some of his friends, that if he could live through the months of spring, the succeeding season might restore him. But they were disappointed. The genial beams of the sun infused no vigour into his languid frame; the summer wind blew upon him, but produced no refreshment. About the latter end of June he was advised to go into the country, and, impatient of medical advice, as well as every species of control, he determined for himself to try the effects of bathing in the sea. For this purpose he took up his residence at Brow, in Annandale, about ten miles east of Dumfries, on the shore of the Solway-Firth.

At first, Burns imagined bathing in the sea had been of benefit to him; the pains in his limbs were relieved; but this was immediately followed by a new attack of fever. When brought back to his own house in Dumfries, on the 18th July, he was no longer able to stand upright. At this time a tremor pervaded his frame; his tongue was parched, and his mind sunk into delirium, when roused by conversation. On the second and third day the fever increased, and his strength diminished. On the fourth, the sufferings of this great but ill-fated genius were terminated, and a life was closed in which virtue and passion had been at perpetual variance.

The death of Burns made a strong and general impression on all who had interested themselves in his character, and especially on the inhabitants of the town and country in which he had spent the latter years of his life. The Gentlemen-Volunteers of Dumfries determined to bury their illustrious associate with military honours, and every preparation was made to render this last service solemn and impressive. The Fencible Infantry of Angusshire, and the regiment of cavalry of the Cinque Ports, at that time quartered in Dumfries, offered their assistance on this occasion; the principal inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood determined to walk in the funeral procession; and a vast concourse of persons assembled, some of them from a considerable distance, to witness the obsequies of the Scottish Bard. On the evening of the 25th of July, the remains of Burns were removed from his house to the Town Hall, and the funeral took place on the succeeding day. A party of the Volunteers, selected to perform the military duty in the churchyard stationed themselves in the front of the procession with their arms reversed; the main body of the corps surrounded and supported the coffin, on which were placed the hat and sword of their friend and fellow-soldier; the numerous body of attendants ranged themselves in the rear; while the Fencible regiments of infantry and cavalry lined the streets from the Town Hall to the burial-ground in the Southern churchyard, a distance of more than half a mile. The whole procession moved forward to that sublime and affecting strain of music, the Dead March in Saul; and three volleys fired over his grave marked the return of Burns to his parent earth! The spectacle was in a high degree grand and solemn, and according with the general sentiments of sympathy and sorrow which the occasion had called forth.

It was an affecting circumstance, that, on the morning of the day of her husband’s funeral, Mrs. Burns was undergoing the pains of labour, and that during the solemn service we have just been describing, the posthumous son of our poet was born. This infant boy, who received the name of Maxwell, was not destined to a long life. He has already become an inhabitant of the same grave with his celebrated father.

The sense of his poverty, and of the approaching distress of his infant family, pressed heavily on Burns as he lay on the bed of death. Yet he alluded to his indigence, at times, with something approaching to his wonted gayety. — "What business," said he to Dr. Maxwell, who attended him with the utmost zeal, "has a physician to waste his time on me? I am a poor pigeon not worth plucking. Alas! I have not feather enough upon me to carry me to my grave." And when his reason was lost in delirium, his ideas ran in the same melancholy train; the horrors of a jail were continually present to his troubled imagination, and produced the most affecting exclamations.

On the death of Burns, the inhabitants of Dumfries and its neighbourhood opened a subscription for the support of his wife and family. The subscription was extended to other parts of Scotland, and of England also, particularly London and Liverpool. By this means a sum was raised amounting to seven hundred pounds, and thus the widow and children were rescued from immediate distress, and the most melancholy of the forebodings of Burns happily disappointed.

Burns, as has already been mentioned, was nearly five feet ten inches in height, and a form that indicated agility as well as strength. His well-raised forehead, shaded with black curling hair, indicated extensive capacity. His eyes were large, dark, full of ardour and intelligence. His face was well formed; and his countenance uncommonly interesting and expressive. The tones of his voice happily corresponded with the expression of his features, and with the feelings of his mind. When to these endowments are added a rapid and distinct apprehension, a most powerful understanding, and a happy command of language—of strength as well as brilliancy of expression—we shall be able to account for the extraordinary attractions of his conversation—for the sorcery which, in his social parties, he seemed to exert on all around him. In the company of women this sorcery was more especially apparent. Their presence charmed the fiend of melancholy in his bosom, and awoke his happiest feelings; it excited the powers of his fancy, as well as the tenderness of his heart; and, by restraining the vehemence and the exuberance of his language, at times gave to his manners the impression of taste, and even of elegance, which in the company of men they seldom possessed. This influence was doubtless reciprocal.

TRAGIC FRAGMENT.

The following lines are thus introduced by Burns in one of his manuscripts, printed in "Cromek's Reliques:"—"In my early years nothing less would serve me than courting the tragic muse. I was, I think, about eighteen or nineteen when I sketched the outlines of a tragedy, forsooth; but the bursting of a cloud of family misfortunes, which had for some time threatened us, prevented my further progress. In those days I never wrote down anything; so, except a speech or two, the whole has escaped my memory. The above, which I most distinctly remember, was an exclamation from a great character—great in occasional instances of generosity, and daring at times in villainies. He is supposed to meet with a child of misery, and exclaims to himself, as in the words of the fragment:—

Oh, but for kind, though ill-requir'd, friends,
I had been driven forth like you for.
The most detested, worthless wretch among you!
O injured God! Thy goodness has endow'd me [peers,]
With talents passing most of my com.
Which I in just proportion have abused.
As far surpassing other common villains,
As Thou in natural parts hadst given me more.

THE TORBOLTON LASSES.

The two following poems, written at different times, give a list of the eligible damsels in the poet's neighborhood:—

If ye gae up to yon hill-tap,
Ye'll there see bonny Peggy;
She kens her faither is a laird.
And she forsooth's a leddy.

There Sophy tight, a lassie bright,
Besides a handsome fortune:
Wha canna win her in a night,
Has little art in courting.

Gae down by Faile, and taste the ale,
And tak a look o' Mysie;
She's dour 1 and din, a deil within,
But aiblins 2 she may please ye.

1 Obstinate. 2 Perhaps.
If she be shy, her sister try,
    Y'ell maybe fancy Jenny,
If ye'll dispense wi' want o' sense—
    She kens hersel' she's bonny.

As ye gae up by yon hills'ide,
    Speer1 in for bonny Bessy;
She'll gie ye a beek,2 and bid ye licht,
    And handsomely address ye.

There's few sae bonnie, none sae guid;
In a' King George's Dominion;
If ye should doubt the truth o' this—
    'Tis Bessy's ain opinion.

In Torbolton, ye ken, there are proper young men,
And proper young lassies and a', man;
But ken ye the Ronalds that live in the Bennals,
They carry the gree3 frae them a',
Their father's a laird, and weel he can spare 't,
Braid money to tocher4 them a',
To proper young men, he'll clink in the hand
Gow d guineas a hunder or twa, man.

There's ane they ca' Jean, I'll warrant ye've seen
As bonny a lass or as braw, man;
But for sense and guid taste she'll vie wi' the best,
And a conduct that beautifies a',
The charms o' the min', they langer
    they shine,
The mair admiration they draw,
While peaches and cherries, and roses and lillies,
They fade and they wither awa, man.

If ye be for Miss Jean, tak this frae a frien',
A hint o' a rival or twa, man,
The Laird o' Blackbyre wad gang through the fire,
If that wad entice her awa, man.

The Laird o' Breachhead has been on his speed,
For mair than a towmond5 or twa,
The Laird o' the Ford will straighten on a board.6
If he canna get her at a', man.

Then Anna comes in, the pride o' her kin,
The boast of our bachelors a', man;
Sae sonsy7 and sweet, sae fully complete,
She steals our affections awa, man.

If I should detail the pick and the wale8
O' lasses, that live here awa, man,
The fault wad be mine, if they didna shine,
    [man.
The sweetest and best o' them a',

Yet I wadna choose to let her refuse,
    Nor hae't in her power to say na,
    [man.
For though I be poor, unnoticed, ob-
    My stomach's as proud as them a',
    man.

Though I canna ride in weel booted pride,
    man,
And flee o'er the hills like a craw,
I can haul up my head with the best o'
    the breed,
Though fluttering ever so braw, man.

My coat and my vest, they are Scotch o' the best,
    man,
O' pairs o' guid breeks I hae twa,
And stockings and pumps to put on my stumps,
    man.
And ne'er a wrang steek in them a',

My sarks9 they are few, but five o' them new,
    man,
Twal' hundred,10 as white as the snaw,
A ten-shilling hat, a Holland cravat:
There are no mony poets sae braw,
    man.

I never had frien's weel stockit in means,
To leave me a hundred or twa, man;
Nae weel-tocher'd aunts, to wait on:
    their drants,11
And wish them in hell for it a', man.

\textit{A DIRGE.}

\textit{Winter: a Dirge,}\textsuperscript{17} was copied into Bums's Commonplace Book in April, 1784, and prefaced with the following reflections:— "As I am what the men of the world, if they knew such a man, would call a whimsical mortal, I have various sources of pleasure and enjoyment, which are in a manner peculiar to myself, or some here and there such out-of-the-way person. Such is the peculiar pleasure I take in the season of Winter more than the rest of the year. This, I believe, may be partly owing to my misfortunes giving my mind a melancholy cast: but there is something even in the 'Mighty tempest, and the heavy waste,

Arupt, and deep, stretch'd o'er the buried earth,' which raises the mind to a serious sublimity favorable to everything great and noble. There is scarcely any earthly object gives me more— I do not know if I should call it pleasure— but something which exalts me— something which enraptures me— than to walk in the sheltered side of a wood, or high plantation, in a cloudy winter-day, and hear the stormy wind howling among the trees and raving over the plain. It is my best season for devotion: my mind is wrapt up in a kind of enthusiasm to Him, who, in the pompous language of the Hebrew bard, 'walks on the wings of the wind.' In one of these seasons, just after a train of misfortunes, I composed the following:—

\textbf{THE WINTRY WEST EXTENDS HIS BLAST,}

And hail and rain does blow; [forth
Or, the stormy north sends driving
The blinding sleet and snow: [down
While tumbling brown, the burn comes
And roars frae bank to brae;
And bird and beast in covert rest,
And pass the heartless day.

"The sweeping blast, the sky o'er-cast,"*
The joyless winter-day,
Let others fear, to me more dear
Than all the pride of May:

\textsuperscript{12} Careful. \textsuperscript{13} Gathering greedily. \textsuperscript{14} Owe. \textsuperscript{*} Dr. Young.

The tempest's howl, it soothes my soul.
My griefs it seems to join;
The leafless trees my fancy please,
Their fate resembles mine!

Thou Power Supreme, whose mighty scheme
Those woes of mine fulfil,
Here, firm, I rest, they must be best,
Because they are Thy will!
Then all I want (oh, do Thou grant
This one request of mine!)
Since to enjoy Thou dost deny,
Assist me to resign.

\textbf{A PRAYER,}

\textbf{UNDER THE PRESSURE OF VIOLENT ANGUISH.}

In the Commonplace Book already alluded to the following melancholy note accompanies this Poem:— "There was a certain period of my life that my spirit was broken by repeated losses and disasters, which threatened, and indeed effected, the utter ruin of my fortune. My body, too, was attacked by that most dreadful distemper, a hypochondria, or confirmed melancholy. In this wretched state, the recollection of which makes me yet shudder, I hung my harp on the willow trees, except in some lucid intervals, in one of which I composed this Prayer:—"

O Thou great Being! what Thou art
Surpasses me to know:
Yet sure I am, that known to Thee
Are all Thy works below.
Thy creature here before Thee stands,
All wretched and distrest;
Yet sure those ills that wring my soul
Obey thy high behest.

Sure Thou, Almighty, canst not act
From cruelty or wrath!
Oh, free my weary eyes from tears,
Or close them fast in death!
But if I must afflicted be,
To suit some wise design;
Then man my soul with firm resolves,
To bear and not repine!

\textbf{THE DEATH AND DYING WORDS OF POOR MAILIE.}

\textbf{THE AUTHOR'S ONLY PET YOWE.}

\textit{(An Uneo Mournfu' Tale.)}

As Mailie and her lambs thegither
Was ae day nibbling on the ither,
Upon her clout she coost a hitch,
And owre she warsled in the ditch;
There, groaning, dying, she did lie,
When Hughoc he cam doy tin by,
Wi' glowering een, and lifted han's,
Poor Hughoc like a statue stan's; [ed,
He saw her days were near-hand end-
But, wae's my heart! he couldna mend it!
He gaped wide, but naething spak—
At length poor Mailie silence brak:

"O thou, whose lamentable face
Appears to mourn my woeful case!
My dying words attentive hear,
And bear them to my master dear.
Tell him, if e'er again he keep
As muckle gear as buy a sheep,
Oh, bid him never tie them mair
Wi' wicked strings o' hemp or hair!
But ca' them out to park or hill,
And let them wander at their will;
So may his flock increase, and grow
To scores o' lambs, and packs o' woo!"

"Tell him he was a master kin',
And aye was guid to me and mine;
And now my dying charge I gie him—
My helpless lambs I trust them wi' him.

"Oh, bid him save their harmless lives [knives!
Frae dogs, and tods, and butchers'
But gie them guid cow-milk their fill,
Till they be fit to fend themsel;
And tent them duly, e'en and morn
Wi' teats o' hay, and rripps o' corn,
And may they never learn the gaet's
Of ither vile, wanstrefu' pets! [steal
To skink through slaps, and reave and
At stacks o' peas or stocks o' kail,
So may they, like their great forbears,
For mony a year come through the shears;
So wives will gie them bits o' bread,
And bairns greet for them when they're dead. [heir,

"My poor toop-lamb, my son and
Oh, bid him breed him up wi' care!
And if he live to be a beast,
To pit some havis in his breast!
And warn him, what I winna name,
To stay content wi' yowes at hame;
And no to rin and wear his clouts,
Like ither menseless, graceless brutes.
"And neist my yowie, silly thing,
 Guild keep the fraw a tether string!
Oh, may thou ne'er forgather up
Wi' ony blastit, morland toop,
But aye keep mind to moop and mell,
Wi' sheep o' credit like thyself!

"And now, my bairns, wi' my last breath
I lea' my blessin' wi' you baith:
And when you think upo' your mither,
Mind to be kin' to ane anither.

"Now, honest Hughoc, dinna fail
To tell my master a' my tale;
And bid him burn this cursed tether,
And, for thy pains, thos' get my blisher.""

This said, poor Mailie turned her head,
And closed her een amang the dead.

A PRAYER

IN THE PROSPECT OF DEATH.

"This 'Prayer' and the 'Stanzas,' which follow," the poet wrote in his Commonpla-ke Book, "were composed when fainting fits, and other alarming symptoms of pleurisy or some other dangerous disorder, which indeed still threatens me, first put natura on the alarm. The stanzas are misgivings in the hour of despondency and prospect of death. The grand end of human life is to cultivate an intercourse with that Being whom we owe life with every enjoyment:
that renders life delightful."

O Thou unknown, Almighty Cause
Of all my hope and fear,
In whose dread presence, ere an hour,
Perhaps I must appear!
If I have wander'd in those paths
Of life I ought to shun;
As something, loudly, in my breast,
Remonstrates I have done;
Thou know'st that thou hast form'd me
With passions wild and strong;
And listening to their witching voice
Has often led me wrong.
Where human weakness has come short,
Or frailty stept r'side,
Do Thou, All-good! for such Thou art,
In shades of darkness hide.
Where with intention I have err'd,
No other plea I have,
But, Thou art good; and goodness still Delighteth to forgive.

STANZAS.

ON THE SAME OCCASION.

Why am I loth to leave this earthy scene? [charms
Have I so found it full of pleasing
Some drops of joy with draughts of ill between;
[newing storms
Some gleams of sunshine 'mid re
Is it departing pangs my soul alarms?
Or death's unlovely, dreary, dark abode?
[arms;]
For guilt, for guilt, my terrors are in
I tremble to approach an angry God,
And justly smart beneath His sinavenging rod.

Fain would I say, "Forgive my foul offence!"
Fain promise never more to disobey;
But should my Author health again dispense,
Again I might desert fair Virtue's way;
Again in folly's path might go astray;
Again exalt the brute and sink the man;
[pray,]
Then how should I for heavenly mercy
Who act so counter heavenly mer-cy's plan?
Who sin so oft have mourn'd, yet to temptation ran.

O Thou great Governor of all below!
If I may dare a lifted eye to Thee,
Thy nod can make the tempest cease to blow,
Or still the tumult of the raging sea;
With that controlling power assist even me,

THE FIRST PSALM.
The man, in life wherever placed,
Hath happiness in store,
Who walks not in the wicked's way,
Nor learns their guilty lore.

Nor from the seat of scornful pride
Casts forth his eyes abroad,
But with humility and awe
Still walks before his God.

That man shall flourish like the trees,
Which by the streamlets grow;
The fruitful top is spread on high,
And firm the root below,

But he whose blossom buds in guilt,
Shall to the ground be cast,
And, like the rootless stubble, tost
Before the sweeping blast.

For why? that God the good adore,
Hath given them peace and rest,
But hath decreed that wicked men
Shall ne'er be truly blest.

THE FIRST SIX VERSES OF THE NINETIETH PSALM.
O Thou, the first, the greatest friend
Of all the human race!
Whose strong right hand has ever been
Their stay and dwelling-place!

Before the mountains heaved their heads
Beneath Thy forming hand,
Before this ponderous globe itself,
Arose at Thy command;

That power which raised and still up holds
This universal frame,
From countless unbeginning time
Was ever still the same.

Those mighty periods of years
Which seem to us so vast,
Appear no more before Thy sight
Than yesterday that's past.

Thou givest the word; Thy creature,
man,
Is to existence brought,
Again Thou say'st, "Ye sons of men Return ye into nought!"

Thou layest them with all their cares,
In everlasting sleep;
As with a flood Thou takest them off
With overwhelming sweep.

They flourish like the morning flower,
In beauty's pride array'd;
But long ere night cut down, it lies
All wither'd and decay'd.

ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF ROB
ERT RUISSEAUX.
This fragment was found by Cromek among the poet's manuscripts. Ruisseaux—a translation of his own name—is French for rivulets.

Now Robin lies in his last hair,
He'll gabble rhyme nor sing nae mair,
Cauld poverty, wi' hungry stare,
Nae mair shall fear him;

Nor anxious fear, nor cankert care,
E'er mair come near him,
Robert was at a mason-meeting in Torbolton, when the dominie made too ostentatious a display of his medical skill. As he parted in the evening from this mixture of pedantry and physic at the place where he describes his meeting with Death, one of those floating ideas of apparitions mentioned in his letter to Dr. Moore crossed his mind; this set him to work for the rest of his way home. These circumstances he related when he repeated the verses to me the next afternoon, as I was holding the plough, and he was letting the water off the field beside me."

The mirth and amusement occasioned by the publication of the poem drove the schoolmaster out of the district, and he became session-clerk of the Gorbals parish, Glasgow, and died there in 1839.

Some books are lies frae end to end
And some great lies were never penn'd:
E'en ministers, they hae been kenn'd,
In holy rapture,
A rousing whild at times to vend,
And nail't wi' Scripture
But this that I am gaun to tell,
Which lately on a night befell,
Is just as true's the deil's in hell
Or Dublin city:
That e'er he nearer comes oursel
'S a muckle pity.

The clachan yill had made me canty,
I wasna fou, but just had plenty; [aye
I stacher'd whiles, but yet took tent
To free the ditches; [aye
And hillocks, stanes and bushes kenn'd
Frae ghaists and witches.

The rising moon began to glower
The distant Cumnock hills out-owre;
To count her horns, wi' a' my power,
I set mysel;
But whether she had three or four,
I couldna tell.

I was come round about the hill,
And todlin' down on Willie's mill,
Setting my staff wi' a' my skill,
To keep me sicker;

Though leeward whiles, against my
I took a bicker.

I there wi' something did forgather,
That put me in an eerie swither; 10

1 Lie.  2 Going.  3 Village ale.  4 Staggered.
5 Sometimes.  6 Stare.  7 Tottering.  8 Steady.

For rakish rooks like Rob Mossgiel.
Your fine Tom Jones and Grandisons, They make your youthful fancies reel;
They heat your veins, and fire your giel.
And then ye're prey for Rob Mossgiel.
Beware a tongue that's smoothly hung,
A heart that warmly seems to feel;
That feeling heart but acts a part—
'Tis rakish art in Rob Mossgiel.
The frank address, the soft caress,
Are worse than poison'd hearts of steel;
The frank address and politesse Are all finesse in Rob Mossgiel.

DEATH AND DR. HORNBOOK.

A TRUE STORY.

"Death and Dr. Hornbook," says Gilbert Burns, "though not published in the Kilmarnock edition, was produced early in the year 1785. The schoolmaster of Torbolton parish, to eke out the scanty subsistence allowed to that useful class of men, set up a shop of grocery goods. Having accidentally fallen in with some medical books, and become most hobby-horically attached to the study of medicine, he had added the sale of a few medicines to his little trade. He had got a shop-bill printed, at the bottom of which, overlooking his own incapacity, he had advertised that advice would be given in common disorders, at the shop gratis."

* Rob Mossgiel—Robert Burns of Mossgiel.
An awful scythe, out-owre ae shouter,
Clear-dangling, hang;
A three-taed liestern on the ither
Lay large and lang.

Its stature seem’d lang Scotch ells twa,
The queerest shape that e’er I saw,
For fient a wame it had ava;
And then its shanks,
They were as thin, as sharp and sma’,
As checks o’ branks.*

"Guid-een," quo’ I; "friend, hae ye been maw-in’,
When ither folk are busy sawin’?"†
It seemed to mak a kind o’ stan’,
but naething spak;
At length, says I, "Friend, where ye gaun?
Will ye go back?"

It spak right Howe,—"My name is Death;

THE TWA HERDS; OR, THE HOLY TULZIE.

The Twa Herds were the Rev. John Russell assistant minister of Kilmarnock, and after wards minister at Stirling, and the Rev. Alexander Moodie, parish minister at Riccarton, two zealous "Auld-Licht" men, members of the clerical party to whom Burns was opposed on all occasions. They had quarrelled over some question of parish boundaries; and in the presbytery, where the question had come up for settlement, they fell foul of each other after the manner of the wicked and ungodly. Mr. Lockhart says:—"There, in the open court, to which the announcement of the discussion had drawn a multitude of the country-people, and Burns among the rest, the reverend divines, hitherto sworn friends and associates, lost all command of temper, and abused each other coram populo, with a fiery virulence of personal invective such as has long been banished from all popular assemblies wherein the laws of courtesy are enforced by those of a certain unwritten code." Burns seized the opportunity, and in "The Twa Herds" gave his version of the affair. It is only justice to the poet to mention, that he did not include this poem in any of the editions of his works published during his lifetime.

"Blockheads with reason wicked wits abhor; But fool with fool is barbarous civil war." — Pope.

Oh, a' ye pious godly flocks, Weel fed on pastures orthodox, Wha now will keep you frae the fox, Or worrying tykes,¹
Or wha will tent the waifs and crooks,² About the dikes?
The twa best herds in a' the wast, That e'er gae gospel horn a blast, These five and twenty simmers past, Oh! dool to tell, Hae had a bitter black outcast³ Atween themsel.

O Moodie man, and wordy Russell, How could you raise so vile a bustle, Ye'll see how New-Light herds will whistle, And think it fine:
The Lord's cause ne'er gat sic a twistle Sin' I hae min'.

O sirs! wha'c'er wad hae expeckit, Your duty ye wad sae negleekit, Ye wha were ne'er by lairds respeckit, To wear the plaid, But by the brutes themselves eleckit, To be their guide.

HOLY WILLIE'S PRAYER.

The origin of this terrible satire may be briefly told as follows:—Gavin Hamilton, the special friend of the poet, had been denied the benefit of the ordinances of the church, because he was alleged to have made a journey on the Sabbath, and to have made one of his servants take in some potatoes from the garden on another Sunday—hence the allusion to his "kail and potatoes" in the poem. William Fisher, one of Mr. Auld's elders, made himself somewhat conspicuous in the case. He was a great pretender to sanctity, and a punctilious stickler for outward observances. Poor man, he unfortunately merited the satire of the poet, as he was a drunkard, and latterly made too free with the church-money in his hands.
Returning drunk from Mauchline one night,
he fell into a ditch and died from exposure.

O THOU, wha in the heavens dost dwell,
Wha, as it pleases best thyself,
Sends ane to heaven, and ten to hell,
A' for thy glory,
And no for any guid or ill
They've done afore thee!

I bless and praise thy matchless might,
When thousands thou hast left in night,
That I am here, afore thy sight,
For gifts and grace,
A burnin' and a shinin' light
To a' this place.

What was I, or my generation,
That I should get sic exaltation?
I, wha deserve sic just damnation
For broken laws,
Five thousand years 'fore my creation,
Through Adam's cause.

When frae my mother's womb I fell,
Thou might hae plunged me into hell,
To gnash my gums, to weep and wail,
In burnm' lake,
Whare damned devils roar and yell,
Chain'd to a stake.

Yet I am here a chosen sample,
To show thy grace is great and ample;
I'm here a pillar in thy temple,
Strong as a rock,
A guide, a buckler, an example,
To a' thy flock.

O Lord, thou kens what zeal I bear,
When drinkers drink, and swearers swear,
And singing there, and dancing here,
Wi' great and sma';
For I am keepit by thy fear,
Free frae them a'.

But yet, O Lord! confess I must,
At times I'm fash'd wi' fleshy lust;
And sometimes, too, wi' wardly trust,
Vile self gets in,

And when we chasten'd him therefore,
Thou kens how he bred sic a splore,
As set the world in a roar
O' laughin' at us;—
Curse thou his basket and his store,

Lord, hear my earnest cry and prayer
Against the presby't'ry of Ayr;
Thy strong right hand, Lord, mak it bare
Upo' their heads,

Lord, weigh it down, and dinna spare,
For their misdeeds.

O Lord, my God, that glib-tongued Aiken,*

My very heart and saul are quakin'.
To think how we stood groanin';
shakin',
And spat wi' dread,
While he, wi' hangin' lip and snakin',³
Held up his head.

Lord, in the day of vengeance try him,
Lord, visit them wha did employ him,
And pass not in thy mercy by 'em,
Nor hear their prayer;
But for thy people's sake destroy 'em.
And dinna spare.

But, Lord, remember me and mine,
Wi' mercies temp'ral and divine,
That I for gear and grace may shine,
Excell'd by nane,
And a' the glory shall be thine,
Amen, Amen !

EPITAPH ON HOLY WILLIE.

Here Holy Willie's sair worn clay
Taks up its last abode;
His saul has ta'en some other way,
I fear the left-hand road.

Stop! there he is, as sure's a gun,
Poor silly body, see him;
Nae wonder he's as black's the grun,—
Observe wha's standing wi' him !

Your brunstane devilship, I see,
Has got him there before ye;
But hand your nine-tail cat a wee,¹
Till ance ye've heard my story.

Your pity I will not implore,
For pity ye ha nane!
Justice, alas! has gien him o'er,
And mercy's day is gane.

But hear me, sir, deil as ye are,
Look something to your credit;
A coof² like him wad stain your name,
If it were kent ye did it.

TO A MOUSE,

ON TURNING UP HER NEST WITH THE PLOUGH, NOVEMBER, 1785.

¹ The verses to the 'Mouse' and 'Mountain Daisy,'" Gilbert Burns says, "were composed on the occasions mentioned, and while the author was holding the plough:

* William Aiken, a lawyer, a friend of the poet's.

I could point out the particular spot where each was composed. Holding the plough was a favorite situation with Robert for poetic compositions, and some of his best verses were produced while he was at that exercise."

"John Blane," says Mr. Chambers, "who was farm-servant at Mossgiel at the time of its composition, still (1838) lives at Kilmarnock. He stated to me that he recollected the incident perfectly, Burns was holding the plough, with Blane for his driver, when the little creature was observed running off across the field. Blane, having the pottle, or plough-cleaning utensil, in his hand at the moment, was thoughtlessly running after it, to kill it, when Burns checked him, but not angrily, asking what ill the poor mouse had ever done him. The poet then seemed to his driver to grow very thoughtful, and, during the remainder of the afternoon, he spoke not. In the night time he awoke Blane, who slept with him, and, reading the poem which had in the meantime been composed, asked what he thought of the mouse now."

WEE, sleekit, cowrin', tim'rous beastie,
Oh, what a panic's in thy beastie!
Thou needna start awa' sae hasty,
Wi' bickering brattle!¹
I wad be laith, to rin and chase thee,
Wi' murd'ring pattle!²

I'm truly sorry man's dominion
Has broken nature's social union,
And justifies that ill opinion
Which mak's thee startle
At me, thy poor earth-born companion,
And fellow-mortal!

I doubt na, whiles,³ but thou may thieve; [live!⁴
What then? poor beastie, thou maun
A daimen icker in a thrawe*⁵
'S a sma' o request:
I'll get a blessin' wi' the lavo,⁶
And never miss't!⁷

Thy wee bit houzie, too, in ruin!
It's silly wa's the win's are swrin'!⁸
And naething now to big the new aye
O' foggage green!
And bleak December's winds ensin'
Baith snell⁹ and keen!
Thou saw the fields laid bare and waste,
And weary winter comin' fast.

And cozie² here, beneath the blast,
Thou thought to dwell.
Till, crash! the cruel coulter past
Out through thy cell.

That wee bit heap o' leaves and stibble
Has cost thee mony a weary nibble!
Now thou'st turn'd out for a' thy trouble,
But³ house or hauld,⁴
To thole⁵ the winter's sleeky dribble,
And cranreuch⁶ cauld.

But, Mousie, thou art no thy lane,
In proving foresight may be vain;
The best laid schemes o' mice and men
Gang aft a-gley,
And lea'e us nought but grief and pain
For promised joy.

Still thou art blest, compared wi' me!
The present only toucheth thee.
But, och! I backward cast my ee
On prospects drear!
And forward, though I canna see,
I guess and fear.

HALLOWEEN.
The following poem will, by many readers, be well enough understood; but for the sake of those who are unacquainted with the manners and traditions of the country where the scene is cast, notes are added, to give some account of the principal charms and spells of that night, so big with prophecy to the peasantry in the west of Scotland. The passion of prying into futurity makes a striking part of the history of human nature in its rude state, in all ages and nations; and it may be some entertainment to a philosophic mind, if any such should honor the author with a perusal, to see the remains of it among the more unenlightened in our own.—B.

"Yes! let the rich despise, the proud disdain,
The simple pleasures of the lowly train;
To me more dear, congenial to my heart,
One native charm, than all the gloss of art."

The first ceremony of Halloween is pulling each a stock or plant of kail. They must go out hand in hand, with eyes shut, and pull the first they meet with; its being big or little, straight or crooked, is prophetic of the size and shape of the grand object of all their spells—the husband or wife. If any yird, or earth stick to the root, that is tocher or fortune, and the taste of the custoc, that is, the heart of the stem, is indicative of the natural temper and disposition. Lastly, the stems, or, to give them their ordinary appellation, the runs, are placed somewhere above the head of the door; and the Christian names of the people whom chance brings into the house, are, according to the priority of placing the runs, the names in question.—B.

 This charm must likewise be performed unperceived and alone. You go to the barn, and open both doors, taking them off the hinges, if possible; for there is danger that the being about to appear may shut the doors, and do you some mischief. Then take that instrument used in winnowing the corn, which in our country dialect we call a wecht; and go through all the attitudes of letting down corn against the wind. Repeat it three times; and the third time an apparition will pass through the barn. In at the windy door, and out at the other, having both the figure in question, and the appearance of器具 marking the employment or station in life.—B.

† Take an opportunity of going unnoticed to a bean-stack, and fathom it three times round. The last fathom of the last time, you will catch in your arms the appearance of your future conjugal yoke-fellow.—B.
‡ You go out, one or more, for this is a social spell, to a south-running spring or rivulet, where "three lairds' lands meet, and dip your left shirt-sleeve. Go to bed in sight of a fire, and hang your wet sleeve before it to dry. Lie awake; and, some time near midnight, an apparition having the exact figure of the grand object in question, will come and turn the sleeve, as if to dry the other side of it.—B.

MAN WAS MADE TO MOURN.
A DIRGE.

“Several of the poems,” says Gilbert Burns,
“were produced for the purpose of bringing forward some favourite sentiment of the

§ Take three dishes; put clean water in one, foul water in another, leave the third empty: blindfold a person, and lead him to the hearth where the dishes are ranged; he (or she) dips the left hand: if by chance in the clean water, the future husband or wife will come to the bar of matrimony a maid; if in the foul, a widow, if in the empty dish, it foretells, with equal certainty, no marriage at all. It is repeated three times, and every time the arrangement of the dishes is altered.—B.

author’s. He used to remark to me that he could not well conceive a more mortifying picture of human life than a man seeking work. In casting about in his mind how this sentiment might be brought forward, the elegy, “Man was Made to Mourn,” was composed.”

An old Scottish ballad had suggested the form and spirit of this poem. “I had an old grand-uncle,” says the poet to Mrs. Dunlop, “whom my mother lived a while in her girlhis years. The old man was long blind ere he died, during which time his highest enjoyment was to sit down and cry, while my mother would sing the simple old song of ‘The Life and Age of Man.’” From the poet’s mother, Mr. Cromek procured a copy of this composition; it commences thus:—

Upon the sixteen hundred year
Of God and fifty-three Frac Christ was born, who bought us dear,
As writings testify;
On January the sixteenth day,
As I did lie alone,
With many a sigh and sob did say
Ahh! man was made to moun!

When chill November’s surly blast
Made fields and forests bare,
One evening, as I wander’d forth
Along the banks of Ayrr,
I spied a man whose aged step
Seem’d weary worn with care;
His face was furrow’d o’er with years,
And hoary was his hair.

Young stranger, whither wanderest thou?
Began the reverend sage; [strain,
“Does thirst of wealth thy step con.
Or youthful pleasures rage?
Or haply, prest with cares and woes.
Too soon thou hast began
To wander forth with me to mourn
The miseries of man.

The Sun that overhangs ye moors,
Outspreading far and wide,
Where hundreds labour to support
A haughty lordling’s pride:
I’ve seen ye weary winter sun
Twice forty times return,
And every time has added proofs
That man was made to mourn.

O man! while in thy early years,
How prodigal of time!
Misspending all thy precious hours,
Thy glorious youthful prime!
Alternate follies take the sway;
Licentious passions burn;
Which tenfold force gives nature’s law,
That man was made to mourn.
"Look not alone on youthful prime,
Or manhood's active might;
Man then is useful to his kind,
Supported is his right,
But see him on the edge of life,
With cares and sorrows worn;
Then age and want—oh! ill match'd pair!—
Show man was made to mourn.

"A few seem favourites of fate,
In pleasure’s lap carest;
Yet think not all the rich and great
Are likewise truly blest.
But, oh! what crowds in every land
Are wretched and forlorn!
Through weary life this lesson learn—
That man was made to mourn.

"Many and sharp the numerous ills
Inwoven with our frame!
More pointed still we make ourselves—
Regret, remorse, and shame!
And man, whose heaven-erected face
The smiles of love adorn,
Man’s inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn!

"See yonder poor, o’erlabour’d wight,
So abject, mean, and vile,
Who begs a brother of the earth
To give him leave to toil;
And see his lordly fellow-worm
The poor petition spurn,
Unmindful, though a weeping wife
And helpless offspring mourn.

"If I'm design’d you lordling’s slave—
By nature’s law design’d—
Why was an independent wish
E’er planted in my mind?
If not, why am I subject to His cruelty or scorn?
Or why has man the will and power
To make his fellow mourn?

"Yet let not this too much, my son,
Disturb thy youthful breast;
This partial view of human kind
Is surely not the last!
The poor, oppress’d, honest man.
Had never, sure, been born,
And there not been some recompense
To comfort those that mourn.

"O Death! the poor man's dearest friend—
The kindest and the best!

Welcome the hour my aged limbs
Are laid with thee at rest!
The great, the wealthy, fear thy blow,
From pomp and pleasure torn;
But, oh! a blest relief to those
That weary-laden mourn!"

THE COTTER'S SATURDAY NIGHT.

INSCRIBED TO ROBERT AIKEN, ESQ.

Gilbert Burns gives the following distinct account of the origin of this poem:—"Robert had frequently remarked to me that he thought there was something peculiarly venerable in the phrase, 'Let us worship God!' used by a decent, sober head of a family, introducing family worship. To this sentiment of the author, the world is indebted for 'The Cotter's Saturday Night.' When Robert had not some pleasure in view in which I was not thought fit to participate, we used frequently to walk together, when the weather was favourable, on the Sunday afternoons—those precious breathing times to the laboring part of the community—and enjoyed such Sundays as would make one regret to see their number abridged. It was in one of these walks that I first had the pleasure of hearing the author repeat 'The Cotter's Saturday Night.' I do not recollect to have read or heard anything by which I was more highly electrified. The fifth and sixth stanzas, and the eighteenth, thrilled with peculiar ecstasy through my soul. The cotter, in the 'Saturday Night,' is an exact copy of my father in his manners, his family devotion, and exhortations; yet the other parts of the description do not apply to our family. None of us were 'at service out among the farmers round.' Instead of our depositing our 'saw-won penny-fee' with our parents, my father laboured hard, and lived with the most rigid economy, that he might be able to keep his children at home, thereby having an opportunity of watching the progress of our young minds, and forming in them early habits of piety and virtue; and from this motive alone did he engage in farming, the source of all his difficulties and distresses.

"Let not ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys, and destiny obscure;
Nor grandeur hear, with a disdainful smile,
The short but simple annals of the poor."

—Gray.

ADDRESS TO THE DEIL.

“Oh prince! Oh chief of many throned powers,
That led th’ embattled seraphin to war!”
—Milton.

O THOU! whatever title suit thee,
Auld Hornie, Satan, Nick, or Cootie,*
Wha in yon cavern grim and sootie,
Closed under hatches,
Spairges† about the brunstane cootie.‡
To scaud poor wretches!
Hear me, auld Hangie, for a wee,
And let poor damned bodies be;
I’m sure sma’ pleasure it can gie,
E’en to a deil,

* A well-known term applied to Satan in Scotland in allusion to his hoots or cloots.
† Spairges is the best Scots word in its place I ever met with. The deil is not standing flinging the liquid brimstone on his friends with a ladle, but we see him standing at a large boiling vat, with something like a golf-ball, striking the liquid this way and that way aslant, with all his might, making it fly through the whole apartment, while the inmates are winking and holding up their arms to defend their faces. This is precisely the idea conveyed by spairging: flinging it in any other way would be laving or splashing.—
The Ettrick Shepherd.
‡ The legitimate meaning of this word is a gain wooden tub; here it implies not only the utensil, but liquid brimstone; just as a toper talks of his can or his cogie, meaning both the liquor and the utensil in which it is held.
To skelp and scaud poor dogs like me,
And hear us squeel!

Great is thy power, and great thy fame;
Far kenn'd and noted is thy name:
And though thou lowin' heed's thy hame,
Thou travels far: [lame,
And, faith! thou's neither lag nor Nor blate nor scaur.]
Whyles ranging like a roaring lion,
For prey a' holes and corners tryin':
Whyles on the strong-wing'd tempest flyin',
Tirlin' the kirks;
Whyles in the human bosom pryin',
Unseen thou lurks.

I've heard my reverend grannie say,
In lanely glens ye like to stray:
Or where auld ruin'd castles, gray,

THE JOLLY BEGGARS.
A CANTATA.

This famous poem, or rather drama, is founded on a scene actually witnessed by the poet. In company with his friends, John Richmond and James Smith, he was passed over by a party of beggars, who were then singing andswaggering, and were rapturously welcomed by the motley band of beggars and tinkers carousing around them. Burns professed to have been greatly delighted with the scene, more especially with the jolly behaviour of a maimed old soldier. In a few days he recited portions of the poem to John Richmond, who used to speak of songs by a sweep and a sailor which did not appear in the completed manuscript.

Looks round him, and found them
Impatient for the chorus.

THE VISION.

This beautiful poem depicts, in the highest strain of poetical eloquence, a struggle which was constantly going on in the poet's mind between the meanness and poverty of his position and his higher aspirations and hopes of independence, which he found it impossible ever to realize. It must have been evident to his mind that poetry alone was not to elevate him above the reach of worldly cares; yet in this poem, as in many others, he accepts the poetical calling as its own sweet and sufficient reward. In the appearance of the Muse of Coila, the matter is settled: a fashion as beautiful as poetical. In the Kilmarnock edition of his poems, the allusion to his Jean in his description of the Muse's appearance:—

"Down flow'd her robe, a tartan sheen
Till half a leg was scrumpily seen,
And such a leg! my bonny Jean
Could only peer it;
Sae straught, sae taper, tight, and clean,
'de same cld near it—" was replaced by the name of another charmer, in consequence, it is presumed, of his quarrel with her father. When the Edinburgh edition appeared, his old affections had again asserted their sway, and her name was restored. In a letter to Mrs. Dunlop, dated February, 1788, the poet, in allusion to Miss Rachel Dunlop, one of her daughters, being engaged in a painting representing "The Vision," says:—"I am highly flattered by the new Muses tell of Coila. I may say to the fair painter who does me so much honor, as Dr. Beattie says to Ross, the poet, of his Muse Scotia, from which, by the by, I took the idea of Coila; (tis a poem of Beattie's in the Scottish dialect, which perhaps you have never seen):—

' Ye shake your head, but o' my legs,
Ye've set auld Scotia on her legs;
Lang had she hen wi, buffis and flegs,
Bumbazed and dizzie;
Her fiddle wanted strings and pegs—
Wae's me, poor hizzle!!"

DUAN FIRST.*

The sun had closed the winter day,
The curlers quat their roaring play;†

And hungered maukin ta'en her way
To kail-yards green,
While faithless snaws ilk step betray
Where she has been.
The thrasher's weary flingin'-tree¹
The lee-lang day had tired me;
And when the day had closed his ee,
Far i' the west,
Ben i' the spence, right pensivellie,
I gaed to rest.

There, lanely, by the ingle-creek,²
I sat and eyed the spewing reek;³
That fill'd wi' hoast-provoking sneek,
The auld clay biggin';
And heard the restless rattans⁵ squeak
About the riggin'.

All in this mottie,⁶ misty clime,
I backward mused on wasted time,
How I had spent my youthful prime,
And done naething,
But stringin' blanders' up in rhyme,
For fools to sing.

Had I to guid advice but harkit,
I might by this hae led a market,
Or strutted in a bank, and clerkit
My cash account:
While here, half-mad, half-fed, half-sarkit,
Is a', th' amount.

I started, muttering, Blockhead! coof!⁸
And heaved on high my waukit loof,⁹
To swear by a' you starry roof,
Or some rash aith,
That I henceforth would be rhyme-proof
Till my last breath—

When, click! the string the sneck¹⁰ did draw
And jee! the door gaed to the wa';
And by my ingle-love I saw,
Now bleezin' bright,
A tight, outlandish hizzie, braw,
Come full in sight.

Ye needna doubt, I held my whisht;
The infant aith, half-form'd, was crusht.

† Curling is a wintry game peculiar to the southern counties of Scotland. When the ice is sufficiently strong on the lochs, a number of individuals, each provided with a large stone of the shape of an oblate spheroid, smoothed at the bottom, range themselves on two sides, and being furnished with handles, play against each other. The game resembles bowls, but is much more animated, and keenly enjoyed. It is well characterized by the poet as a roaring play.

Green, slender, leaf-clad holly-boughs
Were twisted graceful' round her brows—
I took her for some Scottish Muse,
   By that same token:
And come to stop those reckless vows,
   Would soon be broken,
A 'hare-brain'd sentimental trace'
Was strongly marked in her face,
A wildly-witty, rustic grace
Shone full upon her;
Her eye e'en turn'd on empty space,
   Beam'd keen with honour.
Down flow'd her robe, a tartan sheen,
   Till half a leg was scrimply seen;
And such a leg! my bonny Jean
Could only peer it;
Sae straught, sae taper, tight, and clean,
   Nane else cam near it.
Her mantle large, of greenish hue,
My gazing wonder chiefly drew;
Deep lights and shades, bold-mingling threw

Here, Doon pour'd down his far-fetched floods
There, well fed Irwine stately thuds.

I could discern;
Some seem'd to muse, some seem'd to dare,
   With features stern.
My heart did glowing transport feel,

Where many a patriot name on high
And hero shone.

DUAN SECOND.
WITH musing-deep, astonish'd stare,
I view'd the heavenly seeming fair;
A whispering throb did witness bear
Of kindred sweet,
When with an elder sister's air
She did me greet:—
"All hail! my own inspired bard!
In me thy native Muse regard;
Nor longer mourn thy fate is hard,
Thus poorly low!
I come to give thee such reward
As we bestow.

"Know, the great genius of this land
Has many a light, aërial band,
Who, all beneath his high command,
Harmoniously,
As arts or arms they understand,
Their labours ply.

"They Scotia's race among them share;
Some fire the soldier on to dare:
Some rouse the patriot up to bare
Corruption's heart:
Some teach the bard a darling care,
The tuneful art.

"Mong swelling floods of reeking gore.

They ardent, kindling spirits, pour;
Or, 'mid the venal senate's roar,
They, sightless, stand,
To mend the honest patriot-lore,
And grace the hand.

"And when the bard, or hoary sage,
Charm or instruct the future age,
They bind the wild, poetic rage,
In energy,
Or point the inconclusive page
Full on the eye.

"Hence Fullarton, the brave and young;
Hence Dempster's zeal-inspired tongue;
Hence sweet harmonious Beattie sung
His Minstrel lay;
Or tore, with noble ardor stung,
The sceptic's bays.

"To lower orders are assign'd
The humbler ranks of human kind,
The rustic bard, the laboring kind,
The artisan;
All choose, as various they're inclined,
The various man.

"When yellow waves the heavy grain,
The threatening storm some, strongly rein;
Some teach to meliorate the plain,
With tillage skill;
And some instruct the shepherd-train,
Blithe o'er the hill.

"Some hint the lover's harmless wile;
Some grace the maiden's artless smile;
Some soothe the labourer's weary toil,
For humble gains,
And make his cottage-scenes beguile
His cares and pains.

"Some bounded to a district-space,
Explore at large man's infant race,
To mark the embryotic trace
Of rustic bard;
And careful note each opening grace,
A guide and guard.

"Of these am I—Coila my name,
And this district as mine I claim,
Where once the Campbells, chiefs of fame,
Held ruling power.

 The Loudoun branch of the Campbells is here meant; Mossgiel, and much of the neighbouring ground was then the property of the Earl of Loudon.
I mark'd thy embryo tuneful flame,
Thy natal hour.

"When future hope, I oft would gaze,
Fond, on thy little early ways,
Thy rudely-caroll'd, chiming phrase,
In uncouth rhymes,
Fired at the simple, artless lays,
Of other times.

"I saw thee seek the sounding shore,
Delighted with the dashing roar;
Or when the north his fleecy store
Drove through the sky,
I saw grim nature's visage hoar
Struck thy young eye.

"Or when the deep green-mantled earth
Warm cherish'd every floweret's birth,
And joy and music pouring forth
In every grove,
I saw thee eye the general mirth
With boundless love.

"When ripen'd fields, and azure skies,
Call'd forth the reaper's rustling noise,
I saw thee leave their evening joys,
And lonely stalk,
To vent thy bosom's swelling rise
In pensive walk.

"When youthful love, warm-blushing, strong
Keen-shivering shot thy nerves along,
Those accents, grateful to thy tongue,
Th' adorèd Name,
I taught thee how to pour in song;
To soothe thy flame.

"I saw thy pulse's maddening play,
Wild, send thee Pleasure's devious way,
Misled my Fancy's meteor-ray,
By passion driven;
But yet the light that led astray
Was light from Heaven.

"I taught thy manners painting strains,
The loves, the ways of simple swains,
Till now, o'er all my wide domains
Thy fame extends;
And some, the pride of Coila's plains,
Become thy friends.

"Thou canst not learn, nor can I show
To paint with Thomson's landscape glow;

Or wake the bosom-melting throe,
With Shenstone's art,
Or pour, with Gray, the moving flow
Warm on the heart.

"Yet all beneath the unrivall'd rose,
The lowly daisy sweetly blows,
Though large forest's monarch throws
His army shade,
Yet green the juicy hawthorn grows.
Adown the glade.

"Then never murmur nor repine;
Strive in thy humble sphere to shine:
And, trust me, not Potosi's mine,
Nor kings' regard,
Can give a bliss o'ermatching thine—
A rustic bard.

"To give my counsels all in one,
Thy tuneful flame still careful fan;
Preserve the dignity of man,
With soul erect;
And trust the universal plan
Will all protect.

"And wear thou this," she solemn said,
And bound the holly round my head;
The polish'd leaves, and berries red,
Did rustling play;
And, like a passing thought, she fled
In light away.

A WINTER NIGHT,

"Poor naked wretches, whereso'er you are,
That hide the pelting of the piteous storm!
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you,
From seasons such as these?"

SCOTCH DRINK.

This poem, written after the manner of Ferguson’s “Caller Water,” is not to be taken as evidence of the poet’s feelings and practices. It was suggested, along with the following poem, by the withdrawal of an Act of Parliament empowering Duncan Forbes of Culloden to distil whisky on his barony of Ferintosh, free of duty, in return for services rendered to the Government. This privilege was a source of great revenue to the family; and as Ferintosh whisky was cheaper than that produced elsewhere, it became very popular, and the name Ferintosh thus became something like a synonyme for whisky over the country. Compensation for the loss of privilege, to the tune of £21,580, was awarded to the Forbes family by a jury. Attention was further drawn to “the national beverage” at this time by the vexatious and oppressive way in which the Excise laws were enforced at the Scotch distilleries. Many distillers abandoned the business; and as barley was beginning to fall in price in consequence, the county gentlemen supported the distillers, and an act was passed relieving the trade from the obnoxious supervision. These circumstances gave the poet his cue; and the subject was one calculated to evoke his wildest humour. Writing to Robert Muir, Kilmarnock, he says, “Here enclose you my ‘Scotch Drink,’ and may the—follow with a blessing for your edification. I hope some time before we hear the gowk, [chuck] to have the pleasure of seeing you at Kilmarnock, when I intend we shall have a gill between us in a mutchkin stoup, which will be a great comfort and consolation to your humble servant, R. B.”

“Gie him strong drink, until he wink
That’s sinking in despair;
And liquor guid to ease his blood,
That’s prest wi’ grief and care;
There let him bouse, and deep carouse,
Wi’ bumpers flowing o’er,
Till he forgets his loves or debts,
And minds his griefs no more.”
—Solomon’s Proverbs xxxvi. 6, 7.

Let other poets raise a fracas!
‘Bout vines, and wines, and drunken Bacchus,
And crabbit names and stories wrack us,
And grate our lug, [us,
I sing the juice Scotch beare can mak
In glass or jug.

O thou, my Muse! guid culd Scotch drink,
[thou jink,5
Whether through wimlin’4 worms
Or, richly brown, ream o’er the brink;
In glorious faem,
Inspire me, till I lisp and wink,
To sing thy name!

Let husky wheat the haughs adorn,
And ait set up their awnie horn,6
And peas and beans, at c’en or morn,
Perfume the plain,
I eze me on thee, John barleycorn,
Thou king o’ grain!

On the ait Scotland chows her cood,
In souple scones,* the wale o’ food!
Or tumblin’ in the boilin’ flood
Wi’ kail and beef;
But when thou pours thy strong heart’s blood,
There thou shines chief.

Food fills the wame, and keeps us livin’;
Though life’s a gift no worth receivin’
When heavy dragg’d wi’ pine* and grievin’;

But oil’d by thee,
The wheels o’ life gae down-hill, scrievin’
Wi’ rattlin’ glee.

Thou clears the head o’ doited Lear;
Thou cheers the heart o’ drooping Care;
Thou strings the nerves o’ Labour sair
At’s weary toil;
Thou even brightens dark Despair,
Wi’ gloomy smile.

Aft clad in massy siller weed,10
Wi’ gentles thou erects thy head;
Yet humbly kind in time o’ need,
The poor man’s wine *
His wee drap parritch, or his bread,
Thou kitchens fine.

Thou art the life o' public haunts;
But thee, what were our fairs and rants?
Even goodly meetings o' the saunst,
By thee inspired,
When gaping they besiege the tents,†
Are doubly fired.

That merry night we get the corn in,
Oh, sweetly then thou reams the horn
in!
Or reekin' a new year morning
In cog or bicker,12
And just a wee drap spiritual burn in,
And gusty sucker!13

When Vulcan gies his bellows breath,
And plowmen gather wi' their graith,14
Oh, rare! to see thee fizz and freath
I' the lugget caup!15
Then Burnewin16 comes on like death
At every chap.

Nae mercy, then, for airm or steel;
The brawn'ie, bainie, ploughman chiel,
Brings hard owrehip, wi' sturdy wheel,
The strong forehammer,
Till block and studie ring and reel,
Wi' dinsome clavour.

When skirlin' weanies17 see the light,
Thou mak's the gossips clatter bright,
How fumblin' cuifs18 their dearies slight;
Wae worth the name!
Nae howdie19 gets a social night,
Or plack20 frae them.

When neibors anger at a plea,
And just as wud as wud21 can be,
How easy can the barley-bree
Cement the quarrel!
It's aye the cheapest lawyer's fee
To taste the barrel.

Alake! that e'er my Muse has reason
To wyte22 her countrymen wi' treason!
But mony daily weet their weason23
Wi' liquors nice.

And hardly, in a winter's season,
E'er spier24 her price.

Wae worth that brandy, burning trash,
Fell source o' mony a pain and brash!25
'Twins mony a poor, doylt, dracken hash26

O' half his days;
And sends, beside, anld Scotland's cash
To her worst faes,

Ye Scots, wha wish auld Scotland well!
Ye chief, to you my tale I tell,
Poor plackless devils like mysel,
It sets you ill,
Wi' bitter, dearchf'u' wines to mell,27
Or foreign gill.

May gravels round his blether wrench,
And gouts torment him inch by inch,
Wha twists his granlte wi' a glunch28
O' sour disdain,
Out-owre a glass o' whisky punch
Wi' honest men.

O whisky! soul o' plays and pranks!
Accept a Fardie's grateful thanks!
When wanting thee, what tuneless cranks
Are my poor verses!
Thou comes—they rattle i' their ranks
At ither's a—es.

Thee, Ferintosh! oh, sadly lost!
Scotland lament frae coast to coast!
Now colic grips, and barkin' hoast,29
May kill us a';
For loyal Forbes's charter'd boast,
Is ta'en awa'!

Thae curst horse-leeches o' th' Excise,
Wha mak the whisky-stells their prize!
Hand up thy han', deil! ance, twice, thrice!

There, seize the blinkers!30
And bake them up in brunstane pies
Foroor damn'd drinkers.

Fortune! if thou'll but gie me still
Hale breeks, a scone, and whisky gill,
And rowth31 o' rhyme to rave at will,
Tak a' the rest,
And deal't about as thy blind skill
Directs the best.

A FRAGMENT.

The following lines occur in an early commonplace-book of the poet's, and probably relate to the consequences of his first serious error:—

Of all the numerous ills that hurt our peace,
That press the soul, or wring the mind
Beyond comparison, the worst are those
That to our folly or our guilt we owe.
In every other circumstance, the mind
Has this to say—"It was no deed of mine;"
But when, to all the evil of misfortune,
This sting is added—"Blame thy foolish self;"
Or, worser far, the pangs of keen re-
The torturing, gnawing consciousness
Of guilt perhaps where we've involved
The young, the innocent, who fondly lo'ed us,
Of ruin!
Nay, more—that very love their cause
O burning hell! in all thy store of torments,
There's not a keener lash! [his heart
Lives there a man so firm, who, while Feels all the bitter horrors of his crime,
Can reason down its agonizing throbs:
And, after proper purpose of amendment,
Can firmly force his jarring thoughts
Oh, happy, happy, enviable man!
Oh, glorious magnanimity of soul!

ANSWER TO A POETICAL

EPISTLE,

SENT TO THE AUTHOR BY A TAILOR

A tailor in the neighbourhood of Mauchline having taken it upon him to send the poet a rhymed homily on his loose conversation and irregular behaviour, received the following lines in reply to his lecture:—

What ails ye now, ye lousie bitch,
To thrash my back at sic a pitch?
Losh, man! hae mercy wi' your natch,¹
Your bodkin's baud,
I didna suffer half sae much
Frae Daddie Auld.

What though at times, when I grow cruse,²
I gie the dames a random pouse,
Is that enough for you to scuse³
Your servant sae? [louse
Gae mind your seam, ye prick-the-
And jag-the-fae.

King David, o' poetic brief,
Wrought 'mang the lasses sic mischief
As fill'd his after life wi' grief
And bludy rants,
And yet he's rank'd among the chief
O' lang-syne saunts.

And maybe, Tam, for a' my cants,⁴
My wicked rhymes, and drucken rant:
I'll gie auld cloven Cootie's haun.
An unco slip yet,
And snugly sit among the saunts
At Davie's hip yet.

But fegs,⁵ the session says I maun
Gae fa' upon anither plan,
Than garrin' lasses cowp the cran
Clean heels owre gowdy.
And sairly tho'le⁶ their mither's ban
Afore the howdy.⁷

This leads me on, to tell for sport,
How I did wi' the session sort:
Auld Clinkum at the inner port
Cried three times—"Robin!
Come hither lad, and answer for't,
Ye're blamed for jobbin'."

Wi' pinch I put a Sunday's face on,
And snooved⁸ awa' before the session;
I made an open, fair confession—
I scorned to lie; [sion,
And syne Mess John, beyond expres-
Fell foul o' me.

A furnicator-loon he call'd me.
And said my faut frae bliss expell'd me;
I own'd the tale was true he tell'd me,
"But what the matter?"
Quo' I, "I fear unless ye geld me,
I'll ne'er be better."

"Geld you!" quo' he, "and what for
If that your right hand, leg or toe,
Should ever prove your spiritual foe,
You should remember

Or lampit shell.

A blackguard smuggler right behind her,
And cheek-for-chow a chuffie 13 vintner,

Picking her pouch as bare as winter
Of a' kind coin.

Is there that bears the name o' Scot,
But feels his heart's bluid rising hot,
To see his poor auld mither's pot
Thus dung in staves,
And plunder'd o' her hindmost groat
By gallows knaves?

§§§ A worthy old hostess of the author's in Mauchline, where he sometimes studied politics over a glass of grud old Scotch drink.—B.

"Nanse Tinnock is long deceased, and no one has caught up her mantle. She is described as having been a true ale-wife, in the proverbial sense of the word—close, discreet, civil, and no tale-teller. When any neighbouring wife came, asking if her John was here, 'Oh, no,' Nanse would reply, shaking money in her pocket as she spoke, 'he's no here,' implying to the querist that the husband was not in the house, while she meant to herself that he was not among her half-pence—thus keeping the word of promise to the car, but breaking it to the hope. Her house was one of two stories, and had a front towards the street, by which Burns must have entered Mauchline from Mossglie. The date over the door is 1744. It is remembered however, that Nanse never could understand how the poet should have talked of enjoying himself in her house 'nine times a week.' The lad, she said, 'hardly ever drank three half-mutchkins under her roof in his life.' Nanse, probably, had never heard of the poetical license. In truth, Nanse's hostelry was not the only one in Mauchline which Burns resorted to: a rather better-looking house, at the opening of the ogwate, kept by a person named John Dove, and then, and still bearing the arms of Sir John Whiteford of Ballochmyle, was also a haunt of the poet's having this high recommendation, that its back windows surveyed those of the house in which his 'Jean' resided. The reader will find in its proper place a droll epitaph on John Dove, in which the honest landlord's religion is made out to be a mere comparative appreciation of his various liquors."—Chambers.

† Pitt, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, had gained some credit by a measure introduced in 1784, for preventing smuggling of tea by reducing the duty, the revenue being compensated by a tax on windows.

§§§ Mixtie-maxtie is Scotch for a mixture of incongruous elements. Hotch-potch is a fish composed of all sorts of vegetables. This coalition, like many others since, was in the poet's eyes an unnatural banding together of men of different opinions.

THE AULD FARMER'S NEW-YEAR MORNING SALUTATION TO HIS AULD MARE MAGGIE, ON GIVING HER THE ACCUSTOMED RIP OF CORN TO HANSEL IN THE NEW YEAR.

Most editors have alluded to the tenderness of Burns towards the lower animals; this is a true poetick instinct, and with him was unusually strong. The Etrick Shepherd says, in a note to this poem:—"Burns must have been an exceedingly good and kind-hearted being; for whenever he has occasion to address or mention any subordinate being, however mean, even a mouse or a flower, then there is a gentle pathos in his language that awakens the finest feelings of the heart."

A GUID New-Year I wish thee, Maggie!
Hae, there's a rip1 to thy auld baggie.
Though thou's howe-backit now and knaggie,2

I've seen the day
Thou could hae gaen like quy staggie
Out owre the lay.3

Thou now thou's dowie,4 stiff and crazy,
And thy auld hide's as white's a daisy,
I've seen the dappl't, sleek and glazie;5
A bonny gray:

He should been tight that daur't to raize6 thee,
ANCE in a day.

Thou ance was i' the foremost rank,
A filly buirdly, steerle and swank,7
And set weel down a shapely shank,
As e'er tread yird;8
And could hae flown out-owre a stank,9
Like ony bird.

It's now some nine-and-twenty year,
Sin' thou was my guid father's meer:
He gied me thee, o' tocher10 clear,
And fifty mark; [gear,
Though it was sma', twas weel-won
And thou was stark.11

When first I gaed to woo my Jenny,
Ye then was trottin' wi' your Minnie,12
Though ye was trickie, slee, and funnie,
Ye ne'er was donsie13
But hamely, towie, quiet, and cannie,14
And unco sonsie.15

That day ye pranced wi' muckle pride
When ye bare hame my bonny bride;
And sweet and gracefu' she did ride,
Wi' maiden air!
Kyle-Stewart8 I could hae bragged16 wide,
For sic a pair.

Though now ye dow but hoyte and hoble,17
And wintle like a saumont coble,18
That daf ye was jinker19 noble,
For heels and win'!

Wi' something yet.

And think na, my auld trusty servan',
That now perhaps thou's less deser-
vin',
And thy auld days may end in starvin',
For my last fou,

THE TWA DOGS:
A TALE.

Gilbert Burns says:—"The tale of 'The Twa Dogs' was composed after the resolution of publishing was nearly taken. Robert had a dog, which he called Luath, that was a great favourite. The dog had been killed by the wanton cruelty of some person, the night before my father's death. Robert said to me that he should like to confer such immortality as he could bestow on his old friend Luath, and that he had a great mind to introduce something into the book under the title of 'Stanzas to the Memory of a Quadruiped Friend'; but this plan was given up for the poem as it now stands. Caesar was merely the creature of the poet's imagination, created for the purpose of holding chat with his favourite Luath. The factor who stood for a portrait here was the same of whom he writes to Dr. Moore in 1789:

"My indignation yet boils at the scoundrel factor's insolent threatening letters, which used to set us all in tears." All who have been bred in country districts will have no difficulty in finding parallels to the factor of the poem. Often illiterate and unfeeling, they think to gain the favour of the laird by an over-zealous pressure on poor but honest tenants, who, if gently treated, would struggle through their difficulties.

'Twas in that place o' Scotland's isle,
That bears the name o'auld King Coil,
Upon a bonny day in June,
When wearing through the afternoon,
Twre dogs that werenin thrang at hame,
Forgather'd ane upon a time.

The first I'll name, they ca'd him Cesar
Was keepit for his honour's pleasure;
His hair, his size, his mouth, his lugs,
Show'd he was nane o' Scotland's dogs;
But whalpit some place far abroad,
Where sailors gang to fish for cod.

His lock'd, letter'd, brow brass collar
Show'd him the gentleman and scholar;
But thou was o' high degree,
The fient a pride—nae pride had he;
But wad hae spent an hour caressin',
Even wi' a tinkler-gypsy's messan:
At kirk or market, mill or smiddie,
Nae tawted tyke, though e'er sae dudder;
But he wad stan't, as glad to see him,
And strow'n on stations and hillocks
'Wi' him.

The tither was a ploughman's collie,
A rhyning, ranting, roving billie,[him,
Wha for his friend and comrade had
And in his freaks had Luath ca'd him,
After some dog in Highland sang.*

Was made lang syne—Lord knows how lang.
He was a gash and faithful tyke,
As ever lap a sheugh or dike.
His honest sousie, baws'nt face,
Aye gat him friends in ilk place.
His breast was white, his touzie back
Weel clad wi'coat o'glossy black;
His gauze tail, wi'upward curl,
Hung o'er his hurdies wi' a swirl.

Nae doubt but they were fain o'ither,
And unco pack and thick thegither;
Wi' social nose whyles snuff'd and snowkit,
[howkit,] Whyles mice and moudieworth they
Whyles scour'd awa' in lang excursion,
And worried ither in diversion;
Until wi' daifin weary grown,
Upon a knowe they sat them down,
And there began a lang digression
About the lords' the creation.

CAESAR.
I've often wonder'd, honest Luath,
What sort o' life poor dogs like you have,
And when the gentry's life I saw,
What way poor bodies lived ava.

Our laird gets in his racked rents,
His coals, his kain, and a' his stents;
He rises when he likes himself;
His flunkies answer at the bell;
He ca's his coach, he ca's his horse;
He draws a bonny silken purse [steeks,
As 'ang's my tail, where, through the
The yellow-letter'd Geordie keeks.

Frae mom to e'en it's nought but toiling,
At baking, roasting, frying boiling;
And though the gentry first are stechin;
Yet e'en the ha' folk fill their pechan
Wi' sauce, ragouts, and siclike trashtry.

* Cuchullin's dog in Oissian's "Fingal."
That’s little short o’ downright wastrie,
Our whipper-in, we, blastit wonner,26
Poor worthless elf, it eats a dinner
Better than any tenant man
His honour has in a’ the lan’;
And what poor cot-folk pit their painch in,
I own it’s past my comprehension.

LUATH

Trowth, Caesar, whyles they’re fash28
euenough;
A cotter howkin’ in a shengh,29
Wi’ dirty stanes biggin’ a dike,
Baring a quarry, and siclike;
Himself, a wife, he thus sustains,
A smytrie o’ wee duddie weans.30
And nought but his han’ darg31 to keep Them right and tight in thack and rape32
And when they meet wi’ sair disasters,
Like loss o’ health or want o’ masters,
Ye maist wad think, a wee touch langer,
And they maun starve o’ cauld and hunger;
But how it comes I never kenn’d yet,
They’re maistly wonderfu’ contented;
And buirdly chielis, and clever hizzies,33
Are bred in sic a way as this is.

CAESAR.

But then to how ye’re neglectik, [it!
How huff’d, and cuff’d, and disrespeck-
Lord, man, our gentry care as little
For delvers, ditchers, and sic cattle;
They gang as saucy by poor folk
As I wad by a stinkin’ brock.34
I’ve noticed, on our laird’s court-day,
And mony a time my heart’s been wae,
Poor tenant bodies, scant o’ cash,
How they maun thole a factor’s smash:35
He’ll stamp and threaten, curse and swear;
He’ll apprehend them, point their gear;
While they maun stan’, wi’ aspect humble,
And hear it a’, and fear and tremble!
I see how folk live that hae riches;
But surely poor folk maun be wretches!

LUATH.

They’re no sae wretched ’s ane wad think;
Though constantly on poortith’s36 brink:
They’re sae accustom’d wi’ the sight,
The view o’ t glees them little fright.
Then chance and fortune are sae guided,
They’re aye in less or mair provided;
And though fatigued wi’ close employment,
A blink o’ rest’s a sweet enjoyment.
The dearest comfort o’ their lives,
Their gushie37 weans and faithfu’ wives;
[pride,
The prattling things are just their
That sweetens a’ their fire-side; [py38
And whyles twalpennie worth o’ nap-
Can mak the bodies unco happy;
They lay aside their private cares,
To mind the Kirk and state affairs.
They’ll talk o’ patronage and priests,
Wi’ kindling fury in their breasts;
Or tell what new taxation’s comin’,
And ferlie39 at the folk in Lon’con.

As bleak-faced Hallowmas returns,
They get the jovial ranting kirns,40
When rural life o’ every station
Unite in common recreation; [Mirth
Love blinks, Wit slaps, and social Forgets there’s Care upo’ the earth.

That merry day the year begins
They bar the door on frosty win’;
The nappy reeks wi’ mantling ream,
And sheds a heart-inspiring steam;
The luntin pipe and sneeshin mill41
Are handed round wi’ right guid will;
The cantie42 auld folks crackin’ crouse,43
The young anes rantin’ through the house,—
My heart has been sae fain to see them,
That I for joy hae barkit wi’ them.

Still it’s owre true that ye hae said,
Sic game is now owre aften play’d.
There’s mony a creditable stock
O’ decent, honest, fawsont44 folk,
Are riven out baith root and branch,
Some rascal’s pridefu’ greed to quench,
Wha thinks to knit himsel the faster

In favour wi' some gentle master,
Wha ablinis thrang a parliamentin'—
For Britain's guid his soul indentin'—

CAESAR.

Haith, lad, ye little ken about it: [it.
For Britain's guid! guid faith, I doubt
Say rather, guan as Premiers lead him;
And saying Ay or No's they bid him:
At operas and plays parading,
Mortgaging, gambling, masquerading;
Or maybe, in a frolic daft,
To Hague or Calais takes a waft,46
To make a tour, and tak a whirl,
To learn bon ton, and see the worl'.

There, at Vienna or Versailles,
He rives his father's auld entail's;47
Or by Madrid he takes the route, [te;48
To thrum guitars, and fecht wi' now;
Or down Italian vista startles, [tiles,
Whore-hunting among groves o' myr.
Then bouses drumbly German water,
To mak himsel look fair and fatter,
And clear the consequent sorrows,
Love-gifts of Carnival signoras.
For Britain's guid!—for her destruction!
Wi' dissipation, feud, and faction!

LUATH.

Hech man! dear sirs! is that the gate
They waste sae mony a braw estate!
Are we sae foughten and harass'd
For gear to gang that gate at last!

Oh, would they stay aback fra courts,
And please themselves wi' country sports,
It wad for every ane be better,
The Laird, The Tenant, and the Cot-ter!
For thae frank, rantin' ramblin' billies,
Fient haet o' them's ill-hearted fellows;
Except for breakin' o' their timer,
Or speakin' lightly o' their limmer,
Or shootin' o' a hare or morncock,
The ne'er a bit they're ill to poor folk.

But will ye tell me, Master Caesar,
Sure great folk's life's a life o' pleasure?
Nae cauld nor hunger e'er can steer them,
The very thought o't needna fear them.

CAESAR.

Lord, man, were ye but whyles whare
I am,
The gentles ye wad ne'er envy 'em.
It's true they needna starve nor sweat,
Through winter's cauld or simmer's heat;
[banes,
They've nae sair wark to craze their
And fill auld age wi' grips and granes:49
But human bodies are sic fools,
For a' their colleges and schools,
That when nae real ills perplex them,
They mak enow themsels to vex them;
And aye the less they hae to sturt50
them,
In like proportion less will hurt them.

A country fellow at the plough,
His acres till'd, he's right enough;
A country girl at her wheel,
Her dizzens done, she's unco weel;
But Gentlemen, and Ladies warst,
Wi' evendown want o' wark are curst.
They loiter, lounging, lank, and lazy;
Though deil haet51 ails them, yet uneasy;
Their days insipid, dull, and tasteless;
Their nights unquiet, lang, and restless;
And e'en their sports, their balls and races,
Their galloping through public places,
There's sic parade, sic pomp and art,
The joy can scarcely reach the heart,
The men cast out in party matches,
Then sowther a' in deep debauches;
Ae night they're mad wi' drink and whoring,
Neist day their life is past enduring.
The Ladies arm-in-arm in clusters,
As great and gracious a' as sisters;
But hear their absent thoughts o' ither.
They're a' run deils and jads the-gither.

Whyles, owre the wee bit cup and plait,
They sip the scandal potion pretty:
Or lee-lang nights, wi' crabbit leuks,
Pore owre the devil's pictured beaks;
Stake on a chance a farmer's stackyard,
And cheat like ony unhanged blackguard.
[man;
There's some exception, man and wo-
But this is Gentry's life in common.

45 Perhaps. 46 A trip. 47 Breaks the entail on his estate. 48 See bull-fights. 49 Pains and groans. 50 Trouble. 51 Devil a thing. 52 Solder. 53 A giddy girl.
By this, the sun was out o' sight,
And darker gloaming brought the night:

The bum-clock hum'd wi' lazy
The kye stood rowlin' i' the loan;
When up they gat and shook their lugs,
Rejoiced they wereena men, but dogs;
And each took aff his several way,
Resolved to meet some ither day.

TO A LOUSE,

ON SEEING ONE ON A LADY’S LONNET
AT CHURCH.

Burns's fastidious patrons and patronesses sometimes ventured to lecture him on the homelessness and vulgarity of some of his themes. "The Address to a Louse" was a notable instance. The poet defended it on account of the moral conveyed, and he was right, we think. He was ever impatient of criticism and suggestions; and, judging from the kind of criticisms and suggestions freauently offered to him, we may be glad that he so frequently followed his own judgment.

HA! where ye gaun, ye crowin’ ferlie!
Your impudence protects you sairly:
I canna say but ye strunt rarely,
Owre gauze and lace;
Though, faith, I fear ye dine but sparely
On sic a place
Ye ugly, creepin’, blastit wonner, [ner,
Detested, shunn’d, by saunt and sin—
How dare ye set your fit upon her,
Sae fine a lady?
Gae somewhere else, and seek your dinner
On some poor body
Swith, in some beggar's haffet squattle
There ye may creep, and sprawl, and sprattle
Wi' ither kindred, jumping cattle,
In shoals and nations;
Whare horn nor bane ne'er daur un-settle
Your thick plantations.

Now haud you there, ye're out o' sight
Below the fatt'ris, snug and tight;
Na, faith ye yet! ye'll no be right
Till ye've got on it,
The very tapmost, towering height
O' Miss’s bonnet.

My sooth! right bauld ye set your nose out,
As plump and gray as ony grozet:
Oh for some rank, mercurial rozet.
Or fell, red smeddum,
I’d gie you sic a hearty doze o’t,
Wad dress your droodum!

I wadna been surprised to spy
You on an auld wife’s flannen toy.
Or aiblins some bit duddie boy,
On’s wyliecoat.
But Miss’s fine Lunardi [8] fie!
How daur ye do’t?

O Jenny, dinna toss your head,
And set your beauties a’ abraid!
Ye little ken what cursed speed
The blastie’s makin’!

The winks and finger-ends, I dread,
Are notice takin’!

Oh wad some power the gistie gie us
To see ousells as others see us!
It wad frae mony a blunder free us,
And foolish notion; [us
What airs in dress and gait wad leave
And even devotion!

Your better art o' hiding.

Think, when your castigated pulse
Gies now and then a wallop,
What raging must his veins convulse,
That still eternal gallop:
Wi' wind and tide fair i' your tail,
Right on ye scud your sea-way;
But in the teeth o' baith to sail,
It makes an unco lee-way.

See social life and glee sit down,
All joyous and unthinking, [growr
Till, quite transmogrified, 5 they're Debauchery and drinking:
Oh would they stay to calculate
The eternal consequences:
Or your more dreaded hell to state,
Damnation of expenses!

Ye high, exalted, virtuous dames,
Tied up in godly laces,
Before ye gie poor frailty names
Suppose a change o' cases;

Mossgie, February 22, 1786.

TO A MOUNTAIN DAISY,

ON TURNING ONE DOWN WITH THE PLOUGH IN APRIL, 1786.

Wee, modest, crimson-tippèd flower,
Thou's met me in an evil hour;
For I maun crush amang the stoure 1
Thy slender stem;
To spare thee now is past my power,
Thou bonny gem.

Alas! it's no thy neibor sweet,
The bonny lerk, companion meet,
Bending thee 'mang the dewy weet,
Wi' speckled breast,
When upward springing, blithe, to greet,
The purpling east.

Cauld blew the bitter biting north
Upon thy early, humble birth;
Yet cheerfully thou glinted 2 forth
Amid the storm,
Scarce rear'd above the parent earth
Thy tender form.

The flaunting flowersour gardens yield,
High sheltering woods and wa's maun shield;
But thou, beneath the random bield 3
O' clad or stane,
Adorns the histie 4 stibble-field,
Unseen, alone.

There, in thy scanty mantle clad,
Thy snawie bosom sun-ward spread,
Thou lifts thy unassuming head
In humble guise;
But now the share upears thy bed,
And low thou lies!

Such is the fate of artless maid,
Sweet floweret of the rural shade!
By love's simplicity betray'd,
And guileless trust,
Till she, like thee, all soil'd, is laid
Low i' the dust.

Such is the fate of simple bard,
On life's rough ocean luckless start'd!
Unskilful he to note the card
Of prudent lore,
Till billows rage, and gales blow hard,
And whelm him o'er!

Such fate to suffering worth is given,
Who long with wants and woes has striven,
By human pride or cunning driven,
To misery's brink,
Till wrench'd of every stay but heaven,
He, ruin'd, sink!

Even thou who mourn'st the Daisy's fate,
That fate is thine—no distant date;
Stern Ruin's ploughshare drives, elate,
Full on thy bloom,
Till crush'd beneath the furrow's weight,
Shall be thy doom!

LAMENT,

OCCASIONED BY THE UNFORTUNATE ISSUE OF A FRIEND'S AMOUR.

After mentioning the appearance of "Holy Willie's Prayer," which alarmed the kirk session so much that they held several meetings to look over their spiritual artillery, if haply any of it might be pointed against profane rhymers, Burns states: "Unluckily for me, my wanderings led me on another side, within point-blank shot of their heaviest metal. This is the unfortunate story that gave rise to my printed poem, 'The Lament.' This was a most melancholy affair, which I cannot yet bear to reflect on, and had very nearly given me one or two of the principal qualifications for a place among those who have lost the character, and mistaken the reckoning of rationality. I had been for some days skulking from covert to covert, under all the terrors of a jail; as some ill-advised people had uncou-
How have I wish'd for fortune's charms
For her dear sake, and hers alone!
And must I think it!—is she gone,
My secret heart's exulting boast?
And does she heedless hear my groan?
And is she ever, ever lost?

Oh! can she bear so base a heart,
So lost to honour, lost to truth,
As from the fondest lover part,
The plighted husband of her youth!
Alas! life's path may be unsmooth!
Her way may lie through rough distress!

Then who her pangs and pains will
Her sorrows share, and make them less?

Ye wingèd hours that o'er us pass'd,
Enraptured more, the more enjoy'd,
Your dear remembrance in my breast,
My fondly-treasured thoughts employ'd.

That breast, how dreary now, and
For her too scanty once of room!
Even every ray of hope destroy'd,
And not a wish to gild the gloom!

The morn that warns th' approaching day,
Awakes me up to toil and woe:
I see the hours in long array,
That I must suffer, lingering, slow.
Full many a pang, and many a throe,
Keen recollection's direful train,
Must wring my soul, ere Phœbus, low,
Shall kiss the distant, western main.

And when my nightly couch I try,
Sore harass'd out with care and grief,
My toil-beat nerves, and tear-worn
Keep watchings with the nightly thief:
Or if I slumber, fancy, chief, [fright:
Reigns haggard-wild, in soar af-
Even day, all-bitter, brings relief,
From such a horror-breathing night.

O thou bright queen, who o'er th' expanse,
Now highest reign'st with boundless sway
Of hast thy silent-marking glance
Observed us, fondly wandering stray!
The time unheeded, sped away, [high,
While love's luxurious pulse beat
Beneath thy silver-gleaming ray,
To mark the mutual kindling eye.

plied the merciless pack of the law at my heels. I had taken the last farewell of my few friends; my chest was on the road to Greenock; I had composed the last song I should ever measure in Caledonia; 'The Gloomy Night is Gathering Fast,' when a letter from Dr. Blacklock to a friend of mine overthrew all my schemes, by opening new prospects to my poetic ambition.

It is scarcely necessary, "Gilbert Burns says, "to mention that 'The Lament' was composed on that unfortunate passage in his matrimonial history which I have mentioned in my letter to Mrs. Dunlop. [alluding to his connexion with Jean Armour.] After the first distraction of his feelings had subsided, that connexion could no longer be concealed. Robert durst not engage with a family in his poor, unsettled state, but was anxious to shield his partner by every means in his power, from the consequences of their imprudence. It was agreed, therefore, between them, that they should make a legal acknowledgment of an irregular and private marriage, that he should go to Jamaica to push his fortune, and that she should remain with her father till it might please Providence to put the means of supporting a family in his power."

"Alas! how oft does goodness wound itself,
And sweet affection prove the spring of woe!"
—Home.

O thou pale orb, that silent shines,
While care-untroubled mortals sleep!
Thou seest a wretch that inly pines,
And wanders here to wail and weep!
With woe I nightly vigils keep
Beneath thy wan, unwarming beam;
And mourn, in lamentation deep,
How life and love are all a dream.

I joyless view thy rays adorn
The faintly-marked distant hill:
I joyless view thy trembling horn,
Reflected in the gurgling rill:
My fondly-fluttering heart, be still!
'Thou busy power, remembrance cease!
Ah! must the agonising thrill
For ever bar returning peace!

No idly-feign'd poetic pains
My sad, love-lorn lamentings claim;
No shepherd's pipe—Arcadian strains;
No fabled tortures, quaint and tame;
The plighted faith; the mutual flame;
The oft-attested Powers above;
The promised father's tender name;
These were the pledges of my love!

Encircled in her clasping arms, [flown,
How have the raptured moments

POEMS.
Oh! scenes in strong remembrance set!
Scenes never, never to return!
Scenes, if in stupor I forget,
Again I feel, again I burn!
From every joy and pleasure torn,
Life's weary vale I wander through;
And hopeless, comfortless, I'll mourn
A faithless woman's broken vow.

DESPONDENCY:

AN ODE.

A sorrow or a cross is half conquered when, by telling it, some dear friend becomes, as it were, a sharer in it. Burns poured out his troubles in verse with a like result. He says, "I think it is one of the greatest pleasures attending a poetic genius, that we can give our woes, cares, joys, and loves, an embodied form in verse, which to me is ever immediate ease."

O P P R E S S ' D with grief, oppress'd with care,
A burden more than I can bear,
I set me down and sigh:
O life! thou art a galling load,
Along a rough and weary road,
To wretches such as I!
Dim backward as I cast my view,
What sickening scenes appear!
What sorrows yet may pierce me through,
Too justly I may fear!
Still caring, despairing,
Must be my bitter doom;
My woes here shall close ne'er,
But with the closing tomb!

Happy, ye sons of busy life,
Who, equal to the bustling strife,
No other view regard!
Even when the wish'd end's denied,
Yet while the busy means are plied,
They bring their own reward:
Whilst I, a hope-abandon'd wight,
Unfitted with an aim,
Meet every sad returning night
And joyless morn the same;
You, bustling, and justling,
Forget each grief and pain;
I, listless, yet restless,
Find every prospect vain.

How blest the solitary's lot,
Who, all-forgetting, all-forgot,
Within his humble cell,
The cavern wild with tangling roots,
Sits o'er his newly-gather'd fruits,
Beside his crystal well!
Or, haply, to his evening thought,
By unfrequented stream,
The ways of men are distant brought,
A faint collected dream;
While praising, and raising
His thoughts to heaven on high,
As wand'ring, meand'ring,
He views the solemn sky.

Than I, no lonely hermit placed
Where never human footstep traced,
Less fit to play the part;
The lucky moment to improve,
And just to stop, and just to move,
With self-respecting art: [Joys
But, ah! those pleasures, loves, and
Which I too keenly taste,
The solitary can despise,
Can want, and yet be blest!
He needs not, he needs not,
Or human love or hate,
Whilst I here, must cry here
At perfidy ingrate!

Oh! enviable, early days, [maze,
When dancing thoughtless pleasure's
To care, to guilt unknown!
How ill exchanged for riper times,
To feel the follies, or the crimes,
Of others, or my own!
Ye tiny elves that guiltless sport,
Like linnets in the bush,
Ye little know the ills ye court,
When manhood is your wish!
The losses, the crosses,
That active man engage!
The fears all, the tears all,
Of dim declining age!

ODE TO RUIN.

Currie says:—"It appears from internal evidence that the above lines were composed in 1786, when 'Hungry Ruin had him in the wind.' The 'dart' that 'Cut my dearest tie,
And quivers in my heart,
is evidently an allusion to his separation from his 'bonny Jean.' Burns seems to have glanced into futurity with a prophetic eye: images of misery and woe darkened the distant vista: and when he looked back on his career he saw little to console him.—
'I have been, this morning,' he observes, taking a peep through, as Young finely says, 'The dark postern of time long elaps'd.” "Twas a rueful prospect! What a tissue of thoughtlessness, weakness, and folly! My life reminded me of a ruined temple. What strength, what proportion, in some parts! What unsightly gaps, what prostrate ruin in others! I knelted down before the Father of mercies and said, "Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son." I rose, eased and strengthened.

ALL hail! inexorable lord! At whose destruction breathing word The mightiest empires fall; Thy cruel, woe-delighted train, The ministers of grief and pain, A sullen welcome, all! With stern-resolved, despairing eye, I see each aimed dart; For one has cut my dearest tie, And quivers in my heart. Then lowering and pouring, The storm no more I dread; Though thick'ning and black'ning, Round my devoted head.

And thou grim power, by life abhor'd, While life a pleasure can afford, Oh! hear a wretch's prayer! No more I shrink appall'd, afraid; I court, I beg thy friendly aid To close this scene of care! When shall my soul, in silent peace Resign life's joyless day; My weary heart its throbbings cease Cold mouldering in the clay? No fear more, no tear more, To stain my lifeless face; Enclasped, and grasped Within thy cold embrace!

ADDRESS OF BEELZEBUB TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE HIGHLAND SOCIETY.

The history of this poem is as follows:—"On Tuesday, May 23, there was a meeting of the Highland Society at London for the encouragement of the fisheries in the Highlands, &c. Three thousand pounds were immediately subscribed by eleven gentlemen present for this particular purpose. The Earl of Breadalbane informed the meeting that five hundred persons had agreed to emigrate from the estates of Mr. Macdonald of Glengarry; that they had subscribed money, purchased ships, &c., to carry their design into effect. The noblemen and gentlemen agreed to co-operate with the Government to frustrate their design; and to recommend to the principal noblemen and gentlemen in the Highlands to endeavour to prevent emigration, by improving the fisheries, agriculture, and manufactures, and particularly to enter into a subscription for that purpose." This appeared in the Edinburgh Advertiser of 30th May, 1786. Remembering the outcry made a few years ago against Highland evictions, we cannot help being somewhat surprised at the poet's indignation. Mackenzie of Applegoss, who figures in the poem, was a liberal landlord. Mr. Knox, in his tour of the Highlands written about the same time as the Address, states that he had relinquished all feudal claims upon the labour of his tenants, paying them for their labour. The Address first appeared in the Scot's Magazine with the following heading:—"To the Right Honourable the Earl of Breadalbane, President of the Right Honourable and Honourable the Highland Society, which met on the 23d of May last, at the Shakespeare, Covent Garden, to concert ways and means to frustrate the designs of five hundred Highlanders, who, as the Society were informed by Mr. M—— of A——s, were so audacious as to attempt an escape from their lawful lords and masters, whose property they were, by emigrating from the lands of Mr. Macdonald of Glengarry, to the wilds of Canada, in search of that fantastic thing, Liberty."

BEEZLEBUB.
June 13th. Anno Mundi. 1790 [A. D. 1786.]

A DREAM.

The publication of "The Dream" in the Edin-burgh edition of the poems, according to many, did much to injure the poet with the dispensers of Government patronage. Mrs. Dunlop and others endeavoured in vain to prevent its publication. The free-spoken and humourous verses of Burns contrast oddly with the servile ode of Warton, which Burns represents himself as having fallen asleep in reading.

"Thoughts, words, and deeds, the statute blames with reason;
But surely dreams were ne'er indicted treason."

On reading in the public papers the Laureate's "Ode,"¹ with the other parade of June 4, 1786, the author was no sooner dropt asleep than he imagined himself transported to the birthday levee; and in his dreaming fancy made the following Address.—Burns.

GUID-MORRIX' to your Majesty!
May Heaven augment your blessings,
On every new birthday ye see,
A humble poet wishes!
My bardship here, at your levee,
On sic a day as this is,
Is sure an uncouth sight to see,
Among thae birthday dresses
Sae fine this day.

I see ye're complimented thrang,
By many a lord and lady:
"God save the king"'s a cuckoo sang
That's unco easy said aye;
The poets, too, a venal gang;
'Wi' rhymes weel-turn'd and ready,
Wad gar ye trow¹ ye ne'er do wrang.
But aye unerring steadly,
On sic a day.

For me, before a monarch's face,
Even there I winna flatter;
For neither pension, post, nor place,
Am I your humble debtor:

* Thomas Warton then filled this office.
His ode for June 4, 1786, begins as follows:—
"When freedom nursed her native fire
In ancient Greece, and ruled the lyre,
Her bards disdainful, from the tyrant's brow
The tinsel gifts of flattery tore,
But paid to guiltless power their willing vow,
And to the throne of virtuous kings," &c.

On these verses, the rhymes of the Ayrshire bard must be allowed to form an odd enough commentary.—Chambers.
So, nae reflection on your grace,
Your kingship to bespatter;
There's mony waur been o' the race,
And aiblins ane been better
Than you this day.

'Tis very true, my sovereign king,
My skill may weel be doubted:
But facts are chieft that winna ding,
And douna be disputed:
Your royal nest, beneath your wing,
Is e'en right reft and clouted
And now the third part of the string,
And less will gang about it
Than did ae day.†

Far be't frae me that I aspire
To blame your legislation,
Or say, ye wisdom want, or fire,
To rule this mighty nation!
But, faith! I muckle doubt, my sire,
Ye've trusted ministration
To chaps, wha, in a barn or byre,
Wad better fill'd their station
Than courts you day.

And now ye've gien auld Britain peace,
Her broken shins to plaister:
Your sair taxation does her fleece,
Till she has scarce a tester:
For me, thank God, my life's a lease,
Nae bargain wearing faster,
Or, faith! I fear that wi' the geese,
I shortly boost to pasture
I the craft some day.

I'm no mistrusting Willie Pitt,
When taxes he enlarges,
(And Will's a true guid fallow's get,‡
A name not envy spairges.)³
That he intends to pay your debt,
And lessen a' your charges;
But, God-save! let nae saving fit
Abridge your bonny barges §
And beats this day.

Adieu, my liege! may Freedom geck²
Beneath your high protection;
And may you rax Corruption's neck,
And gie her for dissection!
But since I'm here, I'll no neglect,
In loyal, true affection,
To pay your queen, with due respect,
My fealty and subjection
This great birthday.

Hail, Majesty Most Excellent!
While nobles strive to please γ,
Will ye accept a compliment
A simple poet gies ye?

I'm tauld ye're driving rarely;
But some day ye may gnaw your nails,
And curse your folly sairly,
That e'er ye brak Diana's pales,

The Holy Fair.*

This is by far the ablest of the satires Burns levelled at the Church; and his worst enemies could not avoid confessing that it was as well deserved as it was clever. Scenes such as the poet describes had become a scandal and a disgrace to the Church. The poem was met by a storm of abuse from his old enemies; but, amid all their railings, they did not fail to lay it to heart, and from that time forward there was a manifest improvement in the bearing of ministers and people on such occasions. This is not the least of its merits in the eyes of his countrymen of the present day. Notwithstanding the daring levity of some of its allusions and incidents, the poet has strictly confined himself to the sayings and doings of the assembled multitude—the sacred rite itself is never once mentioned.

Or, truth! ye'll stain the mitre
Some luckless day.

Ye've lately come athwart her;
A glorious galley, §§ stem and stern,
Weel rigg'd for Venus' barter;
But first hang out, that she 'll discern,

Then heave aboard your grapple-ain,
And, large upon her quarter,

And gie you lads a-plenty:
But sneer na British boys awa',
For kings are unco scant aye;²⁰
And German gentles are but sma',
They're better just than want aye

Ye're unco muckle dautit;²¹
But ere the course o' life be through,
It may be bitter dautit;²²
And I hae seen their coggie fu',²³
That yet hae tarrow²⁴ at it;
But or the day was done, I trow,
The laggen they hae clautit²⁵
Fu' clean that day.

A robe of seeming truth and trust
Hid crafty observation;
And secret hung, with poison'd crust,
The dirk of Defamation:
A mask that like the getron show'd,
Dye-varying on the pigeon;
And for a mantle, large and broad
He wrapt him in Religion.

—Hypocrisy a-la-Mode.

Upon a simmer Sunday morn,
When Nature's face is fair,
I walked forth to view the corn,
And sniff the caller¹ air.
The rising sun owre Galston† muirs.
Wi' glorious light was glintin';²
The hares were hirplin³ down the furs,⁴
The lav'rocks they werechantin'
Fu' sweet that day.

As lightsomely I glover'd⁵ abroad,
To see a scene sae gay,
Three hizzies,⁶ early at the road,
Cam skelpin' up the way;
Twa had manteeles o' dolefu' black,
But ane wi' lýtart⁷ lining;
The third, that gaed a-ween a-back,
Was in the fashion shining
Fu' gay that day.

The twa appear'd like sisters twin,
In feature, form, and claes;
Their visage, wither'd, lang, and thin,
And sour as ony slaes:
The third cam up, hap-step-and-lowp,
As light as ony lambie,
And wi' a curchie low did stoop,
As soon as e'er she saw me,
Fu' kind that day.

Wi' bonnet aff, quoth I, "Sweet lass,
I think ye seem to ken me;
I'm sure I've seen that bonny face,
But yet I canna name ye.
Quo' she, and laughin' as she spak,
And takes me by the hands,
"Ye, for my sake, hae gien the feck⁸
Of a' the ten commands

To spend an hour in daffin':
Gin ye'll go there, yon runkled pair,
We'll get famous laughin',

Quoth I, "With a' my heart, I'll do't,
I'll get my Sunday's sark on,
And meet you on the holy spot;
Faith, we're hae fine markrin'!
Then I gaed hame at crowdie-time,
And soon I made me ready;
For roads were clad, frae side to side,
Wi' mony a weary body,
In droves that day.

Here farmers gash, in ridin' graith,
Gaed hoddin' by their cotters;
There, swankies young, in braw claid claith,
Are springin' owre the gutters;
The lasses, skelpin' bareft, thrang
In silks and scarlets glitter;
Wi' sweet-milk cheese, in mony a whang,
And farls, baked wi' butter,
Fu' crump that day.

When by the plate we set our nose,
Weel heaped up wi' ha'pence,
A greedy glower Black-bonnet throws,
And we maun draw our tippence.
Then in we go to see the show,
On very side they're gath'rin'
Some carrying dails, some chairs and stools,
And some are busy bleth'rin'
Right loud that day.

Here stands a shed to send the showers,
And screen our country gentry,
There Racer Jess,§ and twa-three whores,

Are blinkin' at the entry.
Here sits a raw of tittlin' jades,
Wi' heaving breast and bare neck,
And there a batch o' webster lads,
Blackguarding frae Kilmarnock,
For fun this day.

Here some are thinkin' on their sins,
And some upo' their claes;
Ane curses feet that fyled his shins,
Anither sighs and prays:
On this hand sits a chosen swatch,
Wi' screw'd-up grace-proud faces;
On that a set o' chaps at watch,
Thrang winking on the lasses to chairs that day.

Oh, happy is that man and blest!
Nae wonder that it pride him!
Whase a'ne dair less, that he likes best,
Comes clinking down beside him!
Wi' arm-reposed on the chair back,
He sweetly does compose him;
Which, by degrees, slips round her neck,
An's loof upon her bosom,
Unkenn'd that day.

Now a' the congregation o'er
Is silent expectation:
For Moodie's speels the holy door,
Wi' tidings o' damnation.
Should Hornie, as in ancient days,
'Mang sons o' God present him,
The very sight o' Moodie's face
To's ain hame had sent him
Wi' fright that day.

Hear how he clears the points o' faith
Wi' rattlin' and wi' thumpin'!
Now meekly calm, now wild in wrath,
He's stampin' and he's jumpin'!
His lengthen'd chin, his turn'd-up snout,

§ The following notice of Racer Jess appeared in the newspapers of February, 1838:
"Died at Mauchline a few weeks since, Janet Gibson, consigned to immortality by Burns in his 'Holy Fair,' under the turf appellation of 'Racer Jess.' She was the daughter of 'Poozie Nannie,' who figures in 'The Jolly Beggars.' She was remarkable for her pedestrian powers, and sometimes ran long distances for a wager."

Moodie was the minister of Riccarton, and one of the heroes of "The Twa Herds." He was a never-failing assistant at the Mauchline sacraments. His personal appearance and style of oratory were exactly such as described by the poet. He dwelt chiefly on the terrors of the law. On one occasion he told the audience that they would find the text in John viii. 44, but it was so applicable to their case that there was no need of his reading it to them. The verse begins, "Ye are of your father the devil."
His eldritch 25 squeal, and gestures,
Oh, how they fire the heart devout,
Like caustharian plasters,
On sic a day!

But, hark! the tent has changed its voice!
There's peace and rest nac langer:
For a' the real judges rise,
They canna sit for anger.
Smith 26 opens out his cauld harangues
On practice and on morals;
And aff the godly pour in thrangs,
To gie the jars and barrels
A lift that day.

What signifies his barren shine
Of moral powers and reason?
His English style and gesture fine,
Are a' clean out o' season.
Like Socrates or Antonine,
Or some auld pagan heathen,
The moral man he does define,
But ne'er a word o' faith in
That's right that day.

In guid time comes an antidote;
Against sic poison'd nostrum;
For Peebles, fine the Water-fit,
Ascends the holy rostrum:

A BARD'S EPITAPH.

Of this beautiful epitaph, which Burns wrote for himself, Wordsworth says,—"Here is a sincere and solemn avowal—a public declara-

Can others teach the course to steer,
Yet runs himself life's mad career
Wild as the wave? [tear,

Or darkling grubs this earthly hole,
In low pursuit;
Know, prudent, cautious self-control
Is wisdom's root.

A DEDICATION TO GAVIN HAMILTON, ESQ.

EXPECT na, sir, in this narration,
A fleecin',\(^{1}\) flockin'\(^{2}\) dedication,
To roose\(^{3}\) you up, and ca you guid,
And sprung o' great and noble bluid,
Because ye're surnamed like his Grace,
Perhaps related to the race;
Then when I'm tired, and sae are ye.
Wi' mony a fulsome, sinfu' lie,
Set up a face, how I stop short,
For fear your modesty be hurt.
This may do—maun do, sir, wi' them wha [wamefu].
Maun please the great folks for a
For me! sae laigh! I needna bow.
For, Lord be thankit, I can plough;
And when I downa six yoke a naig,
Then, Lord be thankit, I can beg;
Sae I shall say, and that's nae flatterin',
Its just sic poet, and sic patron.

The poet, some guid angel help him,
Or else, I fear, some ill ane skelp' him,
He may do weel for a' he's done yet,
But only—he's no just begun yet.

The patron, (sir, ye maun forgie me,
I winna lie, come what will o' me,) On every hand it will allow'd be,
He's just—nae better than he should be.

I readily and freely grant,
He downa see a poor man want;
What's no his ain he winna tak it,
What ance he says he winna break it;
Ought he can lend he'll no refus't,
Till aft his guidness is abused,
And rascals whyles that do him wrang,
Even that he doesna mind it lang-
As master, landlord, husband, father,
He doesna fail his part in either.

But then nae thanks to him for a' that;
Nae godly symptom ye can ca' that;
It's naething but a milder feature Of our poor sinfu', corrupt nature: Ye'll get the best o' moral works, 'Mang black Gentoos and pagan Turks,
Or hunters wild on Ponotaxi,
Wha never heard of orthodoxy.
That he's the poor man's friend in need,
The gentleman in word and deed,
It's no through terror of damnation;
It's just a carnal inclination.

Morality thou deadly bane,
Thy tens o' thousands thou hast slain! Vain is his hope whose stay and trust is In moral mercy, truth, and justice!

No—stretch a point to catch a plack; Abuse a brother to his back:
Steal through a winnock frae a whore, But point the rake that takes the door, Be to the poor like ony whustane,

And hand their noses to the grunstane, Ply every art o' legal thieving;
No matter, stick to sound believing.

Learn three-mile prayers, and half-mile graces,
[faces; Wi' weel-spread looves, and lang wry Grant up a solemn, lengthen'd groan,
And damn a' parties but your own;
I'll warrant then, ye're nae deceiver— A steady, sturdy, stanch believer.

O ye wha leave the springs o' Calvin,
For gumlie dubs of your ain delvin'! Ye sons of heresy and error,
Ye'll some day squeal in quaking terror! When Vengeance draws the sword in wrath,
And in the fire throws the sheath;
When Ruin, with his sweeping besom, Just frets till Heaven commission gies him; [moans, While o'er the harp pale Misery And strikes the ever-deepening tones, Still louder shrieks, and heavier groans'

Your pardon, sir, for this digression, I maist forgit my Dedication; But when divinity comes 'cross me, My readers still are sure to lose me.

So, sir, ye see 'twas nae daft vapour, But I maturely thought it proper When a' my works I did review, To dedicate them, sir, to you: Because (ye needna tak it ill) I thought them something like yours, Then patronise them wi' your favour, And your petitioner shall ever—
I had amaist said, ever pray;
But that's a word I needna say: For prayin' I hae little skill o' t; I'm baith dead-sweer, and wretched ill o' t;
But I'll repeat each poor man's prayer That kens or hears about you, sir—

"May ne'er Misfortune's growling bark [Clerk!* Howl through the dwelling o' the May ne'er his generous, honest heart For that same generous spirit smart!"

ROBERT BURNS.

THE FAREWELL.

"The following touching stanzas," says Cunningham, "were composed in the autumn of 1786, when the prospects of the poet darkened, and he looked towards the West Indies as a place of refuge, and perhaps of hope. All who shared his affections are mentioned—his mother—his brother Gilbert—his illegitimate child, Elizabeth,—whom he consigned to his brother's care, and for whose support he had appropriated the copyright of his poems,—and his friends Smith, Hamilton, and Aiken; but in nothing he ever wrote was his affection for Jean Armour more tenderly or more naturally displayed."

"The valiant in himself, what can he suffer? Or what does he regard his single woes? But, when, alas! he multiplies himself, To dearer selves, to the loved tender fair, To those whose bliss, whose being hang upon him, To helpless children! then, oh, then! he feels The point of misery festering in his heart, And weakly weeps his fortune like a coward. Such, such am I!— undone!"

—THOMSON'S Edward and Eleanor.

FAREWELL, old Scotia's bleak domain,
Far dearer than the torrid plains
Where rich ananas blow!
Farewell, a mother's blessing dear!
A brother's sigh! a sister's tear!
My Jean's heart-rending throe!
Farewell, my Bess! though thou 'rt bereft
Of my parental care;
A faithful brother I have left,
My part in him thou 'lt share!
Adieu too, to you too,
My Smith, my bosom frien';
When kindly you mind me,
Oh, then befriend my Jean!

VERSES WRITTEN UNDER VIOLENT GRIEF.
The following lines, which first appeared in the Sun newspaper, April 1823, appear to have been originally written on a leaf of a copy of his poems presented to a friend:

ACCEPT the gift a friend sincere
Wad on thy worth be pressin';
Remembrance oft may start a tear,
But oh! that tenderness forbear,
Though 'twad my sorrows lessen.

My morning raise sae clear and fair,
I thought sair storms wad never
Bedew the scene; but grief and care
In wildest fury hae made bare
My peace, my hope, for ever!

You think I'm glad; oh, I pay weil
For a' the joy I borrow,
In solitude—then, then I feel
I canna to myself conceal
My deeply-ranklin' sorrow.

Farewell! within thy bosom free
A sigh may whiles awaken;
A tear may wet thy laughin' ee,
For Scotia's son—ance gay like thee
Now hopeless, comfortless, forsaken!

THE CALF.

TO THE REV. MR. JAMES STEVEN.
The Rev. James Steven was afterwards one of the Scottish clergy in London, and ultimately minister of Kilwinning in Ayrshire.
It appears that the poet, while proceeding to church at Mauchline, one day, called on his friend Mr. Gavin Hamilton, who, being unwell, could not accompany him, but desired him, as parents were wont to do with children, to bring home a note of the text. Burns called on his return, and sitting down for a minute at Mr. Hamilton's business table, wrote the following lines as an answer to his request. It is also said that the poet had a wager with his friend Hamilton, that he would produce a poem within a certain time, and that he gained it by producing "The Calf."

On his text, Malachi iv. 2—"And they shall go forth, and grow up like calves of the stall."

RIGHT, sir! your text I'll prove it true,
Though heretics may laugh;
For instance, there's yourself just now,
God knows, an unco calf!

As bless you wi' a kirk,
I doubt na, sir, but then we'll find
Ye're still as great a stirk. 1

But if the lover's raptured hour
Shall ever be your lot,
Forbid it, every heavenly power,
You e'er should be a stot! 2

Though, when some kind connubial
dear
Your but-and-ben 3 adorns,
The like has been that you may wear
A noble head of horns.

And in your lug, most reverend James,
To hear you roar and rowte, 4
Few men o' sense will doubt your claims
To rank amang the nowte. 5

And when ye're number'd wi' the dead,
Below a grassy hillock,
Wi' justice they may mark your head,
"Here lies a famous bullock!"

WILLIE CHALMERS.

Mr. W. Chalmers, a gentleman in Ayrshire, a particular friend of mine, asked me to write a poetic epistle to a young lady, his dulcinea. I had seen her, but was scarcely acquainted with her, and wrote as follows:
—R. B.

MADAM:

Wi' braw new branks, 1 in mickle pride,
And eke' a braw new brechan, 2
My Pegasus I'm got astride,
And up Parnassus pechin; 3 [crush,

Whilees owre a bush, wi' downward
The doited beastie 5 stammers;
Then up he gets, and off he sets,
For sake o' Willie Chalmers.

I doubt na, lass, that weel-kenn'd name
May cost a pair o' blushes;
I am nae stranger to your fame,
Nor his warm-urged wishes.
Your bonny face, sae mild and sweet,
His honest heart enamours,
And faith ye'll no be lost a whit,
Though waird 6 on Willie Chalmers:

Auld Truth hersel might swear ye're fair,
And Honour safely back her,
And Modesty assume your air,
And ne'er a ane mistak' her:
And sic twa love-inspiring een
Might fire even holy palmers;
Nae wonder then they've fatal been
To honest Willie Chalmers.

I doubt na Fortune may you shore [tie,
Some mim-mou'd 8 poucher'd 9 pries—
Fu' lifted up wi' Hebrew lore,
And band upon his breastie:
But oh! what signifies to you
His lexicons and grammars,
The feeling heart's the royal blue,
And that's wi' Willie Chalmers.

Some gapin', glowrin' country laird
May warsale 11 for your favour;
May claw his lug 12 and straik 13 his beard,
And hoast 14 up some palaver,
My bonny maid, before ye wed
'Sic clumsy-witted hammers, 15
Seek Heaven for help, and barefit skelp 16
Awa' wi' Willie Chalmers.

Forgive the bard! my fond regard
For ane that shares my bosom
Inspires my muse to gie 'm his dues,
For deil a hair I roose 17 him.
May powers aboon unite you soon,
And fructify your amours,—
And every year come in mair dear
To you and Willie Chalmers:

TAM SAMSON'S ELEGY.*

"No poet," says Cunningham, "ever emblazoned fact with fiction more happily than Burns; the hero of this poem was a respectable old nursery-seedsmen in Kilmarnock greatly addicted to sporting, and one of the poet's earliest friends, who loved curling on the ice in winter, and shooting on the moors in the season. When no longer able to march over hill and hag in quest of 'Pa'rick, teals, moor-pouts, and plivers,"

* When this worthy old sportsman went out last muirfowl season, he supposed it was to be, in Ossian's phrase, "the last of his fields," and expressed an ardent wish to die and be buried in the moors. On this hint the author composed his elegy and epitaph.—B.
he loved the to lie on the lang settle, and listen to the drols of others on field and flood; and when a good tale was told, he would cry, 'Hee, man! three at a shot; that was famous!' Some one having informed Tam, in his old age, that Burns had written a poem — a gay queer ane'—concerning him, he sent for the bard, and, in something like wrath, requested to hear it: he smiled grimly at the relation of his exploits, and then cried out, 'I'm no dead yet, Robin—I'm worth ten dead fowk: wherefore should ye say that I am dead?' Burns took the hint, retired to the window for a minute or so, and coming back, recited the 'per Contra,'

'Go, Fame, and canter like a filly,' with which Tam was so delighted that he rose unconsciously, rubbed his hands, and exclaimed, 'That's do—ha! ha!—that's do!' He survived the poet, and the epitaph is inscribed on his gravestone in the churchyard of Kilmarnock.'

"An honest man's the noblest work of God."
—Pope.

Has auld Kilmarnock seen the deil?
Or great Macklinlay† thrown his heel?
Or Robinson‡ again grown weel;
To preach and read?

"Na, waur than a!" cries ilk a chiel,
"Tam Samson's dead!"

Kilmarnock lang may grunt and grane,
And sigh, and sob, and greet her lane,
[wean
And cleed her barns, man, wife, and
In mourning weed;
To Death, she's dearly paid the kane—
Tam Samson's dead!

The brethren o' the mystic level
May hing their head in waefu' bevel,
While by their nose the tears will revel,
Like any bead;
Death's gien the lodge an unco devel—
Tam Samson's dead!

When Winter muffles up his cloak,
And binds the mire up like a rock;

When to the lochs the curlers flock
Wi' gleesome speed,
Wha will they station at the cock?—
Tam Samson's dead!

He was the king o' a the core,
To guard, or draw, or wick a bone;
Or up the rink like Jehu roar
In time o' need; [score,—
But now he lags on Death's hog.
Tam Samson's dead!

Now safe the stately salmon sail,
And trouts be-dropp'd wi' crimson hail;
And eels weel kenn'd for souple tail,
And geds§ for greed,
Since dark in Death's fish-creeel we wail
Tam Samson's dead!

Rejoice, ye birring paitricks§ a;
Ye cootie moorcocks, crowely craw;
Ye muckins,○ cock your fud fu' draw,
Withouten dead;

Your mortal foe is now awa,'—
Tam Samson's dead!

That waefu' morn be ever mourn'd
Saw him in shootin' graith‖ adorn'd
While pointers round impatient burn'd,
F' Rae couples freed;
But, och! he gaed and ne'er return'd:
Tam Samson's dead!

In vain auld age his body batters;
In vain the gout his ankles fetters;
In vain the burns cam' down like waters,
An acre braid!

Now every auld wife, greetin' clatters,
Tam Samson's dead!

Owre mony a weary hag‖ he limpit,
And aye the tither shot he thumpit,
Till coward Death behind him jumpit,
Wi' a deadly feide;
Now he proclaims, wi' tout‖ o' trumpets,
Tam Samson's dead!

When at his heart he felt the dagger,
He reel'd his wonted bottle-swagger,
But yet he drew the mortal trigger
Wi' weel-aim'd heed;
"Lord, five!" he cried, and owre did stagger—
Tam Samson's dead!

A PRAYER,
LEFT BY THE AUTHOR AT A REVEREND FRIEND'S HOUSE, IN THE ROOM WHERE HE SLEPT.
O THOU dread Power, who reign'st above!

I know Thou wilt me hear,
When for this scene of peace and love
I make my prayer sincere.
The hoary sire—the mortal stroke,
Long, long, be pleased to spare!
To bless his filial little flock,
And show what good men are.
She, who her lovely offspring eyes
With tender hopes and fears,
Oh, bless her with a mother's joys,
But spare a mother's tears!
Their hope—their stay—their darling youth,
In manhood's dawning blush—
Bless him, Thou GOD of love and truth,
Up to a parent's wish!
The beauteous seraph sister-band,
With earnest tears I pray,
[hand—
Thou know'st the snares on every Guide Thou their steps alway!
When soon or late they reach that
O'er life's rough ocean driven,
May they rejoice, no wanderer lost,
A family in heaven!

THE BRIGS OF AYR.

INSCRIBED TO JOHN BALLANTYNE, ESQ., AYR.

In the autumn of 1786, a new bridge was begun to be erected over the river at Ayr, in order to supersede an old structure which had long been found unsuitable, and was then becoming dangerous; and while the work was being proceeded with, under the chief magistracy of Mr. Ballantyne, the poet's generous patron, he seized the opportunity to display his gratitude by inscribing the poem to him. The idea of the poem appears to have been taken from Ferguson's "Dialogue between the Plainstanes and the Causeway," the treatment of the subject is, however, immeasurably superior to the older piece, and peculiarly Burns' own.

The simple bard, rough at the rustic plough,

What further eishmaclaver 27 might been said,
What bloody wars, if sprites had blood
No man can tell; but all before their sight,
A fairy train appear'd in order bright;
Adown the glittering stream they feaatly danced;
Bright to the moon their various dresses glanced:
They footed o'er the watery glass so
The infant ice scarce bent beneath their feet;
While arts of minstrelsy among them
And soul-ennobling bards heroic ditties sung.

Oh, had M'Lachlan, †‡ that can't inspire sage,
Been there to hear this heavenly band
When through his dear strathspeys they bore with Highland rage;
Or when they struck old Scotia's melting airs,
The lover's raptured joys or bleeding cares;
How would his Highland lug 29 been
And even his matchless hand with finer touch inspired!
No guess could tell what instrument
But all the soul of Music's self was heard;
Harmonious concert rung in every part,
While simple melody pour'd moving on the heart.

The Genius of the stream in front appears,
A venerable chief advanced in years;
His hoary head with water-lilies crown'd,
His manly leg with garter-tangle
Next came the loveliest pair in all the ring,
Sweet Female Beauty hand in hand
Then, crown'd with flowery hay, came Rural Joy,
And Summer, with his fervid-beaming

All-cheering Plenty, with her flowing horn,
Led yellow Autumn, wreathed with
Then Winter's time-bleach'd locks did hoary show:
By Hospitality with cloudless brow.
Next follow'd Courage, with his martial stride,
From where the Fae §§ wild-woody Benevolence, with mild, benignant air,
A female form came from the towers of Stair:
Learning and Worth in equal measures
From simple Catrine, their long-loved abode:
[a hazel wreath,
Last, white-robbed Peace, crowned with
To rustic Agriculture did bequeath
The broken iron instruments of death;
At sight of whom our sprites forgot their kindling wrath.

LINES

ON MEETING WITH LORD DAER.

In 1786, Professor Dugald Stewart, the well-known expounder of the Scottish system of metaphysics, resided in a villa at Catrine, on the Ayr, a few miles from the poet's farm; and having heard of his astonishing poetical productions, through Mr. Mackenzie, a talented and generous surgeon in Mauchline, he invited Burns to dine with him, accompanied by his medical friend. The poet seems to have been somewhat alarmed at the idea of meeting so distinguished a member of the literary world; and, to increase his embarrassment, it happened that Lord Daer, (son of the Earl of Selkirk,) an amiable young nobleman, was on a visit to the professor at the time. The result, however, appears to have been rather agreeable than otherwise to the poet, who has recorded his feelings on the subject in the following lines:

This wot ye all whom it concerns,
I, Rhymer Robin, alias Burns,
October twenty third,
A ne'er-to-be-forgotten day!
Sae fast I sprachled 1 up the brae,
I dander'd wi' a lord.

1 Clambered.

§§ The poet here alludes to Captain Montgomery of Coilsfield—soger Hugh—afterwards twelfth Earl of Eglinton, whose seat of Coilsfield is situated on the Feal, or Faile, a tributary stream of the Ayr.

|| A compliment to his early patroness, Mrs. Stewart of Stair.

27 Palaver. 28 Cat-gut. 29 Ear.

†‡ A well-known performer of Scottish music on the violin.—B.
I've been at drunken writers' feasts,
Nay, been bitch fou 'mang godly priests;
(Wi' rev'rence be it spoken!)
I've even jin'd the honour'd jorum
When mighty squireships o' the quorum,
Their hydra drouth did soken.

But wi' a lord!—stand out, my shin:
A lord—a peer—an earl's son!—
Up higher yet, my bonnet!
And sic a lord!—lang Scotch ells twa,
Our peerage he o'erlooks them a',
As I look o'er my sonnet.

But, oh! for Hogarth's magic power!
To show Sir Bardie's willyart glower,
And how he stared an stammer'd!
When goavan, as if led wi' branks,
And stumpin' on his ploughman shanks
He in the parlour hammer'd.

To meet good Stewart little pain is,
Or Scotia's sacred Demosthenes;
Thinks I, they are but men!
But Burns, my lord—guid God! I dooted!
My knees on ane anither knoited,
As faltering I gaed ben!

I sidling shelter'd in a nook,
And at his lordship steal't a look,
Like some portentous omen;
Except good sense and social glee,
And (what surprised me) modesty,
I marked nought uncommon.

I watch'd the symptoms o' the great,
The gentle pride, the lordly state,
The arrogant assuming;
The fient a pride, nae pride had he,
Nor sauce, nor state, that I could see,
Mair than an honest ploughman.

Then from his lordship I shall learn
Henceforth to meet with unconcern
One rank as weel's another;
Nae honest, worthy man need care
To meet wi' noble, youthfu' daer.
For he but meets a brother.

ADDRESS TO EDINBURGH.

Writing to his friend, William Chalmers, the poet says: "I enclose you two poems, which I have carded and spun since I passed Glenbuck. 'Fair Burnet' is the heavenly Miss Burnet, daughter of Lord Monboddo, at whose house I have had the honour to be more than once. There has not been anything nearly like her in all the combinations of beauty, grace, and goodness the great Creator has formed, since Milton's Eve on the first day of her existence."

EDINIA! Scotia's darling seat!
All hail thy palaces and towers,
Where once beneath a monarch's feet
Sat Legislation's sovereign powers,
From marking wildly-scatter'd flowers,
As on the banks of Ayr I stray'd,
And singing, lone, the lingering hours,
I shelter in thy honour'd shade.

Here wealth still swells the golden tide,
As busy Trade his labour plies;
There Architecture's noble pride
Bids elegance and splendour rise;
Here Justice, from her native skies,
High wields her balance and her rod;
There Learning, with his eagle eyes,
Seeks Science in her coy abode.

Thy sons, Edina! social, kind,
With open arms the stranger hail;
Their views enlarged, their liberal mind,
Above the narrow, rural vale;
Attentive still to Sorrow's wail,
Or modestMerit's silent claim;
And never may their sources fail
And never envy blot their name!

Thy daughters bright thy walks adorn,
Gay as the gilded summer sky,
Sweet as the dewy milk-white thorn,
Dears as the raptured thrill of joy!
Fair Burnet strikes th' adoring eye,
Heaven's beauties on my fancy shine;
I see the Sire of Love on high,
And own His work indeed divine.

There, watching high the least alarms,
Thy rough, rude fortress gleams afar:
Like some bold veteran, gray in arms,
And mark'd with many a seamy scar:
The ponderous wall and massy bar
Grim-rising o'er the rugged rock,
Have oft withstood assailing war,
And oft repell'd the invader's shock.
With awe-struck thought, and pitying tears,
I view that noble, stately dome,
Where Scotia's kings of other years,
Famed heroes! had their royal home:
Alas! how changed the times to come!
Their royal name low in the dust!
Their hapless race wild-wandering roam! [just.
Though rigid law cries out, 'Twas
Wild beats my heart to trace your steps,
Whose ancestors, in days of yore,
Through hostile ranks and ruin'd gaps
Old Scotia's bloody lion bore:
Even I who sing in rustic lore,
Laply, my sires have left their shed,
And faced grim Danger's loudest roar,
Bold-following where your father's led!

Edina! Scotia's darling seat!
All hail thy palaces and towers,
Where once beneath a monarch's feet
Sat Legislation's sovereign powers!
From marking wildly-scatter'd flowers,
As on the banks of Ayr I stray'd,
And singing, lone, the lingering hours,
I shelter in thy honour'd shade.

THE POET'S WELCOME TO HIS ILLEGITIMATE CHILD.*

There can be no doubt that the feeling which prompted the composition of this and similar poems was not that of the reckless libertine who was lost to all shame and was without regard for the good opinion of his fellows. Lockhart hits the truth when he says: — "To wave" (in his own language) "the quantum of the sin," he who, two years afterwards, wrote the ' Cotter's Saturday Night' had not, we may be sure, hardened his heart to the thought of bringing additional sorrow and unexpected shame to the

* The subject of these verses was the poet's illegitimate daughter whom, in "The Inventory," he styles his
"Sonsie, smirking, dear-bought Bess."
She grew up to womanhood, was married, and had a family. Her death is thus announced in the Scots Magazine, December 8, 1817: — "Died, Elizabeth Burns, wife of Mr. John Bishop, overseer at Polkemmet, near Whitburn. She was the daughter of the celebrated Robert Burns, and the subject of some of his most beautiful lines.

fireside of a widowed mother. But his false pride recoiled from letting his royal associates guess how little he was able to drown the whispers of the 'still small voice;' and the fermenting bitterness of a mind ill at ease within itself escaped, (as may be too often traced in the history of satirists,) in the shape of angry sarcasms against others, who, whatever their private errors might be, had at least done him no wrong. It is impossible not to smile at one item of consolation which Burns proposes to himself on this occasion:—
The mair they talk, I'm kenn'd the better;
E'en let them clash!
This is indeed a singular manifestation of the 'last infirmity of noble minds.'"

TO MRS C——,
ON RECEIVING A WORK OF HANNAH MORE'S.
THOU flattering mark of friendship kind,
Still may thy pages call to mind
The dear, the beauteous donor!
Though sweetly female every part,
Yet such a head, and more the heart,
Does both the sexes honour.
She show'd her taste refined and just
When she selected thee,
Yet deviating, own I must,
For so approving me.
But kind still, I mind still
The giver in the gift,
I'll bless her, and wiss her
A friend above the lift.

TO MISS LOGAN.
WITH BEATTIE'S POEMS AS A NEW-YEAR'S GIFT, JAN. 1, 1787.
Miss Susan Logan was the sister of the Major Logan, to whom Burns wrote a rhymed epistle. He was indebted to both for many pleasant hours when he was suffering from despondency.
AGAIN the silent wheels of time
Their annual round have driven,
And you, though scarce in maiden prime,
Are so much nearer heaven.
No gifts have I from Indian coasts
The infant year to hail,
I send you more than India boasts,
In Edwin's simple tale.
Our sex with guile and faithless love
Is charged, perhaps, too true,
But may, dear maid, each lover prove
An Edwin still to you!

VERSEs
INTENDED TO BE WRITTEN BELOW A NOBLE EARL'S PICTURE.
"The enclosed stanzas," said the poet, in a letter to his patron, the Earl of Glencairn,

"I intended to write below a picture or profile of your lordship, could I have been so happy as to procure one with anything of a likeness."

WHOSE is that noble, dauntless brow?
And whose that eye of fire? [mien]
And whose that generous princely
Even rooted foes admire?
Stranger, to justly show that brow,
And mark that eye of fire, [tints]
Would take His hand, whose vernal
His other works admire.
Bright as a cloudless summer sun,
With stately port he moves;
His guardian seraph eyes with awe
The noble ward he loves.
Among the illustrious Scottish sons
That chief thou mayst discern:
Mark Scotia's fond returning eye——
It dwells upon Glencairn.

TO A HAGGIS.
The haggis is a dainty peculiar to Scotland, though it is supposed to be an adaptation of a French dish. It is composed of minced offal of mutton, mixed with meal and suet, to which are added various condiments by way of seasoning, and the whole is tied up tightly in a sheep's stomach, and boiled therein. Although the ingredients of this dish are not over inviting, the poet does not far exceed poetic licence in singing its praises. We would recommend the reader to turn to page 173 of Vol. i. of Wilson's "Noctes Ambrosianae," where he will find a graphic and humorous description of a monster haggis, and what resulted from cutting it up. The Edinburgh Literary Journal, 1829., made the following statement. — "About sixteen years ago there resided at Mauchline Mr Robert Morrison, cabinetmaker. He was a great crony of Burns', and it was in Mr Morrison's house that the poet usually spent the 'mids o' the day' on Sunday. It was in this house that he wrote his celebrated 'Address to a Haggis, after partaking liberally of that dish as prepared by Mrs. Morrison.'"

FAIR fa' your honest, sonsie¹ face,
Great chieftain o' the puddin' race!
Aboon them a' ye tak your place,
Painch, tripe, or thairm?²
Weel are ye worthy of a grace
As lang's my arm.

The groaning trencher there ye fill,
Your hurdles like a distant hill,
Your pin* wad help to mend a mill
In time of need,
While through your pores the dews distil
Like amber bead.

His knife see rustic labour dight, 3
And cut you up wi' ready slight,
Trenching your gushing entrails bright
Like any ditch;
And then, oh, what a glorious sight,
Warm-reekin', 4 rich!

Then horn for horn they stretch and strive,
Deil tak the hindmost, on they drive,
Till all their well-swollen bellies byye^+
Are bent like drums;
Then auld guidman, maist like to rive, 5
Bethankit hums.

Is there that owre his French ragout, 6
Or olio that wad staw a sow; 7
Or fricassee wad make her spew?
Wi' perfect scanner, 8
Looks down wi' sneering, scornful' view
On sic a dinner?

Poor devil! see him owre his trash,
As feckless 9 as a wother'd rash,
His spindle-shank a guid whip-lash,
His nieve 10 anit;
Through bloody flood or field to dash,
Oh, how unfit!

But mark the rustic, haggis-fed,
The trembling earth resounds his tread,
Clap in his walie nieve a blade,
He 'll mak it whissle;
And legs, and arms, and heads will sned, 11
Like taps o' thrissle.

Ye powers wha mak mankind your care,
And dish them out their bill o' fare,

Auld Scotland wants nae skinking ware! 12
That jaups 13 in luggies, 14
But if ye wish her grateful prayer,
Gie her a haggis!

NATURE'S LAW.
HUMBLY INSCRIBED TO GAVIN HAMILTON, ESQ.

These verses were first published in Mr. Pickering's edition of the poet's works, printed from the original MS. in the poet's handwriting. They appear to have been written shortly after "Bonny Jean" had presented him with twins.

"Great Nature spoke—observant man obey'd." —POPE.

LET other heroes boast their scars,
The marks of sturt and strife;
And other poets sing of wars,
The plagues of human life:
Shame fa' the fun, wi' sword and gun,
To slap mankind like lumber!
I sing his name and nobler fame,
Wha multiplies our number.

Great Nature spoke, with air benign,
"Go on, ye human race!"
This lower world I you resign;
Be fruitful and increase.

The liquid fire of strong desire
I've pour'd it in each bosom;
Here, in this hand, does mankind stand,
And there is beauty's blossom!"

The hero of these artless strains,
A lowly bard was he,
Who sung his rhymes in Coila's plains,
With mickle mirth and glee;
Kind Nature's care had given his share
Large of the flaming current;
And all devout, he never sought
To stem the sacred torrent.

He felt the powerful, high behest,
Thrill, vital, through and through;
And sought a correspondent breast
To give obedience due:
Propitious Powers screen'd the young
From mildews of abortion:
And lo! the bard, a great reward,
Has got a double portion!

Auld cantie Coila may count the day,
As annual it returns,
The third of Libra's equal sway,
That gave another Burns,
With future rhymes, and other times,
To emulate his sire;
To sing old Coila in nobler style,
With more poetic fire.

Ye powers of peace, and peaceful song,
Look down with gracious eyes;
And bless auld Coila, large and long,
With multiplying joys;
Lang may she stand to prop the land,
The flower of ancient nations;
And Burns' spring, her fame to sing,
To endless generations!

THE HERMIT.

WRITTEN ON A MARBLE SIDEBOARD IN
THE HERMITAGE BELONGING TO THE
DUKE OF ATHOLE, IN THE WOOD OF ABERFELDY.

WHO'E'R thou art, these lines now reading, [receding,
Think not, though from the world
I joy my lonely days to lead in
This desert drear; [sing,
That fell remorse, a conscience bleed-
Hath led me here.
No thought of guilt my bosom sours,
Free-will'd I fled from courtly bowers;
For well I saw in halls and towers
That lust and pride,
The arch-fiend's dearest, darkest
powers,
In state preside.

I saw mankind with vice incrusted;
I saw that Honour's sword was rusted;
That few for ought but folly lusted;
That he was still deceived who trusted
To love or friend,
And hither came, with men disgusted,
My life to end.

in this lone cave, in garments lowly,
Alike a foe to noisy folly,
And brow-bent gloomy melancholy,
I wear away
My life, and in my office holy Consume the day.

This rock my shield, when storms are blowing,
The limpid streamlet yonder flowing
Supplying drink, the earth bestowing
My simple food.
But few enjoy the calm I know in
This desert wood.

Content and comfort bless me more in
This grot than e'er I felt before in
A palace—and with thoughts still soaring
To God on high,
Each night and morn, with voice imploring,
This wish I sigh—

"Let me. O Lord! from life retire,
Unknown each guilty worldly fire,
Remorse's throb, or loose desire,
And when I die,
Let me in this belief expire—
To God I fly."

Stranger, if full of youth and riot,
And yet no grief has marr'd thy quiet,
Thou haply throw'st a scornful eye at
The hermit's prayer;
But if thou hast good cause to sigh at Thy fault or care;
If thou hast known false love's vexation,
Or hast been exiled from thy nation,
Or guilt affrights thy contemplation,
And makes thee pine,
Oh! how must thou lament thy station,
And envy mine!

SKETCH OF A CHARACTER.

"This fragment," says Burns to Dugald Stewart, "I have not shown to man living till I now send it to you. It forms the post-tulate, the axioms, the definition of a character, which, if it appear at all, shall be placed in a variety of lights. This particular part I send you merely as a sample of my hand at portrait-sketching."

VERSES

ON READING IN A NEWSPAPER THE DEATH OF JOHN M'LEOD, ESQ., BROTHER TO A YOUNG LADY, A PARTICULAR FRIEND OF THE AUTHOR'S.

SAD thy tale, thou idle page,
And rueful thy alarms
Death tears the brother of her love
From Isabella's arms

Sweetly deckt with pearly dew
The morning rose may blow;
But cold successive noontide blasts
May lay its beauties low.

Fair on Isabella's morn
The sun propitious smiled;
But, long ere noon, succeeding clouds
Succeeding hopes beguiled.
Fate oft tears the bosom chords
That nature finest strung:
So Isabella's heart was form'd,
And so that heart was wrung.

Were it in the poet's power,
Strung as he shares the grief
That pierces Isabella's heart,
To give that heart relief!

Dread Omnipotence alone
Can heal the wound he gave;
Can point the grimy grief-worn eyes
To scenes beyond the grave.

Virtue's blossoms there shall blow,
And fear no withering blast;
There Isabella's spotless worth
Shall happy be at last.

THE HUMBLE PETITION OF BRUAR WATER.*

TO THE NOBLE DUKE OF ATHOLE.

My lord, I know your noble ear
Woe ne'er assails in vain;
Embolden'd thus, I beg you'll hear
Your humble slave complain,
How saucy Phoebus' scorching beams,
In flaming summer pride, [streams,
Dry - withering, waste my foamy
And drink my crystal tide.

The lightly-jumpin' glowerin' trouts,
That through my waters play,
If, in their random, wanton spouts,
They near the margin stray;
If, hapless chance! they linger lang,
I'm scorching up so shallow,
They 're left, the whitening stanes among,
In gasping death to wallow.

Last day I grat wi' spite and teen,
As Poet Burns came by,
That to a bard I should be seen
Wi' half my channel dry;
A panegyric rhyme, I ween,
Even as I was he shored1 me;
But had I in my glory been,
He, kneeling, wad adored me.

* Bruar Falls, in Athole, are exceedingly picturesque and beautiful: but their effect is much impaired by the want of trees and shrubs.—B
Here, foaming down the shelvy rocks,
In twisting strength I run;
There, high my boiling torrent smokes,
Wild-roaring o'er a linn.

Enjoying large each spring and well,
As nature gave them me,
I am, although I say 'tis myself,
Worth a gaun2 a mile to see.

Would, then, my noble master please
To grant my highest wishes,
He'll shade my banks wi' towering trees,
And bonny spreading bushes.
Delighted doubly, then, my lord,
You'll wander on my banks,
And listen mony a grateful bird
Return you tuneful thanks.

The sober laverock,3 warbling wild,
Shall to the skies aspire;
The gowdspink, Music's gayest child,
Shall sweetly join the choir;
The blackbird strong, the lintwhite clear,
The mavis4 mild and mellow;
The robin pensive autumn cheer,
In all her locks of yellow.

This, too, a covert shall insure,
To shield them from the storms;
And coward maukins5 sleep secure
Low in their grassy forms,
The shepherd here shall make his seat,
To weave his crown of flowers;
Or find a sheltering safe retreat
From prone descending showers.

And here, by sweet endearing stealth,
Shall meet the loving pair,
Despising worlds with all their wealth,
As empty idle care.
The flowers shall vie in all their
The hour of heaven to grace,
And birk's extend their fragrant arms
To screen the dear embrace.

Here haply, too, at vernal dawn,
Some musing bard may stray,
And eye the smoking dewy lawn,
And misty mountain gray,
Or, by the reaper's nightly beam,6
Mild-chequering through the trees,
Rave to my darkly-dashing stream,
Hoarse swelling on the breeze.

Let lofty firs, and ashes cool,
My lowly banks o'erspread,
And view, deep-bending in the pool,
Their shadows' watery bed!
Let fragrant birk's in woodbine dress
My craggy cliffs adorn;
And, for the little songster's nest,
The close-emowering thorn.

So may old Scotia's darling hope,
Your little angel band,
Spring, like their fathers, up to prop
Their honour'd native land!
So may through Albion's furthest ken
To social-flowing glasses,
The grace be—"Athole's honest men,
And Athole's bonny lasses!"

his stream resounds.

As high in air the bursting torrents
As deep-recoiling surges foam below,
Prone down the rock the whitening

The hoary cavern, wide-surrounding,

CASTLE-GORDON.

Streams that glide in orient plains,
Never bound by Winter's chains!
Glowing here on golden sands,
There commix'd with foulest stains
From tyranny's empurpled bands.
These, their richly-gleaming waves,
I leave to tyrants and their slaves.
Give me the stream that sweetly laves
The banks by Castle-Gordon.
Spicy forests, ever gay,
Shading from the burning ray,
    Hapless wretches sold to toil,
Or the ruthless native's way,
    Bent on slaughter, blood, and spoil;
Woods that ever verdant wave,
I leave the tyrant and the slave,
    Give me the groves that lofty brave
     The storms by Castle-Gordon.
Wildly here without control,
Nature reigns and rules the whole;

Dearest to the feeling soul, [flood:

A WILD SCENE AMONG THE HILLS OF OCHTERTYRE.

Why, ye tenants of the lake,
For me your watery haunts forsake?
Tell me, fellow-creatures, why
At my presence thus you fly!
Why disturb your social joys,
Parent, filial, kindred ties?—
     Common friend to you and me,
Nature's gifts to all are free:
Peaceful keep your dimpling wave,
Busy feed, or wanton lave;
Or, beneath the sheltering rock,
Bide the surging billow's shock.

Conscious, blushing for our race,
Soon, too soon, your fears I trace.
Man, your proud usurping foe,
Would be lord of all below:
Plumes himself in freedom's pride,
Tyrant stern to all beside.
The eagle, from the clifty brow,
Marking you his prey below,
In his breast no pity dwells,
Strong necessity compels.
But man, to whom alone is given
A ray direct from pitying Heaven,
Glories in his heart humane—
And creatures for his pleasure slain
In these savage, liquid plains,
Only known to wandering swains,
Where the mossy rivulet strays,
   Far from human haunts and ways;
All on nature you depend,
And life's poor season peaceful spend.
Or, if man's superior might Dare invade your native right,
On the lofty ether borne,
Man with all his powers you scorn.
Swiftly seek, on clanging wings,
Other lakes and other springs;
And the foe you cannot brave
Scorn at least to be his slave.

TO MISS CRUIKSHANK,
A VERY YOUNG LADY. WRITTEN ON THE BLANK LEAF OF A BOOK PRESENTED TO HER BY THE AUTHOR.

This young lady was the subject of one of the poet's songs, "A Rosebud by my Early Walk." She was the daughter of Mr. Cruikshank, No. 30 St. James' Square, Edinburgh, with whom the poet resided for some time during one of his visits to Edinburgh. She afterwards became the wife of Mr. Henderson, a solicitor in Jedburgh.

BEAUTEOUS rosebud, young and gay,
Blooming in thy early May,
Never mayst thou, lovely flower!
Chilly shrink in sleety shower!
Never Boreas' hoary path,
Never Eurus' poisonous breath,
Never baleful stellar lights,
Taint thee with untimely blights!
Never, never reptile thief
Riot on thy virgin leaf!
Not even Sol too fiercely view
Thy bosom blushing still with dew!

Mayst thou long, sweet crimson gem,
Richly deck thy native stem;
'Till some evening, sober calm,
Dropping dews, and breathing balm,
While all around the woodland rings,
And every bird thy requiem sings;
Thou, amid the dirgeful sound,
Shed thy dying honours round,
And resign to parent earth
The loveliest form she e'er gave birth.

POETICAL ADDRESS TO MR. WILLIAM TYTLER.
WITH A PRESENT OF THE BARD'S PICTURE.

William Tytler, Esq., of Woodhouselee, to whom these lines were addressed, wrote a work in defence of Mary Queen of Scots, and earned the gratitude of Burns, who had all a poet's sympathies for the unfortunate and beautiful queen. Mr. Tytler was grandfather to Patrick Fraser Tytler, the author of "The History of Scotland."

REVERED defender of beauteous Stuart,
Of Stuart, a name once respected,—
A name which to love was the mark of a true heart,
But now 'tis despised and neglected.
Though something like moisture con-
globes in my eye,
Let no one misdeem me disloyal;
A poor friendless wanderer may well claim a sigh, [royal.
Still more, if that wanderer were My fathers that name have revered on a throne;
My fathers have fallen to right it;
Those fathers would spurn their degenerate son,
That name should he scoffingly
Still in prayers for King George I most heartily join,
The queen and the rest of the gentry;
Be they wise, be they foolish, is nothing of mine—
Their title's avow'd by my country.
But why of this epocha make such a fuss
That gave us the Hanover stem;
If bringing them over was lucky for us,
I'm sure 'twas as lucky for them.
But, loyalty, truce! we're on dangerous ground, [alter?
Who knows how the fashions may
The doctrine to-day that is loyalty sound,
To-morrow may bring us a halter.
I send you a trifle, a head of a bard,
A trifle scarce worthy your care:
But accept it, good sir, as a mark of regard,
Sincere as a saint's dying prayer.
Now life's chilly evening dim shades
on your eye,
And ushers the long dreary night.
But you, like the star that athwart
[gilds the sky,
Your course to the latest is bright.

ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF ROB-ERT DUNDAS, ESQ., OF ARNIS-TON,*

LATE LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COURT OF SESSION.

In a letter to Dr. Geddes, Burns tells the fate of this poem, and makes his own comment:
—"The following elegy has some tolerable lines in it, but the incurable wound of my pride will not suffer me to correct, or even peruse, it. I sent a copy of it, with my best prose letter, to the son of the great man, the theme of the piece, by the hands of one of the noblest men in God's world—Alexander
Wood, surgeon. When, behold! his solicitor ship took no more notice of my poem or me than if I had been a strolling fiddler who had made free with his lady's name over a silly new reel! Did the gentleman imagine that I looked for any dirty gratuity!"

LONE on the bleaky hills the straying flocks [tering rocks;
Shun the fierce storms among the shel-
Down foam the rivulets, red with dashing rains; [tant plains;
The gathering floods burst o'er the dis-
Beneath the blast the leafless forests groan;
The hollow caves return a sullen moan.
Ye hills, ye plains, ye forests, and ye caves, [waves!
Ye howling winds, and wintry-swelling
Unheard, unseen, by human ear or eye,
Sad to your sympathetic scenes I fly;
Where, to the whistling blast and water's roar [plore.
Pale Scotia's recent wound I may de-
Oh heavy loss, thy country ill could bear!
A loss these evil days can ne'er repair!
Justice, the high vicegerent of her God,
Her doubtful balance eyed, and sway'd her rod;
She heard the tidings of the fatal blow,
And sunk, abandon'd to the wildest woe.

TO CLARINDA,

ON THE POET’S LEAVING EDINBURGH.

The maiden name of Clarinda was Agnes Craig. At the time Burns made her acquaintance she was the wife of a Mr. M’Lachlan, from whom she had been separated on account of incompatibility of temper, etc. She seems to have entertained a sincere affection for the poet. Burns, who was always engaged in some affair of the heart, seems to have been much less sincere. His letters to her are somewhat forced and stilted, and contrast very unfavourably with those of hers, which have been preserved. He soon forgot her, however, to her great regret and mortification. She was beautiful and accomplished, and a poetess. (See prefatory note to Letters to Clarinda.) Burns thus alludes to one of her productions:—

"Your last verses to me have so delighted me that I have got an excellent old Scots air that suits the measure, and you shall see them in print in the Scots Musical Museum, a work publishing by a friend of mine in this town. The air is 'The Banks of Spey,' and is most beautiful. I want four stanzas—you gave me but three, and one of them alluded to an expression in my former letter: so I have taken your first two verses, with a slight alteration in the second, and have added a third; but you must help me to a fourth. Here they are; the latter half of the first stanza would have been worthy of Sappho; I am in raptures with it:—

"'Talk not of Love, it gives me pain.
For love has been my foe;
He bound me with an iron chain,
And plunged me deep in wo.

"'But friendship's pure and lasting loves
My heart was form'd to prove;
There, welcome, win, and wear the prize,
But never talk of Love.

"'Your friendship much can make me blest.
Oh! why that bliss destroy?
Why urge the odious [only] one request
You know I must [will] deny?"

"P.S.—What would you think of this for a fourth stanza?

"'Your thought, if Love must harbour there.
Conceal it in that thought;
Nor cause me from my bosom tear
The very friend I sought.'"

These verses are inserted in the second volume of the Musical Museum.

CLARINDA, mistress of my soul,
The measured time is run!
The wretch beneath the dreary pole,
So marks his latest sun.

To what dark cave of frozen night
Shall poor Sylvander lie?
Deprived of thee, his life and light,
The sun of all his joy!

We part—but, by these precious drops
That fill thy lovely eyes!
No other light shall guide my steps
Till thy bright beams arise.

She, the fair sun of all her sex,
Has blest my glorious day;
And shall a glimmering planet fix
My worship to its ray?

TO CLARINDA.

WITH A PRESENT OF A PAIR OF DRINKING-GLASSES.

Fair empress of the poet’s soul,
And queen of poetesses;
Clarinda, take this little boon,
This humble pair of glasses.

And fill them high with generous juice,
As generous as your mind;
And pledge me in the generous toast—

"The whole of human kind!"
"To those that love us!"—second fill;
But not to those whom we love;
Lest we love those who love not us!
A third—"To thee and me, love!"

Long may we live! long may we love!
And long may we be happy!
And never may we want a glass
Well charged with generous nappy!

TO CLARINDA.

Before I saw Clarinda's face,
My heart was blithe and gay,
Free as the wind, or feather'd race
That hop from spray to spray.

But now rejected I appear,
Clarinda proves unkind;
I, sighing, drop the silent tear,
But no relief can find.

In plaintive notes my tale rehearses
When I the fair have found;
On every tree appear my verses
That to her praise resound.

But she, ungrateful, shuns my sight,
My faithful love disdains,
My vows and tears her scorn excite—
Another happy reigns.

Ah, though my looks betray,
I envy your success;
Yet love to friendship shall give way,
I cannot wish it less.

TO CLARINDA.

"I BURN, I burn, as when through ripen'd corn, are borne!"

By driving winds, the crackling flames
Now maddening wild, I curse that fatal night;
my guilty sight.

Now bless the hour which charm'd
In vain the laws their feeble force oppose;
[vanquish'd foes:]

Chain'd at his feet they groan Love's
In vain Religion meets my shrinking eye,
I dare not combat—but I turn and fly

Conscience in vain upbraids the unhal low d fire,
[expire;]

Love grasps its scorpions—stifled they Reason drops headlong from his sacred throne,

Your dear idea reigns, and reigns alone:
Each thought intoxicated homage yields,
And riots wanton in forbidden fields!

By all on high adoring mortals know!
By all the conscious villain fears below!
By your dear self!—the last great oath
I swear—

Nor life nor soul was ever half so dear!

LINES

WRITTEN IN FRIARS' CARSE HERMITAGE, ON THE BANKS OF THE NITH.

(First Version.)

Burns thought so well of this poem, that he preserved both copies. The first was written in June, 1783. The MS. of the amended copy is headed, "Altered from the foregoing, in December, 1788." The hermitage in which these lines were written was on the property of Captain Riddell of Friars' Carse, a beautiful house with fine grounds, a mile above Ellisland. One of the many kinds of flowers extend to the poet by Captain Riddell and his accomplished lady was the permission to wander at will in the beautiful grounds of Friars' Carse. The first six lines were graven with a diamond on a pane of glass in a window of the hermitage.

THOU whom chance may hither lead.
Be thou clad in russet weed,
Be thou deckt in silken stole,
Grave these maxims on thy soul:—

Life is but a day at most,
Sprung from night, in darkness lost;
Day, how rapid in its flight—
Day, how few must see the night;
Hope not sunshine every hour,
Fear not clouds will always lower.

Happiness is but a name,
Make content and ease thy aim;
Ambition is a meteor gleam;
Fame an idle, restless dream:
Pleasures, insects on the wing,
Round Peace, the tenderest flower of Spring!

Those that sip the dew alone,
Make the butterflies thy own;
Those that would the bloom devour,
Crush the locusts—save the flower.
For the future be prepared,
Guard whatever thou canst guard;
But, thy utmost duly done,
Welcome what thou canst not shun.

Follies past give thou to air,
Make their consequence thy care:
Keep the name of man in mind,
And dishonour not thy kind.
Reverence with lowly heart
Him whose wondrous work thou art;
Keep His goodness still in view,
Thy trust—and thy example, too.

Stranger, go! Heaven be thy guide,
Quoth the Beadsman on Nithside.

LINES
WRITTEN IN FRIARS’ CARSE HERMIT AGE, ON NITHSIDE.
(Second Version.)

THOU whom chance may hither lead,
Be thou clad in russet weed,
Be thou deckt in silken stole,
Grave these counsels on thy soul:—

Life is but a day at most,
Sprung from night, in darkness lost;
Hope not sunshine every hour,
Fear not clouds will always lower.

As Youth and Love, with sprightly dance,
Beneath thy morning-star advance,
Pleasure, with her siren air,
May delude the thoughtless pair;
Let Prudence bless Enjoyment’s cup,
Then raptured sip, and sip it up.

As thy day grows warm and high,
Life’s meridian flaming nigh,
Dost thou spurn the humble vale?
Life’s proud summits wouldst thou scale?

Check thy climbing step, elate,
Evils lurk in felon wait;
Dangers, eagle-pinion’d, bold,
Soar around each cliffy hold,
While cheerful Peace, with linnet song,
Chants the lowly dells among.

As the shades of evening close,
Beckoning thee to long repose;
As life itself becomes disease,
Seek the chimney-neak of ease,
There ruminate with sober thought
On all thou’st seen, and heard, and wrought;
And teach the sportive youngers round,
Saws of experience sage and sound;
Say, man’s true, genuine estimate,
The grand criterion of his fate,
Is not—Art thou high or low?
Did thy fortune ebb or flow?
Wast thou cottager or king?
Peer or peasant?—no such thing!
Did many talents gild thy span?
Or frugal Nature grudge thee one?
Tell them, and press it on their mind,
As thou thyself must shortly find,
The smile or frown of awful Heaven
To Virtue or to Vice is given.
Say, “To be just, and kind, and wise
There solid Self-enjoyment lies;
That foolish, selfish, faithless ways
Lead to the wretched, vile and base.”

Thus resign’d and quiet, creep
To the bed of lasting sleep;
Sleep, whence thou shalt ne’er awake,
Night, where dawn shall never break.
Till future life—future no more—
To light and joy the good restore,
To light and joy unknown before!

Stranger, go! Heaven be thy guide!
Quoth the Beadsman on Nithside.

A MOTHER’S LAMENT FOR THE DEATH OF HER SON.

The poet says—“‘The Mother’s Lament’ was composed partly with a view to Mrs. Ferguson of Craigdarroch, and partly to the worthy patroness of my early unknown muse, Mrs. Stewart of Afton.” It was also inserted in the Musical Museum, to the tune of “Finlayston House.”

Fate gave the word, the arrow sped,
And pierced my darling’s heart;
And with him all the joys are fled.
Life can to me impart.
By cruel hands the saplings drops,
In dust dishonour’d laid;
So fell the pride of all my hopes,
My age’s future shade.

The mother linnet in the brake
Bewails her ravish’d young.
So I, for my lost darling’s sake,
Lament the live-day long.
Death, oft I’ve fear’d thy fatal blow,
Now, fond, I bare my breast.
Oh, do thou kindly lay me low
With him I love, at rest!
ELEGY ON THE YEAR 1788.

A SKETCH.

Cunningham says:—"Truly has the ploughman bard described the natures of those illustrious rivals, Fox and Pitt, under the similitude of the 'birdie cocks. Nor will the allusion to the 'hand-cuffed, muzzled, half-shackled regent' be lost on those who remember the alarm into which the nation was thrown by the king's illness."

For lords or kings I dina mourn,
L'en let them die—for that they're born!
But oh! prodigious to reflect!
A towmont, sirs, is gone to wreck!
O Eighty-eight, in thy sma' space
What dire events hae taken place!
Of what enjoyments thou hast left us!
In what a pickle thou hast left us!

The Spanish empire's tint² a head,
And my auld toothless Bawtie's³ dead;
The tulzie's⁴ sair 'tween Pitt and Fox,
Our guidwife's wee birdie cocks;
The tane is game, a bluddy devil,
But to the hen-birds unco civil;
The tither's something dour o' treadin',
But better stuff ne'er claw'd a midden.

Ye ministers, come mount the pu'pit,
And cry till ye be horase and roopit,
For Eighty-eight he wish'd ye well,
And gied you a' bath gear⁵ and meal;
L'en mony a plack, and mony a peck,
Ye ken yoursels, for little feck.

Ye bonny lasses, dight⁷ your een,
For some o' you hae tint a frien';
In Eighty-eight, ye ken,⁸ was ta'en
What ye'll ne'er hae to gie again.

Observe the very nowte⁹ and sheep,
How dowf and dowie¹⁰ now they creep;
Nay, even the yirth itsel does cry,
For Embragh wells are grutten¹¹ dry.

O Eighty-nine, thou's but a bairn,
And no owre auld, I hope to learn!
Thou beardless boy, I pray tak care,
Thou now hast got thy daddy's chair,
Nae hand-cuff'd, muzzled, half-shackled regent,
But like himsel, a full, free agent.
Be sure ye follow out the plan

Nae waur¹² than he did, honest man!
As muckle better as you can.

TO CAPTAIN RIDDEL OF GLEN-RIDDEL.

EXTEMPORE LINES ON returning a NEWSPAPER.

The newspaper sent contained some sharp strictures on the poet's works.

ELLISLAND, Monday Evening.

Your news and review, sir, I've read through and through, sir,
With little admiring or blaming;
The papers are barren of home news or foreign, [ing.
No murders or rapes worth the name.

Our friends the reviewers, those chippers and hewers,
Are judges of mortar and stone, sir;
But of meet or unmeet, in a fabric complete,
I boldly pronounce they are none, sir.

My goose-quill too rude is to tell all your goodness
Bestow'd on your servant the poet;
Would to God I had one like a beam
Of the sun, [know it! And then all the world, sir, should

ODE:

SACRED TO THE MEMORY OF MRS. OSWALD.

The origin of this bitter and not very creditable effusion is thus related by the poet in a letter to Dr. Moore:—"The enclosed 'Ode' is a compliment to the memory of the late Mrs. Oswald of Auchinruive. You probably knew her personally, an honour which I cannot boast, but I spent my early years in her neighbourhood, and among her servants and tenants. I know that she was detested with the most heartfelt cordiality. However, in the particular part of her conduct which roused my poetical wrath she was much less blamable. In January last, on my road to Ayrshire, I had to put up at Bailie Whigham's in Sanquhar, the only tolerable inn in the place. The frost was keen, and the grim evening and howling wind were ushering in a night of snow and drift. My horse and I were both much fatigued with the labours of the day; and just as my friend the bailie and I were bidding defiance to the storm, over a smoking bowl, in wheels the funeral pageantry of the late Mrs. Oswald; and poor I am forced to brave all the terrors of the tempestuous night, and jape my horse—my young favorite horse, whom I had just christened Pegasus—further on, through the wildest hills and moors of Ayrshire, to New Cumnock, the next inn. The powers of poesy and prose sank under me when I would describe what I felt. Sufficient to say that, when a good fire at New Cumnock had so far recovered my frozen sinews, I sat down and wrote the enclosed "Ode." The poet lived to think more favourably of the name: one of his finest lyrics, "Oh, what ye whea's in yon town," was written in honour of the beauty of the succeeding Mrs. Oswald.

DWELLER in yon dungeon dark,
Hangman of creation, mark!
Who in widow-weeds appears,
Laden with unhonour'd years,
Noosing with care a bursting purse,
Baited with many a deadly curse!

STROPHE.

View the wither'd beldam's face—
Can thy keen inspection trace?
Aught of humanity's sweet melting
Note that eye, 'tis rheum o'erflows,
Pity's flood there never rose.
See these hands, ne'er stretch'd to save,
Hands that took—but never gave.
Keeper of Mammon's iron chest,
Lo, there she goes; unpitied and unblest—
[lasting rest!]
She goes, but not to realms of ever.

ANTISTROPHE.

Plunderer of armies, lift thine eyes,
(A while forbear, ye torturing fiends;)
Seest thou whose step, unwilling hither bends?
[skies;]
No fallen angel, hurl'd from upper
'Tis thy trusty quondam mate,
Doom'd to share thy fiery fate,
She, tardy, hellward plies.

EPODE.

And are they of no more avail,
Ten thousand glittering pounds a year?
In other worlds can Mammon fail,
Omnipotent as he is here?
Oh, bitter mockery of the pompous bier,
While down the wretched vital part is driven!
[science clear,
The cave-losed beggar, with a con-
Expires in rags, unknown, and goes to heaven.

TO JOHN TAYLOR.

"The poet," says a correspondent of Cunningham's, "it seems, during one of his journeys over his ten parishes as an exciseman, had arrived at Wanlockhead on a winter day, when the roads were slippery with ice, and Jenny Geddes, his mare, kept her feet with difficulty. The blacksmith of the place was busied with other pressing matters in the forge and could not spare time for 'frosting' the shoes of the poet's mare, and it is likely he would have proceeded on his dangerous journey, had he not bethought himself of propitiating the son of Vulcan with verse. He called for pen and ink, wrote these verses to John Taylor, a person of influence in Wanlockhead; and when he had done, a gentleman of the name of Sloan, who accompanied him, added these words:—'J. Sloan's best compliments to Mr. Taylor, and it would be doing him and the Ayrshire bard a particular favour, if he would oblige them instanter with his agreeable company. The road has been so slippery that the riders and the brutes were equally in danger of getting some of their bones broken. For the poet, his life and limbs are of some consequence to the world; but for poor Sloan it matters very little what may become of him. The whole of this business is to ask the favour of getting the horses' shoes sharpened.' On the receipt of this, Taylor spoke to the smith, the smith flew to his tools, sharpened the horses' shoes, and, it is recorded, lived thirty years to say he had never been 'weel paid but ane, and that was by the poet, who paid him in money, paid him in drink, and paid him in verse."

WITH PEGASUS upon a day,
Apollo weary flying,
Through frosty hills the journey lay.
On foot the way was plying,

Poor slipshod giddy Pegasus
Was but a sorry walker;
To Vulcan then Apollo goes,
To get a frosty caulk.*

Obliging Vulcan fell to work,
Threw by his coat and bonnet,
And did Sol's business in a crack;
Sol paid him with a sonnet.

Ye Vulcan's sons of Wanlockhead,
Pity my sad disaster;
My Pegasus is poorly shod—
I'll pay you like my master.

SKETCH:

INSCRIBED TO THE RIGHT HON.
C. J. FOX.

In a letter to Mrs. Dunlop the poet says, "I have a poetic whim in my head, which I at present dedicate or rather inscribe, to the Right Hon. Charles James Fox; but how long that fancy may hold, I cannot say. A few of the first lines I have just rough-sketched as follows:"

How wisdom and folly meet, mix, and unite; [and their white;
How virtue and vice blend their black.
How genius the illustrious father of fiction,

Confounds rule and law, reconciles con-

VERSES

ON SEEING A WOUNDED HARE LIMP
BY ME WHICH A FELLOW HAD JUST SHOT.

This poem was founded on a real incident. James Thomson, a neighbour of the poet's, states that having shot a hare, and wounded it hare, it ran past the poet, who happened to be near. "He cursed me, and said he would not mind throwing me into the water; and I'll warrant he could 'ae done't, though I was both young and strong."

INHUMAN man! curse on thy barb'rous art, [eye;
And blasted be thy murder-aiming May never pity soothe thee with a sigh,
Nor ever pleasure glad thy cruel heart!
Go live, poor wanderer of the wood and field!
The bitter little that of life remains,
No more the thickening brakes and verdant plains
To thee shall home, or food, or pastime
Seek, mangled wretch, some place of wonded rest,
No more of rest, but now thy dying
The sheltering rushes whistling o'er thy head,
The cold earth with thy bloody bosom

Oft as by winding Nith, I, musing wait
The sober eve, or hail the cheerful
I'll miss thee sporting o'er the dewy lawn,
And curse the ruffian's aim, and mourn

DELIA.
AN ODE.
This ode was sent to the Star newspaper with the following characteristic letter viz.
"Mr. Printer,—If the productions of a simple ploughman can merit a place in the same paper with the other favourites of the Muses who illuminate the Star with the lustre of genius, your insertion of the enclosed trifle will be succeeded by future communications from yours, etc.,

“Robert Burns.
Ellisland, near Dumfries, May 18, 1789.”

FAIR the face of orient day,
Fair the tints of opening rose;
But fairer still my Delia dawns,
More lovely far her beauty blows.
Sweet the lark’s wild-warbled lay,
Sweet the tinkling rill to hear;
But, Delia, more delightful still,
Steal thine accents on mine ear.

The flower-enamour’d busy bee,
The rosy banquet loves to sip;
Sweet the streamlet’s limpid lapse
To the sun-brown’d Arab’s lip.

But, Delia, on thy balmy lips

THE KIRK'S ALARM.

A SATIRE.

We quote Lockhart's account of the origin of the "Kirk's Alarm." "McGill and Dalrymple, the two ministers of the town of Ayr, had long been suspected of entertaining heterodox opinions on several points, particularly the doctrine of original sin and the Trinity; and the former at length published 'An Essay on the Death of Jesus Christ,' which was considered as demanding the notice of the Church courts. More than a year was spent in the discussions which arose out of this; and at last, Dr. McGill was fain to acknowledge his errors, and promise that he would take an early opportunity of apologising for them to his congregation from the pulpit, which promise, however, he never performed. The gentility of the country took, for the most part, the side of McGill, who was a man of cold, unpopular manners, but of unreproached moral character, and possessed of some accomplishments. The bulk of the lower orders espoused, with far more fervid zeal, the cause of those who conducted the prosecution against this erring doctor. Gavin Hamilton, and all persons of his stamp, were, of course, on the side of McGill—Auld and the Mauchline elders with his enemies. Robert Aiken, a writer in Ayr, a man of remarkable talents, particularly in public speaking, had the principal management of McGill's cause before the presbytery and the synod. He was an intimate friend of Hamilton's, and through him had about this time formed an acquaintance which soon ripened into a warm friendship with Burns. Burns was, therefore, from the beginning, a zealous, as in the end he was, perhaps, the most effective, partisan of the side on which Aiken had staked so much of his reputation."

THE WHIST

Burns says:—"As the authentic prose history of the 'Whistle' is curious, I shall here give it:—In the train of Anne of Denmark, when she came to Scotland with our James the Sixth, there came over also a Danish gentleman of gigantic stature and great prowess, and a matchless champion of Bacchus. He had a little ebony whistle, which at the commencement of the orgies he laid on the table, and whoever was the last able to blow it, everybody else being disabled by the potency of the bottle, was to carry off the whistle as a trophy of victory. The Dane produced credentials of his victories, without a single defeat, at the courts of Copenhagen, Stockholm, Moscow, Warsaw, and several of the petty courts in Germany; and challenged the Scots Bacchanalians to the alternative of trying his prowess, or else of acknowledging their inferiority. After many overthrows on the part of the Scots, the Dane was encountered by Sir Robert Lawrie of Maxwelton, ancestor of the present worthy baronet of that name, who, after three days' and three nights' hard contest, left the Scandinavian under the table,

And blew on the whistle his requiem shrill.

ON CAPTAIN GROSE'S PEREGRINATIONS
THROUGH SCOTLAND, COLLECTING
THE ANTIQUITIES OF THAT KINGDOM.

Captain Grose, the hero of this poem, author of a work on the Antiquities of Scotland, was an enthusiastic antiquary, fond of good wine and good company. Burns met him at the hospitable table of Captain Riddel of Friars' Carse. He died in Dublin, of an apoplectic fit, in 1791, in the 52d year of his age.

Grose under cover to Mr. Cardonnel, a brother antiquary, the following verses, in imitation of the ancient ballad of "Sir John Malcolm," were enclosed. Cardonnel read them everywhere, much to the captain's annoyance, and to the amusement of his friends.

SKETCH—NEW YEAR'S DAY,
[1790.]
TO MRS. DUNLOP.

On the original MS. of these lines, the poet writes as follows:—"On second thoughts I send you this extempore blotted sketch. It is just the first random scrawl; but if you think the piece worth while, I shall retouch it, and finish it. Though I have no copy of it, my memory serves me."

This day, Time winds the exhausted chain,
To run the twelvemonth's length again;
I see the old, bald-pated fellow,
With ardent eyes, complexion sallow,
Adjust the unimpair'd machine,
To wheel the equal, dull routine.

The absent lover, minor heir
In vain assail him with their prayer;
Deaf, as my friend, he sees them press,
Nor makes the hour one moment less.

And join with me a moralising,
This day's propitious to be wise in.

First, what did yesternight deliver?
"Another year is gone forever!"
And what is this day's strong suggestion?
"The passing moment's all we rest
Rest on—for what? what do we here?
Or why regard the passing year? [lore]
Will Time, amused with proverb'd
Add to our date one minute more?
A few days may—a few years must—
Repose us in the silent dust,
Then is it wise to damp our bliss?
Yes—all such reasonings are amiss!
The voice of Nature loudly cries,
And many a message from the skies,
That something in us never dies:
That on this frail, uncertain state,
Hang matters of eternal weight:
That future life, in worlds unknown,
Must take its hue from this alone;
Whether as heavenly glory bright,
Or dark as Misery's woful night.

Since, then, my honour'd, first of friends,
On this poor being all depends,
Let us the important now employ,
And live as those who never die.

Though you, with days and honours crown'd,
Witness that filial circle round,

A sight, pale Envy to convulse),
Others now claim your chief regard;
Yourself, you wait your bright reward.

PROLOGUE,
SPOKEN AT THE THEATRE, DUMFRIES ON NEW YEAR'S DAY EVENING,
[1790.]

Burns, writing to his brother Gilbert, says—
"We have gotten a set of very decent players here just now: I have seen them an evening or two. David Campbell, in Ayr, wrote to me by the manager of the company, a Mr. Sutherland, who is a man of apparent worth. On New Year's Day I gave him the following prologue, which he spouted to his audience with applause:"

TO THE OWL.

This poem was originally printed, from a MS. in the poet's handwriting, by Cromek, who threw some doubts on its being written by Burns. But as the MS. copy showed occasional interlineations in the same hand, there can be little doubt, we presume, as to its authenticity.

VERSES

ON AN EVENING VIEW OF THE RUINS OF LINCLUDEN ABBEY.*

YE holy walls, that, still sublime,
Resist the crumbling touch of time;
How strongly still your form displays
The piety of ancient days!
As through your ruins hoar and gray--
Ruins yet beauteous in decay--
The silvery moonbeams trembling fly;
The forms of ages long gone by
Crowd thick on Fancy's wondering eye,
And wake the soul to musings high.
Even now, as lost in thought profound,
I view the solemn scene around,
And, pensive, gaze with wistful eyes,
The past returns, the present flies;
Again the dome, in pristine pride,
Lifts high its roof and arches wide,
That, knit with curious tracery,
Each Gothic ornament display.
The high-arch'd windows, painted fair,
Show many a saint and martyr there.
As on their slender forms I gaze,
Methinks they brighten to a blaze!
With noiseless step and taper bright,
What are yon forms that meet my sight?

* On the banks of the river Cluden, and at a short distance from Dumfries, are the beautiful ruins of the Abbey of Lincluden, which was founded in the time of Malcolm, the fourth King of Scotland,
Slowly they move, while every eye
Is heavenward raised in ecstasy.
'Tis the fair, spotless, vestal train,
That seek in prayer the midnight bane.
And, hark! what more than mortal sound
Of music breathes the pile around?
'Tis the soft-chanted choral song,
Whose tones the echoing aisles prolong;
Till, thence return'd, they softly stray
O'er Cluden's wave, with fond delay;
Now on the rising gale swell high,
And now in fainting murmurs die;
The boatmen on Nith's gentle stream,
That glistens in the pale moonbeam,
Suspend their dashing oars to hear
The holy anthem loud and clear;
Each worldly thought a while forbear,
And mutter forth a half-formed prayer.
But as I gaze, the vision fails,
Like frost work touch'd by southern gales;
The altar sinks, the tapers fade,
And all the splendid scene's decay'd.

In window fair the painted pane
No longer glows with holy stain,
But through the broken glass the gale
Blows chilly from the misty vale;
The bird of eve flits sullen by,
Uer home these aisles and arches high!
The choral hymn, that erst so clear
Broke softly sweet on Fancy's ear,
Is drown'd amid the mournful scream
That breaks the magic of my dream!
Roused by the sound, I start and see
The ruin'd sad reality!

STANZAS ON THE DUKE OF QUEENSBERRY.

On being questioned as to the propriety of satirising people unworthy of his notice, and the Duke of Queensberry being cited as an instance, Burns drew out his pencil and penned the following bitter lines as his reply:

How shall I sing Drumlanrig's Grace—Discarded remnant of a race
Once great in martial story?
His forbears' virtues all contrasted—
The very name of Douglas blasted—His that inverted glory.

Hate, envy, oft the Douglas bore;
But he has superadded more,
And sunk them in contempt;
Follies and crimes have stain'd the name;
But, Queensberry, thine the virgin From aught that's good exempt.

VERSES TO MY BED.

THOU bed, in which I first began
To be that various creature—man!
And when again the fates decree,
The place where I must cease to be:
When sickness comes, to whom I fly,
To soothe my pain, or close mine eye;
When cares surround me where I weep,
Or lose them all in balmy sleep;
When sore with labour whom I court
And to thy downy breast resort—
Where, too, ecstatic joys I find,
When deigns my Delia to be kind—
And full of love in all her charms,
Thou givest the fair one to my arms.
The centre thou, where grief and pain, Disease and rest, alternate reign.
Oh, since within thy little space
So many various scenes take place;
Lessons as useful shall thou teach,
As sages dictate—churchmen preach;
And man convinced by thee alone,
This great important truth shall own:—
That thin partitions do divide
The bounds where good and ill reside;
That nought is perfect here below;
But bliss still bordering upon woe.

ELEGY ON PEG NICHOLSON.

Peg Nicholson, the "good bay mare," belonged to Mr. William Nicol, a fast friend of the poet's, and was so named from a frantic virago who attempted the life of George III. The poet enclosed the following verses in a letter to his friend, in February, 1790, with a long account of the deceased mare, which letter will be found in the correspondence of that year.

Peg Nicholson was a good bay mare
As ever trode on aird;1
But now she's floating down the Nith,
And past the mouth o' Cairn.

Peg Nicholson was a good bay mare,
And rode through thick and thin;
But now she's floating down the Nith.
And wanting even the skin.

Peg Nicholson was a good bay mare,
And ance she bore a priest;
But now she's floating down the Nith,
For Solway fish a feast.

Peg Nicholson was a good bay mare,
And the priest he rode her sair;2
And much oppress'd and bruised she
As priest-rid cattle are.

Kindsir, I've read your paper through, And faith, to me 'twas really new! ['twas? How guess'd ye, sir, what maist I want! 'Tis mony a day I've gran'd and gaunted!

To ken what French mischief was brew'd— Or what the drumlie Dutch were doin'; That vile doup-skelper, Emperor Joseph,
If Venus yet had got his nose off; Or how the colliesangie works Atween the Russians and the Turks; Or if the Swede, before he halt, Would play anither Charles the Twalt: If Denmark, anybody spak o't; Or Poland, who had now the tack o't; How cut-throat Prussian blades were hingin';

How libbet Italy was singin'; If Spaniards, Portuguese, or Swiss Were sayin' or takin' aught amiss: Or how our merry lads at hame, In Britain's court, kept up the game; How royal George, the Lord leuk o'er him!

Was managing St Stephen's quorum; If sleekit Chatham Will was livin', Or glaikit Charlie got his niece in; How Daddie Burke the plea was cookin',

If Warren Hastings' neck was yeu-k How cesses, stents, and fees were tax'd; Or if bare a—s yet were tax'd; The news o' princes, dukes, and earls, Pimps, sharpers, bawds, and opera girls;

If that daft buckie, Geordie Wales, Was threshin' still at hizzies' tails; Or if he was grown outhlins douser, And no a perfect kintra cooser.
A' this and mair I never heard of; And but for you I might despair'd of.

ELEGI ON CAPTAIN MATTHEW HENDERSON,
A GENTLEMAN WHO HELD THE PATENT FOR HIS HONOURS IMMEDIATELY FROM ALMIGHTY GOD.

The following note was appended to the original MS. of the Elegy:— "Now that you are over with the sirens of flattery, the harpies of corruption, and the furies of ambition—those infernal deities that, on all sides and in all parties, preside over the villainous business of politics—permit a rustic muse of your acquaintance to do her best to soothe you with a song. You knew Henderson. I have not flattered his memory."

In a letter to Dr. Moore, dated February 1791, the poet says:— "The Elegy on Captain Henderson is a tribute to the memory of a man I loved much. Poets have in this the same advantage as Roman Catholics; they can be of service to their friends after they have passed that bourne where all other kindness ceases to be of any avail. Whether, after all, either the one or the other be of any real service to the dead is, I fear, very problematical; but I am sure they are highly gratifying to the living. Captain Henderson was a retired soldier, of agreeable manners and upright character, who had a lodging in Carrubber's Close, Edinburgh, and mingled with the best society of the city; he dined regularly at Fortune's Tavern, and was a member of the Capillaire Club, which was composed of all who inclined to the witty and the joyous."

"Should the poor be flattered?"

Thee, Matthew, Nature's sel shall mourn
By wood and wild,
Where, haply, Pity strays forlorn,
'Frae man exiled!
Ye hills! near neibors o' the starns,
That proudly cock your cresting cairns!
Ye cliffs, the haunts of sailing yearns,
Where Echo slumbers!
Come join, ye Nature's sturdiest bairns,
My wailing numbers!

Mourn, ilka grove the cushat kens!
Ye hazel shaws and briery dens!
Ye burnies, winiplin' down your glens,
Wi' toddlin' din,†
Or foaming strang, wi' hasty stens,
Frae lin to lin!

Mourn, little harebells o'er the lea;
Ye stately foxgloves fair to see;
Ye woodbines, hanging bonnillie
In scented bowers;
Ye roses on your thorny tree,
The first of flowers.

At dawn, when every grassy blade
Droops with a diamond at its head,
At even, when beans their fragrance shed,
I' the rustling gale,
Ye maukins whiddin through the glade,
Come, join my wail.

Mourn, ye wee songsters o' the wood;
Ye grouse that crap the heather bud;
Ye curlews calling through a clud:
Ye whistling plover;
And mourn, ye whirling paitrick brood!—
He's gane forever.

Mourn, sooty coots, and speckled teals;
Ye fisher herons, watching eels;
Ye duck and drake, wi' airy wheels
Circling the lake;
Ye bitterns, till the quagmire reels,
Rair † for his sake.

Mourn, clam'ring craiks at close o' day,
'Mang fields o' flowering clover gay;
And when ye wing your annual way
'Frae our cauld shore,
Tell thae far warlds wha lies in clay,
Wham we deplore.

Ye houlets, frae your ivy bower,
In some auld tree or eldritch tower,
What time the moon, wi' silent glower,
Sets up her horn,
Wail through the dreary midnight hour
Till waukrife morn!

O rivers, forests, hills, and plains!
Oft have ye heard my canty strains:
But now, what else for me remains
But tales of woe?
And frae my een the drapping rains
Maun ever flow.

Mourn, Spring, thou darling of the year!
Ilk cowslip cup shall kep a tear:
Thou, Simmer, while each corny spear
Shoots up its head,
Thy gay, green, flowery tresses shear
For him that's dead!

Thou, Autumn, wi' thy yellow hair,
In grief thy sallow mantle tear!
Thou, Winter, hurling through the air
The roaring blast,
Wide o'er the naked world declare
The worth we've lost!

Mourn him, thou Sun, great source of light!
Mourn, empress of the silent night!
And you, ye twinkling starnies bright,
My Matthew mourn!

For through your orbs he's ta'en his flight.
Ne'er to return.

O Henderson! the man—the brother!
And art thou gone, and gone forever?
And hast thou cross'd that unknown river,
Life's dreary bound?
Like thee, where shall I find another
The world around!

THE EPITAPH.

Stop, passenger!—my story's brief,
And truth I shall relate, man;
I tell nae common tale o' grief—
For Matthew was a great man.

If thou uncommon merit hast,
Yet spurn'd at Fortune's door, man,
A look of pity hither cast—
For Matthew was a poor man.

If thou a noble sodger art,
That passeth by this grave, man,
There moulders here a gallant heart—
For Matthew was a brave man.

If thou on men, their works and ways,
Canst throw uncommon light, man,
Here lies wha weel had won thy praise—
For Matthew was a bright man.

If thou at friendship's sacred ca'
Wad life itself resign, man,
The sympathetic tear maun fa'—
For Matthew was a kind man!

If thou art stanch without a stain,
Like the unchanging blue, man,
This was a kinsman o' thy aie—
For Matthew was a true man.

If thou hast wit, and fun, and fire,
And ne'er guid wine did fear, man,
This was thy billie, dam, and sire—
For Matthew was a queer man.

If ony whiggish whinging sot,
To blame poor Matthew dare, man,
May dool and sorrow be his lot!—
For Matthew was a rare man.

TAM O' SHANTER:

A TALE.

Captain Grose, in the introduction to his "Antiquities of Scotland," says, "To my ingenious friend, Mr. Robert Burns, I have been seriously obligated; he was not only at the pains of making out what was most worthy of notice in Ayrshire, the country honoured by his birth, but he also wrote, expressly for this work, the pretty tale annexed to Alloway Church." This pretty tale was "Tam o'Shanter," certainly the most popular of all our poet's works. In a letter to Captain Grose, No. CCXXVII. of the General Correspondence, Burns gives the legend which formed the groundwork of the poem:—"On a market day in the town of Ayr, a farmer from Carrick, and consequently whose way lay by the very gate of Alloway kirkyard, in order to cross the river Doon at the old bridge, which is about two or three hundred yards farther than the said gate, had been detained by his business, till by the time he reached Alloway it was the wizard hour, between night and morning. Though he was terrified with a blaze streaming from the kirk, yet it is a well-known fact that to turn back on these occasions is running by far the greatest risk of mischief,—he prudently advanced on his road. When he had reached the gate of the kirkyard, he was surprised and entertained, through the ribs and arches of an old Gothic window, which still faces the highway, to see a dance of witches moving in foot^ting round their old sooty blackguard master, who was keeping them all alive with the power of his bagpipe. The farmer, stopping his horse to observe them a little, could plainly descry the faces of many old women of his acquaintance and neighbourhood. How the gentleman was dressed tradition does not say, but that the ladies were all in their smocks; and one of them happening unluckily to have a smock which was considerably too short to answer all the purpose of that piece of dress, our farmer was so tickled that he involuntarily burst out, with a loud laugh, 'Weel huppen. Maggie wi' the short sark!' and, recollecting himself, instantly spurred his horse to the top of his speed. I need not mention that universally-kno^wable infernal power can pursue you beyond the middle of a running stream. Lucky it was for the poor farmer that the river Doon was so near, for notwithstanding the speed of his horse, which was a good one, against he reached the middle of the arch of the bridge, and consequently the middle of the stream, the pursuing, vengeful hags, were so close at his heels that one of them actually sprung to seize him; but it was too late, nothing was on her side of the stream but the horse's tail, which immediately gave way at her infernal grip, as if blasted by a stroke of lightning; but the farmer was beyond her reach. However, the unsightly, tailless condition of the vigorous steed was, to the last hour of the noble creature's life, an awful warning to the Carrick farmers not to stay too late in Ayr markets!" Douglas Grahame of Shanter, a farmer on the Carrick shore, who was in reality the drunken, careless being the poet depicts him, became the hero of the legend, and several ludicrous stories current about him were woven into it with admirable skill. It is reported of him that one market day being in Ayr he had tied his mare by the bridle to a ring at the public house, and while he was making himself happy with some cronies inside, the Idle neighbours pulled all the hair out of the mare's tail. This was not noticed until the following morning, when, becoming bewil- dered as to the cause of the accident, he could only refer it to the agency of witchcraft. It is further related of Graham that when a debauch had been prolonged until the dregs of the "sulky sullen dame" at home rose up before him, he would frequently continue drinking rather than face her, even although delay would add to the terrors of the inevitable home-going.

The poem was composed in one day in the winter of 1792. Mrs. Burns informed Cro- mek that the poet had lingered longer by the river side than his wot, and that taking the children with her, she went out to join him, but perceiving that his presence was an interruption to him, she lingered behind him; her attention was attracted by his wild gesticulations and unregulable mirth, while he was reciting the passages of the poem as they arose in his mind.

"Of brownies and of boglins full is this buke."
—GAWIN DOUGLAS.

WHEN champion billies leave the street,
And drouthy neibors meet,
As market days are wearin' late,
And folk begin to tak the gate;
While we sit bousing at the nappy,
And gettin' fou and unco happy,
We think na on the lang Scots miles,
The mosses, waters, slaps, and stiles,
That lie between us and our hame,
Whare sits our sulky sullen dame,
Gathering her brows like gathering storm,
Nursing her wrath to keep it warm.

This truth fand honest Tam o' Shanter,
As he frae Ayr ae night did cantar,
(Auld Ayr, whom ne'er a town surpasses
For honest men and bonny lasses.)

O Tam! hadst thou but been sae wise
As ta'en thy ain wife Kate's advice!
She tauld thee weel thou wast a skel- lum,
A blethering, blustering, drunken
That frae November till October,
Ae market day thou wasna sober;
That ilk a melder, wi' the miller
Thou sat as lang as thou hadst siller;
That every naig was ca'd a shoe on,
The smith and thee gat roaring fou on;
That at the Lord's house, even on Sunday,
[Monday,
Thou drank wi' Kirkton + Jean till
She prophesied that, late or soon,
Thou woldst be found deep drown'd in Doon!
Or catch'd wi' warlocks i' the mirk,
By Alloway's auld haunted kirk.

Ah, gentle dames! it gars me greet
To think how mony counsels sweet,
How mony lengthen'd sage advices,
The husband frae the wife despises!

But to our tale—Ae market night,
Tam had got planted unco right,
Fast by an ingle, blezing finely,
Wi' reaming swats, that drank divinely;
And at his elbow Souter Johnny,
His ancient, trusty, drouthy crony;
Tam lo'ed him like a vera brither—
They had been fou for weeks thegither!
The night they drave on wi' sangs and clatter,
And aye the ale was growing better:
The landlady and Tam grew gracious,
Wi' favours secret, sweet, and precious;
The Souter taud his queerest stories,
The landlord's laugh was ready chorus:
The storm without might rair and rustle—
Tam didna mind the storm a whistle.

Care, mad to see a man sae happy,
E'en drown'd himsel amang the nappy!
As bees flee hame wi' lades o' treasure,
The minutes wing'd their way wi' pleasure:
[glorious,
Kings may be blest, but Tam was
O' er ithills o' life victorious!

* Any quantity of corn sent to the mill is called a melder.
+ The village where a parish church is situated is usually called the Kirkton (Kirk-town) in Scotland. A certain Jean Kennedy, who kept a reputable public house in the village of Kirkoswald, is here alluded to.
But pleasures are like poppies spread,
You seize the flower, its bloom is shed!
Or like the snowfall in the river,
A moment white—then melts forever;
Or like the borealis race,
That fit ere you can point their place;
Or like the rainbow's lovely form,
Evanishing amid the storm.

Nae man can tether*\textsuperscript{18} time or tide;

That dreary hour he mounts his beast
And sic\textsuperscript{19} a night he takes the road in
As ne'er poor sinner was abroad in.

Before him Doon pours a' his floods;
The doubling storm roars through the woods;
The lightnings flash frae pole to pole;

Near and more near the thunders roll;
When, glimmering through the groan-
ing trees,
Kirk-Alloway seem'd in a breeze;
Through ilka bore\textsuperscript{27} the beams were glancing.
And loud resounded mirth and danc-

Inspiring bold John Barleycorn!

Fair play, he cared na deils a boddle.\textsuperscript{31}
But Maggie stood right sair astonish'd,
Till, by the heel and hand admonish'd,
She ventured forward on the light,
And, wow! Tam saw an unco sight!
Warlocks and witches in a dance;
Nae cottilloun brent-new\textsuperscript{32} frae France;
But hornpipes, jigs, strathspeys, and reels,
Put life and mettle i' their heels:

Five tomahawks wi' bluid red-rust'd;
Five scimitars, wi' murder crusted;

ON THE BIRTH OF A POSTHUMOUS CHILD,
BORN IN PECULIAR CIRCUMSTANCES OF FAMILY DISTRESS.
The mother of the child was Miss Susan Dunlop, daughter of Burns' friend, Mrs. Dunlop. She had married a French gentleman of birth and fortune, named Henri, who died prematurely. Some time afterwards, Mrs.
Henri went to the south of France, where she died, leaving her child exposed to all the dangers of the revolutionary excesses. He was carefully tended by an old domestic of the family's, and restored to his friends when the tranquility of the country was secured.

Chill on thy lovely form;

And gane, alas! the sheltering tree
Should shield thee from the storm.

May He who gives the rain to pour,
And wings the blast to blaw,
Protect the frae the driving shower,
The bitter frost and snow!

May He, the friend of woe and want,
Who heals life's various stounds,\(^2\)
Protect and guard the mother-plant,
And heal her cruel wounds!

But late she flourish'd, rooted fast,
Fair on the summer's morn;
Now feebly bends she in the blast,
Unshelter'd and forlorn.

Blest be thy bloom, thou lovely gem,
Unscathed by ruffian hand!
And from thee many a parent stem
Arise to deck our land!

ELEGY ON MISS BURNET OF MONBODDO.
Miss Burnet was the daughter of the accomplished and eccentric Lord Monboddo. She is alluded to in the "Address to Edinburgh," (p. 101)

Fair Burnet strikes th' adoring eye,
Heaven's beauties on my fancy shine;
I see the Sire of Love on high,
And own His work indeed divine.

She was one of the most beautiful women of her time, and died of consumption in the twenty-third year of her age.

LIFE ne'er exulted in so rich a prize
As Burnet, lovely from her native skies;
[blow,
Nor envious Death so triumph'd in a
As that which laid th' accomplish'd
Burnet low.

Thy form and mind, sweet maid, can I forget?
In richest ore the brightest jewel set!
In thee, high Heaven above was truest shown,
[best is known.
As by His noblest work the Godhead

In vain ye flaunt in summer's pride, ye groves;

LAMENT OF MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS, ON THE APPROACH OF SPRING.

This poem is said to have been written at the instigation of Lady Winifred Maxwell Constable, daughter of William Maxwell, Earl of Nithsdale, who rewarded him with a present of a valuable snuff-box, having a portrait of Queen Mary on the lid. In a letter to Graham of Fintry, enclosing a copy of "The Lament," the poet says:—"Whether it is that the story of our Mary Queen of Scots has a peculiar effect on the feelings of a poet, or whether I have, in the enclosed ballad, succeeded beyond my usual poetical success, I know not, but it has pleased me beyond any effort of my Muse for a good while past."

Now Nature hangs her mantle green
On every blooming tree,
And spreads her sheets 'o' daisies white
Out 'o'er the grassy lea:
Now Phoebus cheers the crystal streams,
And glads the azure skies;
But nought can glad the weary wight
That fast in durance lies.

LAMENT FOR JAMES, EARL OF GLENCaIRN.

The early death of the Earl of Glencarn robbed the poet of an intelligent friend and Unheard, unpitied, unrelieved,
I bear alone my lade o' care,
For silent, low, on beds of dust,
Lie a' that would my sorrows share.

"And last (the sum of a' my griefs!)
My noble master lies in clay,
The flower among our barons bold,
His country's pride—his country's stay!
In weary being now I pine,
For a' the life of life is dead,
And hope has left my aged ken,
On forward wing forever fled.

"Awake thy last sad voice, my harp!
The voice of woe and wild despair;
Awake! resound thy latest lay—
Then sleep in silence evermair!
And thou, my last, best, only friend,
That fill'st an untimely tomb,
Accept this tribute from the bard
Thou brought from Fortune's mirk'est gloom.

"In Poverty's low barren vale
Thick mists, obscure, involved me round:
Though oft I turn'd the wistful eye;
Nae ray of fame was to be found;
Thou found'st me, like the morning sun,
That melts the fogs in limpid air—
The friendless bard and rustic song
Became alike thy fostering care.

"Oh! why has worth so short a date,
While villains ripen gray with time?
Must thou, the noble, generous, great,
Fall in bold manhood's hardy prime?
Why did I live to see that day?
A day to me so full of woe!—
Oh! had I met the mortal shaft
Which laid my benefactor low!

"The bridegroom may forget the bride
Was made his wedded wife yestreen:
The monarch may forget the crown
That on his head an hour has been;
The mother may forget the child
That smiles sae sweetly on her knee;
But I'll remember thee, Glencarn,
And a' that thou hast done for me!"

SENT TO SIR JOHN WHITEFOORD, BART., OF WHITEFOORD, WITH THE FOREGOING POEM.

Thou, who thy honour as thy God reverest,

We'll mourn till we too go as he has gone,
And tread the dreary path to that dark world unknown.

ADDRESS TO THE SHADE OF THOMSON,
ON CROWNING HIS BUST AT EDNAM,
ROXBURGHSHIRE, WITH DAYS.

The Earl of Buchan invited the poet to be present at the coronation of Thomson's bust, on Ednam Hill. He could not attend, but sent the following "Address" instead:-

While virgin Spring, by Eden's flood,
Unfolds her tender mantle green,
Or pranks the sod in frolic mood,
Or tunes Eolian strains between:

While Summer with a matron grace,
Retreats to Dryburgh's cooling shade,
Yet oft, delighted, stops to trace
The progress of the spiky blade:

While Autumn, benefactor kind,
By Tweed erects his aged head,
And sees, with self-approving mind,
Each creature on his bounty fed:

While maniac Winter rages o'er
The hills whence classic Yarrow flows,
Rousing the turbid torrent's roar,
Or sweeping, wild, a waste of snows:

So long, sweet poet of the year!
Shall bloom that wreath thou well hast won:
While Scotia, with exulting tear,
Proclaims that Thomson was her son!

VERSES

TO JOHN MAXWELL OF TERRAUGHTY, ON HIS BIRTHDAY.

Health to the Maxwells' veteran chief!
Health, aye unsour'd by care or grief:
Inspired, I turn'd Fate's sybil leaf
This natal morn,
I see thy life is stuff o' prieff,
[Scarce quite half worn.

This day thou metest threescore eleven,
And I can tell that bounteous Heaven

On thee a tack o' seven times seven
Will yet bestow it.

If envious buckies view wi' sorrow
The lengthen'd days on this blest morn,
May Desolation's lang-teeth'd harrow,
Nine miles an hour,
Rake them, like Sodom and Gomorrah,
In brunstane stoure !

ADAM A—'S PRAYER.
The circumstances under which the following lines were written were as follows:—The servant of a Mauchline innkeeper having been too indulgent to one of her master's customers, a number of reckless young fellows, among whom was Adam A,—an ill-made little fellow, made her "ride the dale, — that is, placed her astride a wooden pole, and carried her through the streets. An action being raised against the offenders, Adam A—absconded. While skulking about, Burns met him and suggested that he needed some one to pray for him: "Just do't yourself, Burns; I know no one so fit," Adam replied. Adam A—'s Prayer was the result.

VERSES TO JOHN RANKINE.*

AE day, as Death, that grusome carl,

And quickly stoppit Rankine's breath.

ON SENSIBILITY.

TO MY DEAR AND MUCH-HONOURED FRIEND, MRS. DUNLOP OF DUNLOP.

Sensibility, how charming,
Thou, my friend, canst truly tell;
But distress, with horrors arming,
Thou hast also known too well!

Fairest flower, behold the lily,
Blooming in the sunny ray:
Let the blast sweep o'er the valley,
See it prostrate on the clay.

Hear the woodlark charm the forest,
Telling o'er his little joys;
Hapless bird! a prey the surest,
To each pirate of the skies.

Dearly bought the hidden treasure
Finer feelings can bestow;
Chords that vibrate sweetest pleasure
Thrift the deepest notes of woe.

The grave,
My dearest angel forever;
For ever—oh no! let not man be a

Reclined on the lap of thy mother,
When the tear trickled bright, when the short stifled breath,

EPISTLE FROM ESOPUS TO MARIA.
The Esopus of this epistle was Williamson, the actor; and the Maria to whom it is addressed was Mrs. Riddle—"A lady," says Allan Cunningham, "whose memory will be held in grateful remembrance, not only for her having forgiven the poet for his lampoons, but for her having written a sensible, clear, heart-warm account of him when laid in the grave. Mrs. Riddle was a sincere friend and admirer of Burns, who quarrelled with her on account of some fancied slight. Williamson was a member of the dramatic company which frequently visited Dumfries. He had been a frequent visitor at Mrs. Riddle's. While the dramatic company were at Whitehaven, the Earl of Lonsdale committed them to prison as vagrants. Burns had no favour for the Earl of Lonsdale, and managed in the epistle to gratify his aversion to him, as well as his temporary anger with Mrs Riddle. His behaviour towards the latter was as discreditable to him as Mrs. Riddle's generosity in forgiving it was worthy of her goodness and her high opinion of his better nature."

How pale is that cheek where the rogue lately glistened!
How silent that tongue which the echoes oft tired,
How dull is that ear which to flattery so listen'd!

From friendship and dearest affection removed;
How doubly severe, Eliza, thy fate,
Thou diest unwet as thou livedst unloved.

LIBERTY:
A FRAGMENT.

Writing to Mrs. Dunlop from Castle-Douglas, the poet says:—"I am just going to trouble your critical patience with the first sketch of a stanza I have been framing as I passed along the road. The subject is Liberty: you know, my honoured friend, how dear the theme is to me. I design it as an irregular ode for General Washington's birthday. After having mentioned the degeneracy of other kingdoms, I come to Scotland thus:"—

Thee, Caledonia, thy wild heaths among, [sacred song.
Thee, famed for martial deed and
To thee I turn with swimming eyes;
Where is that soul of freedom fled?
Immingleth with the mighty dead,
Beneath the hallow'd turf where Wallace lies!
Hear it not, Wallace, in thy bed of death!
Ye babbling winds, in silence sweep;
Disturb not ye the hero's sleep,
Nor give the coward secret breath.
Is this the power in freedom's war
That wont to bid the battle rage?
Behold that eye which shot immortal hate,
Braved usurpation's boldest daring!
That arm which, nerved with thundering fate,
Crush'd the despot's proudest bane,
One quench'd in darkness, like the sinking star, [powerless age,
And one the palsied arm of tottering,
. . . . . . .

His royal visage seam'd with many a scar,
That Caledonian rear'd his martial

Who led the tyrant-quelling war,
Where Bannockburn's ensanguined flood
Swell'd with mingling hostile blood,
Soon Edward's myriads struck with deep dismay, [their way.
And Scotia's troop of brothers win
(Oh, glorious deed to bay a tyrant's band!)
Oh, heavenly joy to free our native
While high their mighty chief pour'd on the doubling storm.

VERSES
TO MISS GRAHAM OF FINTRY, WITH A PRESENT OF SONGS.

Here, where the Scottish Muse immortal lives, [bers join'd,
In sacred strains and tuneful num-
Accept the gift, though humble he who [rest, gives:
Rich is the tribute of the grateful

So may no ruffian feeling in thy breast
Discordant jar thy bosom - chords amon-lg [rest,
But Peace attune thy gentle soul to Or Love, ecstatic, wake his seraph
song!

Or Pity's notes, in luxury of tears,
As modest Want the tale of woe reveals; [endears,
While conscious Virtue all the strain
And heaven-born Piety her sanction seals.

THE TREE OF LIBERTY.

This poem was taken from a MS. in the poet's handwriting in the possession of Mr. James Duncan, Mossefield, near Glasgow, and was first printed in Mr. Robert Chambers' edition of the poet's works, 1838.

Heard ye o' the tree o' France,
I wannah wha's the name o't;
Around it a' the patriots dance,
Weel Europe kens the fame o't.
It stands where ance the Bastile stood,
A prison built by kings, man,
When Superstition's hellish brood
Kept France in leading-strings, man.

Know not.
Upo' this tree there grows sic fruit,
Its virtues a' can tell, man;
It raises man aboon the brute,
It makes him ken himsel, man.
Gif ance the peasant taste a bit,
He's greater than a lord, man.
And wi' the beggar shares a mite
Of a' he can afford; man.

This fruit is worth a' Afric's wealth,
To comfort us 'twas sent, man:
To gie the sweetest blush o' health,
And mak us a' content, man.
It clears the een, it cheers the heart,
Maks high and low guid friends, man,
And he wha acts the traitor's part
It to perdition sends, man.

My blessings aye attend the chiel2
Wha pitied Gallia's slaves, man,
And staw3 a branch, spite o' the deil,
Frae yont4 the western waves, man.
Fair Virtue water'd it wi' care,
And now she sees wi' pride, man,
How weel it buds and blossoms there,
Its branches spreading wide, man.

But vicious folk aye hate to see
The woes o' Virtue thrive, man;
The courtly vermin's bann'd the tree,
And grat5 to see it thrive, man;
King Louis thought to cut it down,
When it was unco6 sma', man;
For this the watchman cracked his crown,
Cut aff his head and a', man.

A wicked crew syne,7 on a time,
Did tak a solemn aith, man,
It ne'er should flourish to its prime,
I wat8 they pledged their faith, man.
Awa9 they gaed,9 wi' mock parade,
Like beagles hunting game, man,
But soon grew weary o' the trade,
And wish'd they'd been at hame, man.

For Freedom, standing by the tree,
Her sons did loudly ca', man;
She sang a sang o' liberty,
Which pleased them ane and a', man.
By her inspired, the new-born race
Soon drew the avenging steel, man;

The hirelings ran — her foes gied10 chase,
And bang'd11 the despot weel, man.

Let Britain boast her hardy oak,
Her poplar and her pine, man,
Auld Britain ance could crack her joke,
And o'er her neighbours shine, man.
But seek the forest round and round,
And soon 'twill be agreed, man,
That sic a tree cannot be found
'Twixt London and the Tweed, man.

Without this tree, alake, this life
Is but a vale o' woe, man;
A scene o' sorrow mix'd wi' strife,
Nae real joys we know, man.
We labour soon, we labour late,
To feed the titled knave, man;
And a' the comfort we're to get
Is that ayont the grave, man.

Wi' plenty o' sic trees, I trow,
The world would live in peace, man;
The sword would help to mak a plough,
'The din o' war wad cease, man.
Like brethren in a common cause,
We'd on each other smile, man;
And equal rights and equal laws
Wad gladden every isle, man.

Wae worth the loon12 wha wadhna eat
Sic halesome dainty cheer, man;
I'd gie my shoon free aff my feet,
To taste sic fruit, I swear, man.
Syne let us pray, and England may
'Sure plant this far-famed tree, man;
And blithe we'll sing, and hail the day
That gives us liberty, man.

TO CHLORIS.

The Chloris of the following lines, and of sev- eral songs of the poet's, was a Mrs. Whelpdale, the beautiful daughter of Mr. William Lorimer, farmer of Kemmis Hall, near Ellisland. Her marriage was unfortunate, for a few months after it took place she was separated from her husband, whom she did not again meet for twenty-three years.

'Tis Friendship's pledge, my young
fair friend,
Nor thou the gift refuse,
Nor with unwilling ear attend
The moralising Muse.

10 Gave. 11 Beat. 12 Fellow.
Since thou, in all thy youth and charms,
Must bid the world adieu
(A world 'gainst peace in constant arms)
To join the friendly few.

Since thy gay morn of life o'ercast,
Chill came the tempest's lower;
(And ne'er misfortune's eastern blast
Did nip a fairer flower.)

Since life's gay scenes must charm no more,
Still much is left behind;
Still nobler wealth last thou in store—
The comforts of the mind!

Thine is the self-approving glow,
On conscious honour's part:
And, dearest gift of Heaven below,
Thine friendship’s truest heart.

The joys refined of sense and taste,
With every Muse to rove:
And doubly were the poet blest,
These joys could he improve.

VERSEs

ON THE DESTRUCTION OF THE WOODS
NEAR DRuMLAnRiG.

The Duke of Queensberry, who was no favourite of the poet's, and who was deservedly held in little esteem wherever his character was known, had (we quote from Mr. Chambers) "stripped his domains of Drumlanrig in Dumfriesshire, and Neddpath in Peeblesshire, of all the wood fit for being cut, in order to enrich the Countess of Yar- mouth, whom he supposed to be his daughter, and to whom, by a singular piece of good fortune on her part, Mr. George Selwyn, the celebrated wit, also left a fortune, under the same, and probably equally mistaken, impression."

As on the banks o' wandering Nith
Ae smiling summer morn I stray'd,
And traced its bonny howes and haughs,
Where linties sang and lambkins play'd,
I sat me down upon a craig,
And drank my fill o' fancy's dream,
When, from the eddying deep below,
Uprose the genius of the stream.

Dark, like the frowning rock, his brow,
And troubled like his wintry wave,
And deep, as sighs¹ the boding wind
Amang his eaves, the sigh he gave—
"And came ye here, my son," he cried,
"To wander in my birken shade?"

"There was a time, it's nae lang syne,²
Ye might hae seen me in my pride,
When a' my banks sae bravely saw
Their woody pictures in my tide;
When hanging beech and spreading elm
Shaded my stream sae clear and cool;
And stately oaks their twisted arms
Threw broad and dark across the pool:

"When glinting through the trees ap-pear'd
The wee white cot aboon the mill,
And peacefu' rose its ingle reck.³
That slowly curl'd up the hill.
But now the cot is bare and cauld,
Itsbranchy shelter's lost and gone,
And scarce a stinted birk is left
To shiver in the blast its lane."

"Alas!" said I, "what ruefu' chance
Has twin'd ye o' your stately trees!
Has laid your rocky bosom bare?
Was it the bitter eastern blast,
That scatters blight in early spring?
Or was 't the wil-fire scorched their boughs,
Or canker-worm wi' secret sting?"

"Nae eastlin blast," the sprite replied;
"It blew na here sae fierce and fell;
And on my dry and halestone banks
Nae canker worms get leave to dwell:
Man! cruel man!" the genius sigh'd—
As through the cliffs he sank him down—
"The worm that gnaw'd my bonny
That reptile wears a ducal crown!"
ADDRESS
SPoken by Miss Fontenelle on Her Benefit Night.

"We have had a brilliant theatre here this season," the poet writes to Mrs. Dunlop; "only, as all other business does, it experiences a stagnation of trade from the epidemical complaint of the country—want of cash. I mention our theatre merely to lug in an occasional address which I wrote for the benefit night of one of the actresses."

Still anxious to secure your partial favour, [than ever, And not less anxious, sure, this night A Prologue, Epilogue, or some such matter, [ing better; 'Twould vamp my bill, said I, if nothing So sought a poet, roosted near the skies, Told him I came to feast my curious eyes; [printed; Said nothing like his works was ever And last, my Prologue-business silly hinted. I could no more—askance the creature eyeing, [for crying? D'ye think, said I, this face was made I'll laugh, that's poz—nay, more, the world shall know it: [Poet! And so, your servant! gloomy Master Firm as my creed, sirs, 'tis my fix'd belief, That Misery's another word for Grief; I also think—so may I be a bride! That so much laughter, so much life enjoy'd.

To sum up all, be merry, I advise; And as we're merry, may we still be wise!

TO COLLECTOR MITCHELL.

The poet died within a few months of writing this. But Collector Mitchell, who was a sincere friend to him, was not aware of his distress at this time.

FRIEND of the poet, tried and leal, Wha, wanting thee, might beg or steal; Alake! alake! the meikle deil Wi' a' his witches Are at it skelpin'! jig and reel, In my poor pouches!

I modestly fu' fain wad hint it, That one pound one I sairly want it; If wi' the hizzie down ye sent it, It would be kind; And while my heart wi' life-blood dundit, I'd bear't in mind.

So may the auld year gang' out moaning To see the new come laden, groaning, Wi' double plenty o'er the loaning To thee and thine; Domestic peace and comforts crowning The hale design.

POSTSCRIPT.

Ye've heard this while how I've been licket, And by fell Death was nearly nicket; Grim loun! he gat me by the fecket, And sair me sheuk; But by guid luck I lap a wicket, And turn'd a neuk.

But by that health, I've got a share o' t, And by that life I'm promised mair My hale and weel I'll tak a care o' t, A teintier way:

Then farewell folly, hide and hair o' t, For ance and aye!

TO COLONEL DE PEYSTER.*

My honour'd colonel, deep I feel Your interest in the poet's weel. Ah! now sma' heart hae I to speel! The steep Parnassus, Surrounded thus by bolus pill And potion glasses.

Oh, what a canty world were it, Would pain, and care, and sickness spare it; And fortune favour worth and merit As they deserve!

And aye a rowth, roast beef and claret; Syne wha wad starve?

Dame Life, though fiction out may trick her, And in paste gems and frippery deck Oh! flickering, feeble, and unsicker I've found her still, Aye wavering, like the willow wicker, 6 'Tweed good and ill.

Then that curst carmine or, auld Satan, Watches, like baudrons by a ratton, Our sinfu' saul to get a claut on Wi' felon ire; Syne whip! his tail ye'll ne'er cast saut on— He's aff like fire.

Ah, Nick! ah, Nick! it is nae fair, First showing us the tempting ware, Bright wines and bonny lasses rare, To put us daft;

Syne weave, unseen, the spider snare O' hell's damn'd waft.

Poor man, the flee aft bizzes by, And aft as chance he comes thee nigh, Thy auld damn'd elbow yeuks wi' joy, And hellish pleasure;

Already in thy fancy's eye, Thy sicker treasure.

Soon, heels-o'er-gowdie! in he gangs, And, like a sheep-head on a tangs, Thy grinning laugh enjoys his pangs And murdering wrestle,

As, dangling in the wind, he hangs A gibbet's tassel.

But lest you think I am uncivil, To plague you with this draunting drivel, Abjuring a' intentions evil, I quat my pen: The Lord preserve us frae the devil! Amen! Amen!

TO MISS JESSY LEWARS, DUM-FRIES,

WITH A PRESENT OF BOOKS.

Cunningham says:—" Miss Jessy Lewars watched over the poet and his little household during his declining days with all the affectionate reverence of a daughter. For this she has received the silent thanks of all who admire the genius of Burns, or look with sorrow on his setting sun; she has received more—the undying thanks of the poet himself; his songs to her honour, and his simple gifts of books and verse, will keep her name and fame long in the world."

THINE be the volumes, Jessy, fair, And with them take the poet's prayer— That Fate may in her fairest page, With every kindliest, best presage Of future bliss, enrol thy name; With native worth, and spotless fame, And wakeful caution still aware Of ill—but chief, man's felon snare. All blameless joys on earth we find, And all the treasures of the mind— These be thy guardian and reward; So prays thy faithful friend—the Bard.

EPISTLES.

EPISTLE TO JOHN RANKINE
ENCLOSING SOME POEMS.

O rough, rude, ready-witted Rankine,
The wae o' cocks for fun and drinkin'!
There's mony godly folks are thinkin' your dreams and tricks
Will send you, Korah-like, a-sink'in',
Straight to auld Nick's.

Ye hae sae mony cracks and cants,
And in your wicked, drunk'n rants,
Ye mak a devil o' the saunts,
And fill them fou';
And then their failings, flaws, and wants,
Are a' seen through.

Hypocrisy, in mercy spare it!
That holy robe, oh, dinna tear it! [it,
Spare't for their sakes wha aften wear
The lads in black!
But your curst wit, when it comes near it,
Rives't aff their back.

Think, wicked sinner, wha ye're skaithing,
It's just the blue-gown badge and

O' saunts; tak that, ye lea'e them naething
To ken them by,
Frae ony unregenerate heathen
Like you or I.

I've sent you here some rhyming ware,
A' that I bargain'd for, and mair;
Sae, when ye hae an hour to spare,
I will expect
Yon sang; ye'll sen't wi' cannie care,
And no neglect.

Though, faith, sma' heart hae I to sing!
My muse dow' scarcely spread her
I've play'd mysel a bonny spring,
And danced my fill!
I'd better gaen and sair't the king,
At Bunker's Hill.

'Twas ane night lately, in my fun,
I gaed a roving wi' the gun,
And brought a patrick to the grun,
A bonny hen,
And, as the twilight was begun,
Thought mane wad ken.

The poor wee thing was little hurt;
I straikit it a wee for sport, [for't;
Ne'er thinking they wad fash me
But, die-l-ma care!
Somebody tells the poacher-court
The hale affair.

Some auld-used hands had ta'en a note,
That sic a hen had got a shot,

† A minister or elder, some say Holy Willie, had called on Rankine, and had partaken so freely of whisky toddy as to have ended by tumbling dead-drunk on the floor.
‡ "The allusion here is to a privileged class of mendicants well known in Scotland by the name of 'Blue Gowns.' The order was instituted by James V. of Scotland, the royal 'Gaberlunzie-Man.'"
I was suspected for the plot;
I scorn'd to lie;
So gat the whistle o' my great,
And pay't the fee.

But, by my gun, o' guns the wale,
And by my pouter and my hail,
And by my hen, and by her tail,
I vow and swear!
The game shall pay o'er moor and dale,
For this, neist year.

As soon's the clocking-time is by,
And the wee pouts begun to cry,
Lord, I'se hae sportin' by and by.
For my gowd guinea.

Though I should herd the buckskin kye

For't in Virginia.

Truth, they had muckle for to blame!
'Twas neither broken wing nor limb,
But twa-three draps about the wame
Scarce through the feathers.
And baith a yellow George to claim
And thole their blethers.

It pits me aye as mad's a hare;
So I can rhyme nor write nae mair;
But pennyworths again is fair,
When time's expedient.

Meanwhile I am, respected sir,
Your most obedient.

EPISTLE TO DAVIE,

A BROTHER POET.

January, 1785.

David Sillar, to whom this epistle was addressed, was a native of Torbolton, a poet and scholar. He was for many years a schoolmaster at Irvine, and was latterly a magistrate of that town. He published a volume of poems in the Scottish dialect.

WHILE winds frae aff Ben Lomond blaw,

And bar the doors wi' driving snaw,
And hing
I set me down to pass the time,
And spin a verse or twa o' rhyme,
In hemly westlin' jingle.

While frosty winds blaw in the drift,
Ben to the chimla lug.

---

13 Nonsense.

1 Hang.
2 Fire.
3 Homely west country dialect.
4 Chimney corner.

I grudge a wee the great folk's gift,
That live sae bien
I tent less, and want less
Their roomy fire-side;
But hanker and canker
To see their cursed pride.

It's hardly in a body's power
To keep at times frae being sour,
To see how things are shared;
How best o' chiel's are whiles in want,
While coofs on countless thousands rant;
And ken na how to wair't;
But, Davie, lad, ne'er fash your head,
Though we hae little gear,
We're fit to win our daily bread,
As lang's we're hale and fier:
"Mair spier na, nor feer na,"
Auld age ne'er mind a feg,
The last o't, the worst o't,
Is only but to beg.

To lie in kilns and barns at e'en, thin,
When banes are crazed, and bluid is
Is doubtless great distress!
Yet then content could make us blest;
Even then, sometimes, we'd snatch a taste
Of truest happiness.
The honest heart, that's free frae a'
Intended fraud or guile,
However Fortune kick the ba',
Has aye some cause to smile:
And mind still, you'll find still,
A comfort this nae sma';
Nae mair then, we'll care then,
Nae farther can we fa.'

What though like commoners of air,
We wander out we know not where.
But either house or hall! forests,
Yet nature's charms—the hills and
The sweeping vales, and foaming floods—
Are free alike to all.

In days when daisies deck the ground,
And blackbirds whistle clear,
With honest joy our hearts will bound
To see the coming year:
On braes, when we choose then,
We'll sit and sowth* a tune:

*Comfortable.
6 Heed.
7 Men.
8 Fools.
9 Live extravagantly.
10 Spend it.
11 Trouble.
12 Goods or wealth.
13 Whole and sound.
14 More ask not, nor fear not.
15 Fig.
16 Whistle.
Syne rhyme till, we'll time till't,
And sing't when we hae dune.

It's no in titles nor in rank:
It's no in wealth like Lon' on bank
To purchase peace and rest:
It's no in making muckle mair;[1]
It's no in books, it's no in learn;[13]
To make us truly blest;
If happiness hae not her seat
And centre in the breast,
We may be wise, or rich, or great,
But never can be blest.
Nae treasures, nor pleasures,
Could make us happy lang:
The heart aye's the part aye
That makes us right or wrang.

Think ye that sic[19] as you and I, [dry,
Wha drudge and drive through wet and
Wi' never-ceasing toil;
Think ye, are we less blest than they
Wha scarcely tent[20] us in their way,
As hardly worth their while?
Alas! how aft in haughty mood,
God's creatures they oppress!
Or else, neglecting a' that's guid,
They riot in excess!
Baith careless and fearless
Of either heaven or hell!
Esteeming and deeming
It's a' an idle tale!

Then let us cheerfu' acquiesce;
Nor make our scanty pleasures less,
By pining at our state;
And, even should misfortunes come,
I here wha sit hae met wi' some,
An's thankful' for them yet.
They gie the wit of age to youth;
They let us ken oursel';
They make us see the naked truth,
The real guid and ill.
Though losses and crosses
Be lessons right severe,
There's wit there, ye'll get there,
Ye'll find nae other where.

But tent me, Davie, ace o' hearts! [tes,
(To say aught less wad wrang the car-
And flattery I detest.)
This life has joys for you and I;
And joys that riches ne'er could buy.
And joys the very best.

There's a' the pleasures o' the heart,
The lover and the frien';
Ye hae your Meg,* your dearest part,
And I my darling Jean!
It warms me, it charms me,
To mention but her name:
It heats me, it beets me,
And sets me a' on flame!
Oh, all ye powers who rule above!
O Thou, whose very self art love!
Thou know'st my words sincere!
The life-blood streaming through my heart,
Or: my more dear immortal part,
Is not more fondly dear!
When heart-corrodng care and grief
Deprive my soul of rest,
Her dear idea brings relief
And solace to my breast.
Thou Being, all-seeing,
Oh, hear my fervent prayer!
Still take her and make her
Thy most peculiar care!

All hail! ye tender feelings dear!
The smile of love, the friendly tear,
The sympathetic glow!
Long since, this world's thorny ways
Had number'd out my weary days,
Had it not been for you!
Fate still has blest me with a friend,
In every care and ill;
And oft a more endearing band,
A tie more tender still.
It lightens, it brightens
The tenebrific scene,
To meet with, and greet with
My Davie or my Jean!

Oh, how that name inspires my style!
The words come skelpin',[21] rank and Amaist[2] before I ken [23]
[file,
The ready measure rises as fine
As Pegasus and the famous Nine
Were glowerin' owre my pen.
My spaviet[24] Pegasus will' limp,
Till ance he's fairly hett,
And then he'll hich,[25] and still,[26] and
And rin an unco fit.

* Sillar's flame was a lass of the name of Margaret Orr, who had charge of the children of Mrs. Stewart of Stair. It was not the fortune of "Meg" to become Mrs. Sillar.
But lest then, the beast then,
Should rue his this hasty ride,
I'll light now, and dig his now
His sweaty, wizen'd hide.

EPISODE TO JOHN LAPRAIK,
AN OLD SCOTTISH BARD.
April 1, 1785.

WHILE briers and woodbines budding green,
And pa'ricks loud at e'en,
And morning poussie whidden seen,
Inspire my Muse,
This freedom in an unknown frien' I pray excuse.

On Fasten-e'en we had a rockin',
'To ca' the crack and weave our stockin';
And there was muckle fun and jokin',
Ye needna doubt;
At length we had a hearty yokin'
At sang about.

There was ae sang, amang the rest,
Aboon them a' it pleased me best,
That some kind husband had addrest
To some sweet wife:
It thirl'd the heart-strings through the breast,
A' to the life.

I've scarce heard ought described sae weel,
What generous manly bosoms feel;
Thought I, "Can this be Pope, or Steele,
Or Beattie's wark?"
They tauld me 'twas an odd kind chiel
About Muirkirk.

It pat me fidgin-fain to hear't,
And sae about him there I spier'd.

Then a' that kent him round declared
He had ingine;
That nane excell'd it, few cam near't,
It was sae fine.

That, set him to a pint of ale,
And either douce or merry tale,
Or rhymes and sangs he'd made himself,
Or witty catches.
'Tween Inverness and Teviotdale
He had few matches.

Then up I gat, and swore an aith,
Though I should pawn my pleugh and graith
Or die a cadger pinnie's death,
At some dike back,
A pint and gill I'd gie them baith
To hear you crack.

But, first and foremost, I should tell,
Amaist as soon as I could spell,
I to the crambo-jingle fell,
Though rude and rough:
Yet crooning to a body's sel
Does weel enough.

I am nae poet, in a sense,
But just a rhymer, like by chance,
And hae to learning nae pretence,
Yet what the matter?
Whene'er my Muse does on me glance,
I jingle at her.

Your critic folk my cock their nose,
And say, "How can you e'er propose,
You, wha ken hardly verse frae prose,
To mak a sang?"
But, by your leaves, my learned foes,
Ye're maybe wrang.

What's a' your jargon o' your schools,
Your Latin names for horns and stools;
If honest nature made you fools,
What sairs your grammars?
Ye'd better ta'en up spades and shools,
Or knappin'-hammers.

A set o' dull, conceited hashes,
Confuse their brains in college classes!
They gang in stirks, and come out asses,
Plain truth to speak:

20 Reprend. 29 Wipe. 30 Withered.
1 Partridges. 2 Screaming. 3 The hare.
4 To drive the talk. 5 Much. 6 Bout. 7 Man.
8 Made me fidget with desire. 9 Inquired.
* In former times young women were wont to meet together, each having her distaff or rock for the purpose of spinning while the song and the gossip went round.
† This song is entitled, "When I upon thy bosom lean."
And syne\(^{19}\) they think to climb Parnassus
By dint o' Greek!

Gie me ae spark o' Nature's fire!
That's a the learning I desire;
Then, though I drudge through dub and mire
At pleugh or cart,
My Muse, though hamely in attire,
May touch the heart.

Oh for a spunk o' Allan's\(^{20}\) glee,
Or Fergusson's, the bauld and sly,
Or bright Lapraik's, my friend to be,
If I can hit it!
That would be leer\(^{22}\) enough for me,
If I could get it!

Now, sir, if ye hae friends enow,
Though real friends I b'lieve are few,
Yet, if your catalogue be fu',
I'se no insist,
But gif ye want ae friend that's true,
I'm on your list.

I winna\(^{23}\) blaw about mysel;
As ill I like my faults to tell;
But friends and folk that wish me well,
They sometimes roose\(^{24}\) me;
Though I maun'\(^{25}\) own, as mony still
As far abuse me.

There's ae wee fault\(^{26}\) they whiles lay to me,
I like the lasses—Gude forgie me!
For mony a plack they wheddle frae me,
At dance or fair;
Maybe some ither thing they gie me,
They weel can spare.

But Mauchline race, or Mauchline fair,
I should be proud to meet you there;
We'se gie ae night's discharge to Care,
If we forgather,
And hae a swap\(^{27}\) o' rhymin' ware
Wi' ane anither.

The four-gill chap\(^{28}\) we'se gar\(^{29}\) him clatter,

And kirsen\(^{30}\) him wi' reekin' water;
Syne we'll sit down and tak our whitter,\(^{31}\)
To cheer our heart;
And faith, we'se be acquainted better
Before we part.

There's naething like the honest nappy!\(^{32}\)
Whar'll\(^{33}\) ye e'er see men sae happy,
Or women sonsie, saft, and sappy\(^{34}\)
'Tween morn and morn,
As them wha like to taste the drappy\(^{35}\)
In glass or horn!

I've seen me dais't\(^{36}\) upon a time,
I scarce could wink, or see a styme;\(^{37}\)
Just ae half-mutchkin does me prime,
Aught less is little,
Then back I rattle on the rhyme,
As gleg's a whittle!\(^{38}\)

Awa' ye selfish warly race, [grace,
Wha think that havin's,\(^{39}\) sense, and E'en love and friendship, should give place
To catch-the-plack!\(^{40}\)
I dinna\(^{41}\) like to see your face,
Nor hear your crack.\(^{42}\)

But ye whom social pleasure charms,
Whose hearts the tide of kindness warms,
Who hold your being on the terms,
"Each aid the others,"
Come to my bowl, come to my arms,
My friends, my brothers.

But to conclude my long epistle,
As my auld pen's worn to the grissle;
Twa lines frae you would gar me fis-sle,\(^{43}\)
Who am, most fervent,
While I can either sing or whissle,
Your friend and servant.

SECOND EPISTLE TO LAPRAIK.
April 21, 1785.

While new-ca'd kye rowte\(^{1}\) at the stake,
And ponnies reel\(^{2}\) in pleugh or braik,\(^{3}\)

\(^{19}\) Then. \(^{20}\) Allan Ramsay. \(^{21}\) Sly.
\(^{22}\) Learning. \(^{23}\) Will not. \(^{24}\) Praise. \(^{25}\) Must.
\(^{26}\) Small fault. \(^{27}\) An exchange. \(^{28}\) Stoup.
\(^{29}\) Make.

\(^{30}\) Christen. \(^{31}\) Hearty draught. \(^{32}\) Ale.
\(^{33}\) Where will. \(^{34}\) Comely. \(^{35}\) Smalldrop.
\(^{36}\) Stupid. \(^{37}\) See in the least. \(^{38}\) As keen as a knife. \(^{39}\) Decorum. \(^{40}\) To seek after money. \(^{41}\) Do not. \(^{42}\) Talk. \(^{43}\) Fidget.
\(^{1}\) Driven cows low. \(^{2}\) Smoke. \(^{3}\) Harrow.
This hour on e'enin's edge I take,
To own I'm debtor
To honest-hearted, auld Lapraik,
For his kind letter.

Forjesket sair, wi' weary legs,
Raftlin' the corn out-owre the rigs,
Or dealing through amang the naigs
Their ten-hours' bite,
My awkward Muse sair pleads and begs
I wouldna write.

The tapetless ramf ee zled hizzie, She's saft at best, and something lazy, Quo' she, "Ye ken, we've been sae busy,
This month, and mair,
That, truth, my head is grown right dizzy,
And something sair."

Her dowff excuses pat me mad:
"Conscience," says I, "ye thowless jad!"
I'll write, and that a hearty blaud,
This vera night;
So dinna ye affront your trade,
But rhyme it right.

"Shall bauld Lapraik, the king o' hearts,
Though mankind were a pack o' cartes,
Roose you sae weil for your deserts,
In terms sae friendly,
Yet ye'll neglect to shaw your parts,
And thank him kindly?"

Sae I gat paper in a blink,
And down gaed stumpee in the ink:
Quoth I, "Before I sleep a wink,
I vow I'll close it;
And if ye winna mak it clink,"
By Jove I'll prove it!"

Sae, I've begun to scrawl, but whether
In rhyme, or prose, or baith thegither,
Or some hotch-potch* that's rightly neither,
Let time mak proof;

But I shall scribble down some blether11
Just clean aff-look.†
My worthy friend, ne'er grudge and carp,
[sharp;
Though Fortune use you hard and come, kittle12 up your moorland-harp
Wi' glesomous touch!
Ne'er mind how Fortune waft and warp;
She's but a bitch.

She's gien13 me mony a jert and fleg,14
Sin' I could striddle owre a rig;
But, by the Lord, though I should beg
Wi' lyart pow,15
I'll laugh, and sing, and shake my leg,
As lang's I dow!16

Now comes the sax and twentieth simmer
I've seen the bud upo' the timmer,17
Still persecuted by the limmer18
Frae year to year;
But yet, despite the kittle kimmer,19
I, Rob, am here.

Do you envy the city gent,
Behint a kist to lie and sklent,‡
Or purse-proud, big wi' cent. per cent.
And muckle wame,20
In some bit brugh to represent
A bailie's name?

Or is't the paughty,21 feudal thane,
Wi' ruffled sark and glancing cane,
Wha thinks himself 'nae sheep-shank bane,
But lordly stalks,
While caps and bonnets aff are ta'en,22
As by he walks.

O Thou wha gies us each guid gift!
Gie me o' wit and sense a lift,
Then turn me, if Thou please, adrift,
Through Scotland wide;
Wi' cits nor lairds I wadna shift,
In a' their pride!

Were this the charter of our state,
"On pain o' hell be rich and great,"

11 Nonsense. 12 Tickle. 13 Given. 14 Jerk and kick. 15 Gray head. 16 Can. 17 Tree.
18 Jade. 19 Girl. 20 Big belly. 21 Haughty.
22 Taken.
† Scoticism for extemporaneous.
‡ Behind a counter to lie and leer.
Damnation then would be our fate
Beyond remead;
But, thanks to Heaven, that's no the gate
We learn our creed.

For thus the royal mandate ran,
When first the human race began,
"The social, friendly, honest man,
Whate'er he be,
'Tis he fulfills great Nature's plan,
And none but he!"

O mandate, glorious and divine!
The ragged followers o' the Nine,
Poor, thoughtless devils! yet may shine
In glorious light,
While sordid sons o' Mammon's line
Are dark as night.

Though here they scrape, and squeeze, and growl,
Their worthless nievefu' of a soul
May in some future carcase howl,
The forest's fright;
Or in some day-detesting owl
May shun the light.

Then may Lapraik and Burns arise,
To reach their native kindred skies,
And sing their pleasures, hopes, and joys,
In some mild sphere,
Still closer knit in friendship's ties
Each passing year!

EPISTLE TO JOHN GOUDIE, KILMARNOCK,

ON THE PUBLICATION OF HIS ESSAYS.

John Goudie was a Kilmarnock tradesman.
His Essay, fully discussing the authority of the Holy Scriptures, first appeared in 1780, and a new edition in 1785. The publication of the new edition called forth the following epistle from the poet:

O Goudie! terror of the Whigs,
Dread of black coats and reverend wigs,
Sour Bigotry, on her last legs,
Girnin', looks back,
Wishin' the ten Egyptian plagues
Wad seize you quick.

Poor gapin', growlin', Superstition,
Waes me! she's in a sad condition;
Fie! bring Black Jock, her state physician,
To see her water.
Alas! there's ground o' great suspicion
She'll ne'er get better.

Auld Orthodoxy long did grapple,
But now she's got an unco ripple;
Haste, gie her name u' the chapel,
Nigh unto death;
See how she fetches at the thrapple,
And gasps for breath!

Enthusiasm's past redemption,
Gaen in a galloping consumption,
Not a' the quacks, wi' a' their gumpition,
Will ever mend her.
Her feeble pulse gies strong presumption
Death soon will end her.

'Tis you and Taylor are the chief,
Wha are to blame for this mischief;
But gin the Lord's ain folk gat leave,
A toom tar-barrel
And twa red peats wad send relief,
And end the quarrel.

EPISTLE TO WILLIAM SIMPSON,

OCHILTREE.

May, 1785.

William Simpson was schoolmaster of Ochiltree, a parish a few miles south of Mauchline. According to Mr. Chambers, he had sent a rhymed epistle to Burns, on reading his satire of the "Twa Herds," which called forth the following beautiful epistle in reply:

I gat your letter, winsome Willie;
Wi' grateful heart I thank you brawlie,
Though I maun say't, I wad be silly,
And unco vain,
Should I believe, my coaixin' billie,

POSTSCRIPT.
My memory's no worth a preen. I had amaist forgotten clean Ye bade me write you what they mean By this New Light, * * 'Bout which our herds sae aff ha's been Maist like to fight.

In days when mankind were but callans At grammar, logic, and sic talents, They took nae pains their speech to balance, Or rules to gie, But spak their thoughts in plain, braid lallans, Like you or me.

in the auld times, they thought the moon, Just like a sark, or pair of shoon. Wore by degrees, till her last room Gae'd past their viewing: And shortly after she was done, They gat a new one.

This pass'd for certain—undisputed: It ne'er cam i' their heads to doubt it, Till chieflers gat up and wad confute it, And ca'd it wrang:
And muckle din there was about it, Baith loud and lang.

Some herds, weel learn'd upo' the beuk, Wad threap auld folk the thing mis- For 'twas the auld moon turn'd a neuk And out o' sight, And backlin's- comin', to the leuk She grew mair bright.

This was denied—it was affir'm'd; The herd and hirsels were alarm'd; The reverend gray-beards raved and storm'd That beardless laddies Should think they better were in-form'd Than their auld daddies

Fray less to mair it gaed to sticks; Fray words and aiths to clours and nicks; And mony a fallow gat his licks, Wi' hearty crunt:
And some, to learn them for their tricks, Were hang'd and brunt.

This game was play'd in mony lands, And Auld-Light caddies' burre hands That, faith, the youngsters took the Wi' nimble shanks,
Till lairds forbade, by strict commands, Sic bludy pranks.

But New-Light herds gat sic a cowe, Folk thought them ruin'd stick and stowe.

22 Found. 23 Jostle, push. 24 Describe. 26 Hum over. 28 Too long unknown to each other. 27 Struggle. 28 Rope. 29 Fin. 30 Juveniles. 31 Give. 32 Lowland speech. 1 Which have died of disease; and which are understood to belong to the shepherds as their prequisites. * An allusion to the "Twa Herds." 26 Holy.
Till now amaist on every knowe\textsuperscript{53}
Ye'll find ane placed;
And some their New-Light fair avow,
Just quite barefaced.

Nae doubt the Auld-Light flocks are bleatin'; [sweatin';
Their zealous herds are vex'd and
Mysel, I've even seen them greetin'\textsuperscript{54}
Wi' giren'\textsuperscript{55} spite,
To hear the moon sae sadly lied on,
By word and write.

But shortly they will cowe the loons\textsuperscript{56}
Some Auld-Light herds in neibor towns
Are mind't, in things they ca' balloons,
To tak a flight,
And stay ae month amang the moons,
And see them right.

Guid observation they will gie them;
And when the auld moon's gaun to lea'e them, [wi' them,
The hindmost shaird,\textsuperscript{57} they'll fetch it
Just i' their pouch,\textsuperscript{58}
And when the New-Light billies\textsuperscript{59} see them,
I think they'll crouch!

Sae, ye observed that a' this clatter\textsuperscript{60}
Is naething but a "moonshine matter:"
But though dull prose-folk Latin splatter
In logic tulzie,\textsuperscript{61}
I hope we bardies ken some better
Than mind sic brulzie.\textsuperscript{62}

\textbf{THIRD EPISTLE TO JOHN LAPRAIK}

This epistle did not appear in either of the editions of his works which the poet saw through the press. It was written while in the midst of his second harvest, at Mossgiel—an unfortunate one, as it proved; for being both a late and a wet season, an evil conjunction on the cold wet soil, half the crops were lost.

\textit{September 13, 1795}

Then muse-inspirin' aqua vitae [witty,
Shall make us baith sae blithe and
Till ye forget ye're auld and gatty,^{17}
And be as canty^{18} [ty.]
As ye were nine years less than thret
Sweet one and twenty !

But stooks are cowpit^{20} wi' the blast,
And now the sinn keeks^{21} in the west,
Then I mann rin amang the rest,
And quat my chanter;
Sae I subscribe myself in haste,
Yours, Rab the Ranter.

EPISTLE TO THE REV. JOHN M'MATH.

The Rev. John M'Math was at this time assistant to the Rev. Peter Wodrow of Torbolton.
As a copy of "Holy Willie's Prayer" accompanied the epistle, we need hardly say he was a member of the New-light party.
The bleak ungenial harvest weather is very graphically pictured in the first verse.

September 17, 1785.

WHILE at the stock the shearsers' cower
To shun the bitter blaudin' shower,
Or in gulrvage rinnin' scower^{3}
To pass the time,
To you I dedicate the hour
In idle rhyme.

My Musie, tired wi' mony a sonnet
On gown, and ban', and douce^{4} black bonnet,
Is grown right eerie^{5} now she's done it,
Lest they should blame her,
And rouse their holy thunder on it
And anathem her.

I own 'twas rash, and rather hardy,
That I, a simple country bardie,
Should meddle wi' a pack sae sturdy,
Wha, if they ken me,
Can easy, wi' a single wordie,
Lowse hell upon me.

But I gae mad at their grimaces,
Their sighin', cantin', grace-prout faces,

Their three-mile prayers, and half-mile graces;
Their raxin'^ conscience,
Whase greed, revenge, and pride disgraces
Waur nor^ their nonsense.

There's Gawn,^{6} misca't^{8} waur than a beast,
Wha has mair honour in his breast
Than mony scores as guid's the priest
Wha sae abus't him.
And may a bard no crack his jest
What way they've use't him?

See him, the poor man's friend in need,
The gentleman in word and deed,
And shall his fame and honour bleed
By worthless skellums,^{9}
And not a muse erect her head
To cowe the blellums^{10}

O Pope, had I thy satire's darts,
To gie the rascals their deserts,
I'd rip their rotten, hollow hearts,
And tell aloud,
Their juggling hocus-pocus arts,
To cheat the crowd.

God knows, I'm no the thing I should be,
Nor am I even the thing I could be,
But twenty times I rather would be
An atheist clean,
Than under gospel colours hid be
Just for a screen.

An honest man may like a glass,
An honest man may like a lass,
But mean revenge, and malice fause,^{11}
He'll still disdain,
And then cry zeal for gospel laws,
Like some we ken.

They take religion in their mouth;
They talk o' mercy, grace, and truth,
For what!—to gie their malice skouth^{12}
On some puir wight,^{13}
And hunt him down, o'er right and ruth,^{14}
To ruin straight.

All hail, Religion! maid divine!
Pardon a Muse so mean as mine,
Who, in her rough imperfect line,
Thus daurs to name thee;
To stigmatise false friends of thine
Can ne'er defame thee.

Though bloch and foul wi' mony a stain,
And far unworthy of thy train,
With trembling voice I tune my strain
To join with those Who boldly daur thy cause maintain
In spite o' foes.

In spite o' crowds, in spite o' mobs,
In spite o' undermining jobs,
In spite o' dark banditti stabs
At worth and merit,
By scoundrels, even wi' holy robes,
But hellish spirit.

O Ayr! my dear, my native ground,
Within thy presbytery's bound, A candid liberal band is found
Of public teachers,
As men, as Christians too, renown'd,
And manly preachers.

Sir, in that circle you are named;
Sir, in that circle you are famed;
And some, by whom your doctrine's blamed,
(Which gies you honour),
Even, sir, by them your heart's esteem'd,
And winning manner.

Pardon this freedom I have ta'en,
And if impertinent I've been,
Impute it not, good sir, in aue
Whase heart ne'er wrang'd ye,
But to his utmost would befriended
Ought that belonged ye.

SECOND EPISTLE TO DAVIE,
A BROTHER POET.

AULD NEIBOR,
I'm three times doubly o'er your debtor,
For your auld-farrant friendly letter;
Though I maun' say't, I doubt ye flatter,
Ye speak sae fair,
For my puir, silly, rhymin' clatter
Some less maun sair. 1

Hale be your heart, hale be your fiddle;
Lang may your elbow jink and diddle, 2
To cheer you through the weary widdle 3
O' war'ly cares,
Till bairns' bairns kindly cuddle 4
Your auld gray hairs.

But, Davie, lad, I'm rede ye're glakit; 5
I'm tauld the Muse ye hae negleckit;
And gif it's sae, ye sud be lickit 6
Until ye fyke; 7
Sic hauns as you sud ne'er be failkit, 8
Be haint 9 wha like.

For me, I'm on Parnassus' brink
Rivin 10 the words to gar 11 them clink;
Whiles daist wi' love, whilsts daist wi' drink,
Wi' jads or masons;
And whilsts, but aye owre late, I think
Braw sober lessons.

Of a' the thoughtless sons o' man,
Comm'en' me to the bardie clan;
Except it be some idle plan
O' rhymin' clink,
The devil-haet, 14 that I sud ban,
They ever think.
Nae thought, nae view, nae scheme o' livin',
Nae cares to gie us joy or grievin';
But just the pouchie 15 put the nieve 16 in,
And while o'ght's there,
Then hiltie skillett 17 we gae screevin', 18
And fash 19 nae mair.
Lecze me 20 on rhyme! its aye a treasure,
My chief, amaist my only pleasure,
't hame, a-fiel', at wark, or leisure,
The Muse, poor hizzle, 21
Though rough and raploch 22 be her measure,
She's seldom lazy.

Hand to the Muse, my dainty Davie,
The warl may play you mony a shavie; 23

1 Sagacious.  2 Must serve.

2 Elbow dodge and jerk.  3 Struggle.
Fondle.  6 I fear you are foolish.  7 Should be beaten.  8 Shrug.  9 Spared.  10 Saved.
11 Twisting.  12 Make.  13 Stupid.
14 The devil a bit.  15 Pocket.  16 Fist.
17 Helter

20 A term of endearment, an expression of hap-iness or pleasure.  21 Lass.  22 Course.
23 Trick.
But for the Muse she'll never leave ye,
Though e'er so purr,
Na, even though limpin' wi' the spavie—
Frae door to door.

EPISTLE TO JAMES SMITH.

James Smith, one of Burns' earliest friends, was a merchant in Mauchline. He was present at the scene in "Poosie Nansie," which suggested "The Jolly Beggars."

"Friendship! mysterious cement of the soul! Sweet'ner of life, and solder of society! I owe thee much."—BLAIR.

DEAR SMITH, the sleest, pankie thief, That e'er attempted stealth or rieff, Ye surely hae some warlock breet O wre human hearts;
For ne'er a bosom yet was prief Against your arts.

For me, I swear by sun and moon, And every star that blinks aboon, Ye've cost me twenty pair of shoon Just gaun to see you;
And every ither pair that's done, Mair ta'en I'm wi' you.

That auld capricious carlin, Nature, To make amends for scrimpit stature, She's turn'd you aff, a human creature On her first plan;
And in her freaks, on every feature She's wrote, "The Man."

Just now I've ta'en the fit o' rhyme, My barmie noodle's working prime, My fancy yerkit up sublime Wi' hasty summon:
Hae ye a leisure moment's time To hear what's comin'?

Some rhyme a neibor's name to lash; Some rhyme (vain thought!) for needfu' cash; [clash.
Some rhyme to court the country And raise a din, For me, an aim I never fashi; I rhyme for fun.

The star that rules; my luckless lot Has fated me the russet coat, And damn'd my fortune to the great; But in requit, Has blessed me wi' a random shot O' country wit.

This while my notion's ta'en a sk lent., To try my fate in guid black prent; But still, the mair I'm that way bent, Something cries, "Hoolie!" I rede you, honest man, tak tent, Ye'll shaw your folly.

"There's ither poets much your betters, Far seen in Greek, deep men o' letters, Hae thought they had insured their debtors A' future ages;
Now moths deform in shapeless tatters Their unknown pages."

Then farewell hopes o' laurel-boughs, To garland my poetic brows! Henceforth I'll rove where busy ploughs Are whistling thrang,
And teach the lanely heights and howes My rustic sang.

I'll wander on, with tentless heed How never halting moments speed, Till Fate shall snap the brittle thread: Then, all unknown,
I'll lay me with inglorious dead, Forgot and gone!

But why o' death begin a tale? Just now we're living sound and hale, Then top and maintop crowd the sail, Heave Care owre side!
And large, before Enjoyment's gale, Let's tak the tide.

This life, sae far's I understand, Is a' enchanted fairy-land, Where Pleasure is the magic wand, That, welded right, Maks hours like minutes, hand in hand, Dance by fu' light.

The magic wand then let us wield, For, ance that five-and forty's speel'd, Spavin.

—Spavin.

1 Slyest. 2 Knowing. 3 Robbery. 4 Spell. 5 Proof. 6 Shoes. 7 Woman. 8 Stunted. 9 Yeasty. 10 Fermented. 11 Gossip. 12 Noise. 13 Trouble. 14 Twist. 15 Beware. 16 Warn. 17 Care. 18 Hollows. 19 Aimless. 20 Climbed.
See, crazy, weary, joyless Eild, 21
  Wi' wrinkled face,
Comes hostin', 22 hirplin', 23 owre the field,
  Wi' creepin' pace.
When ance life's day draws near the gloamin',
Then fareweel vacant careless roamin';
And fareweel cheerfu' tankards foamin'
  And social noise;
And fareweel, dear deluding woman!
  The joy of joys!

O Life! how pleasant is thy morning,
Young Fancy's rays the hills adorning!
Cold-pausing Caution's lesson scorning,
  We risk away, [ing,
Like schoolboys, at the expected warn-
  To joy and play.

We wander there, we wander here,
We eye the rose upon the brier,
Unmindful that the thorn is near,
  Among the leaves;
And through the puny wound appear,
  Short while it grieves.

Some, lucky, find a flowery spot,
For which they never tol'd or swat; 24
They drink the sweet and eat the fat
  But care or pain;
And, haply, eye the barren hut
  With high disdain.

With steady aim some fortune chase;
Keen hope does every sinew brace;
Through fair, through foul, they urge the race
  And seize the prey:
Then cannie, 25 in some cozie 26 place,
  They close the day.

And others like your humble servan',
Poor wights! 27 nae rules nor rodes observin'
To right or left, eternal swervin',
  They zig-zag on; [vin',
Till curst with age, obscure and star-
  They often groan.

Alas! what bitter toil and straining—
But truce with peevish, poor complaining!

Is Fortune's fickle Luna waning?
E'en let her gang!
Beneath what light she has remaining,
  Let's sing our sang.

My pen I here fling to the door,
And kneel, "Ye Powers!" and warm implore,
  "Though I should wander Terra o'er,
In all her climes,
Grant me but this, I ask no more,
  Aye rowth 28 o' rhymes.

"Gie dreeping roasts to country lairds,
  Till icicles hing frae their beards;
Gie fine braw claes to fine life-guards,
  And maids of honour!
And yill and whisky gie to cairds, 29
  Until they scomner, 30

"A title, Dempster* merits it;
A garter gie to Willie Pitt;
Gie wealth to some be-ledger'd cit,
  In cent. per cent.;
But gie me real, sterling wit,
  And I'm content.

"While ye are pleased to keep me hale,
I'll sit down o'er my scanty meal,
Be't water-brose, or muslin-kail, 31
  Wi' cheerfu' face,
As lang's the Muses dinna fail
  To say the grace."

An anxious ee I never throws
Behint my lug 32 or by my nose;
I jouk 33 beneath Misfortune's blows
  As weel's I may,
Sworn foe to Sorrow, Care, and Prose,
  I rhyme away.

O ye douce 34 folk, that live by rule,
Grave, tideless-blooded, calm and cool,
Compared wi' you—O fool! fool! fool!
  How much unlike!
Your hearts are just a standing pool,
  Your lives a dike! 35

Nae harebrain'd, sentimental traces,
In your unletter'd nameless faces!

21 Age. 22 Coughing. 23 Limping.
24 Sweated. 26 Quietly. 26 Snug. 27 Fellows.
28 Abundance. 29 Tinkers. 30 Are nauseated.
31 Broth made without meat. 32 Ear. 33 Stoop. 34 Serious.
35 Blank as a wall.
* George Dempster of Dunnichen, a parliamentary orator of the time.
In arioso trills and graces
Ye never stray,
But gravissimo, solemn basses
Ye hum away.

Ye are sae grave, nae doubt ye're wise;
Nae ferly though ye do despise;
The hairum-scairum, ram-stam boys,
The rattling squad.

I see you upward cast your eyes
Ye ken the road.

Whilst I—but I shall hand me there—
Wi' you I'll scarce gang ony where—
Then, Jamie, I shall say nae mair
But qua' my sang,

Content wi' you to mak a pair,
'Whare'er I gang.

EPISTLE TO GAVIN HAMILTON,
Esq.,
RECOMMENDING A BOY

Gavin Hamilton, solicitor in Mauchline, was a warm and generous friend of the poet's, a New-Light partisan who had suffered from Auld-Light persecutions.

MOSGAVILLE, May 3, 1786.

I hold it, sir, my bounden duty
To warn you how that Master Tootie,
Alias, Laird M'Gaul,
Was here to hire you lad away
'Bout whom ye spak the tither day,
And wad hae done' aff hau'.

But lest he learn the callan tricks,
As, faith, I muckle doubt him,
Like scrapin' out auld Crummie's nicks,
And tellin' lies about them:
As lieve then, I'd have then,
Your clerkship he should sair,
If sae be, ye may be
Not fitted other where.

Although I say't, he's gleg enough,
And 'bout a house that's rude and rough,
The boy might learn to swear,
But then wi' ye he'll be sae taugh,

And get sic fair example straught,
I haena ony fear.
Ye'll catechise him every quirk,
And shor5 him weel wi' hell;
And gar6 him follow to the kirk—
Aye when ye gang yoursel.

If ye then, maun be then
Fae hame this comin' Friday;
Then please sir, to lea'e, sir,
The orders wi' your lady.

My word of honour I hae gien,
In Paisley John's, that night at e'en,
To meet the world's worm;7
To try to get the twa to gree,
And name the airles8 and the fee,
In legal mode and form.

I ken he weel a sneak can draw,9
When simple bodies let him;
And if a devil be at a,
In faith he's sure to get him.

To phrase you, and praise you,
Ye ken your laureate scorns;
The prayer still, you share still.
Of grateful Minstrel Burns.

POETICAL INVITATION TO MR.
JOHN KENNEDY.

This rhymed epistle was accompanied by a prose letter, and a copy of the " Cotter's Saturday Night." Kennedy had interested himself greatly in the success of the Kilmar tock edition of the poems. He was after wards factor to the Marquis of Breadal banc.

Now Kennedy, if foot or horse
E'er bring you in by Mauchline corse,1
Lord, man, there's lasses there wad force
A hermit's fancy; [worse,
And down the gate, in faith they're
And mair unchancy.

But, as I'm sayin', please step to Dow's,
And taste sic gear as Johnnie brews,
Till some bit callant bring me news
That you are there,
And if we dinna hand a bouze
I se ne'er drink mair.
It's no I like to sit and swallow,
Then like a swine to puke and swallow;
But gie me just a true good fallow,
Wi' right ingine, 3
And spunkie, 4 ance to make us mellow,
And then we'll shine.

Now, if ye're ane o' world's folk,
Wha rate the wearer by the cloak,
And sklen' 5 on poverty their joke,
Wi' bitter sneer,
Wi' you no friendship will I trooke, 6
Nor cheap nor dear.

But if, as I'm informed weel,
Ye hate, as ill's the very deal,
The flinty heart that canna feel—
Come, sir, here's tae you!
Hae, there's my haun', I miss you weel,
And guid be wi' you.

EPISTLE TO A YOUNG FRIEND.

This epistle was addressed to Andrew Aiken, the son of his old friend Robert Aiken, writer in Ayr. Andrew Aiken afterwards earned distinction in the service of his country.

May, 1786.

I lang hae thought, my youthfu' friend,
A something to have sent you,
Though it should serve nae other end
Than just a kind memento,
But how the subject theme may gang,
Let time and chance determine,
Perhaps it may turn out a song,
Perhaps turn out a sermon.

Ye'll try the world fu' soon my lad,
And, Andrew dear, believe me,
You'll find mankind an unco squad, 1
And muckle they may grieve ye:
For care and trouble set your thought,
Even when your end's attain'd,
And a' your views may come to nought,
Where every nerve is strain'd.

I'll no say men are villains a':
The real, harden'd, wicked,
Wha hae nae check but human law,
Are to a few restricked:

But, och! mankind are unco weak,
And little to be trusted;
If self the wavering balance shake,
It's rarely right adjusted!

Yet they wha fa' in fortune's strife,
Their fate we shouldna censure,
For still the important end of life
They equally may answer;
A man may hae an honest heart,
Though poortib 3 hourly stare him;
A man may tak a neibor's part,
Yet hae na cash to spare him.

Aye free aff han' 4 your story tell,
'When wi' a bosom cryon'; 5
But still keep something to yoursell
Ye scarcely tell to ony,
Conceal yoursell, as weel's ye can
Fae critical dissection,
But keek's through every other man,
Wi' sharpen'd, sly inspection.

The sacred lowe o' weel-placed love,
Luxuriantly indulge it;
But never tempt the illicit rove,
Though naething should divulge it:
I waive the quantum o' the sin,
The hazard of concealing;
But, och! it hardens a' within,
And petrifies the feeling!

To catch dame Fortune's golden smile,
Assiduous wait upon her;
And gather gear 7 by every wile
That's justified by honour;
Not for to hide it in a hedge,
Nor for a train-attendant;
But for the glorious privilege
Of being independent.

The fear o' hell's a hangman's whip
To hound the wretch in order;
But where ye feel your honour grip,
Let that aye be your border
Its slightest touches, instant pause—
Debar a' side pretenses,
And resolutely keep its laws,
Uncaring consequences.

The great Creator to revere
Must sure become the creature;
But still the preaching cant forbear,
And even the rigid feature:

3 Genius or temperament. 4 Whisky is meant. 5 Exchange. 6 Throw. 1 Quizzing lot.
Yet ne'er with wits profane to range,
Be complaisance extended;
An atheist laugh's a poor exchange
For Deity offended!

When ranting round in Pleasure's ring,
Religion may be blinded;
Or if she gie a random sting,
It may be little minded;
But when on life we're tempest-driven,
A conscience but a canker—
A correspondence fix'd wi' Heaven
Is sure a noble anchor!

Adieu, dear, amiably youth!
Your heart can ne'er be wanting!
May prudence, fortitude, and truth
Erect your brow undaunting!
In ploughman phrase, "God send you speed,"
Still daily to grow wiser:
And may you better reck the rede
Than ever did th' adviser!

EPISTLE TO MR. M'ADAM OF CRAIGENGILLAN.

The following was written on receiving a letter, congratulating him on his poetic efforts, from Mr. M'Adam.

Sir, o'er a gill I gat your card,
I trow it made me proud;
"See wha taks notice o' the bard!"
I lap and cried fu' loud,
Now deil-ma-care about their jaw,
The senseless, gawky million;
I'll cock my nose aboon them a'—
I'm roos'd by Craiggillan!

*Twas noble, sir; 'twas like yourself,
To grant your high protection.
A great man's smile, ye ken fu' well,
Is aye a blest infection.

Though by his* banes wha in a tub
Match'd Macedonian Sandy!†
On my ain legs, through dirt and dub,
I independent stand aye.

And when those legs to guid warm kail,5
Wi' welcome canna bear me;
A lee dike-side, a sybow tail,
And barley scone shall cheer me.

Heaven spare you lang to kiss the breath
O' mony flowery simmers!
And bless your bonay lasses baith—
I'm tauld they're loe'some kimmers!9

And God bless young Dunaskin's laird,
The blossom of our gentry!
And may he wear an auld man's beard,
A credit to his country.

EPISTLE TO MAJOR LOGAN.

Major Logan, a retired military officer, lived at Park House, near Ayr, with his mother and sister—the latter the Miss Logan to whom Burns addressed some verses, with a present of Beattie's poems.

Hail, thairm inspirin', rattlin' Willie!
Though Fortune's road be rough and hilly
To every fiddling, rhyming billie,
We never heed,
But tak it like the unback'd filly,
Proud o' her speed.

When idly goavan whiles we saunter,
Yirr, Fancy barks, awa' we canter,
Up hill, down brae, till some mischanter,
Some black bog-hole,
Arrests us, then the scath and banter
We're forced to thole.4

Hale be your heart! hale be your fiddle!
Lang may your elbuck jink and diddle,
To cheer you through the weary wid.
O' this wide warl'.
Until you on a cummock driddle7
A gray-hair'd carl.

5 Broth. 6 A shad' wall-side. 7 The young onion. 8 Cake. 9 Heart-enticing creatures.
1 Fiddle-string. 2 Walking aimlessly. 3 Mischap. 4 Bear. 5 Elbow dodge and jerk. 6 Struggle. 7 Until you hobble on a staff.
* These two lines also occur in the Second Epistle to Davie.
Come wealth, come poortith late or soon,
Heaven send your heart-strings aye in
And screw your temper-pins aboon,
A fifth or mair,
The melancholious, lazy croon
O' cankrie care!

May still your life from day to day
Nae lente largo in the play,
But allegretto forte gay
Harmonious flow.
A sweeping, kindling, bauld strath-spey—
Encore! Bravo!

A blessing on the cheery gang
Wha dearly like a jig or sang,
And never think o' right and wrang
By square and rule,
But as the clegs o' feeling stang
Are wise or fool!

My hand-waled curse keep hard in chase
The harpy, hoodock, purse-proud
Wha count on poortith as disgrace—
Their tuneless hearts!
May fireside discords jar a base
To a' their parts!

But come, your hand, my careless brither—
I' th' ither warl', if there's anither—
And that there is I've little swither
About the matter—
We cheek for chow shall jog the-gither,
I'se ne'er bid better.

We've faults and failings—granted clearly,
We're frail backslding mortals merely,
Eve's bonny squad, priests wyte them sheerly,
For our grand fa' ly—
But still—but still—I like them dear—
God bless them a'

Ochon! for poor Castalian drinkers,
When they fa' foul o' earthly jinkers,
Or hand a yokin' at the plough;
And though forfoughten sair eneugh,
Yet unco proud to learn:

When first amang the yellow corn
A man I reckon'd was,
And wi' the lave' ilk merry morn
Could rank my rig and lass,
Still shearing, and clearing,
The tither stockèd raw,
Wi' claivers and haivers
Wearing the day awa'.

Even then, a wish, (I mind its power,) A wish that to my latest hour Shall strongly heave my breast— That I for poor auld Scotland's sake, Some usefu' plan or beuk could make, Or sing a sang at least.
The rough burr-thistle, spreading wide Amang the bearded bear, I turn'd the weeder-clips aside, And spared the symbol dear: No nation, no station, My envy e'er could raise, A Scot still, but blot still, I knew nae higher praise.

But still the elements o' sang,
In formless jumble right and wrang,
Wild floated in my brain;
Till on that hairst I said before, My partner in the merry core, She roused the forming strain:
I see her yet, the sonsie queen,
That lighted up my jingle,
Her witching smile, her pauky een,
That gart mo' heart-strings tingle! I firèd, inspired,
At every kindling keek,
But bashing and dashing,
I fearèd aye to speak.

Health to the sex! ilk gaid chiel says,
Wi' merry dance in winter-days,
And we to share in common:
The gust o' joy, the balm of woe,
The saul o' life, the heaven below,
Is rapture-giving woman.
Ye surly sumphs, who hate the name, Be mindfu' o' your mither:
She, honest woman, may think shame
That ye're connected with her.

Ye're wae men, ye're nae men,
That slight the lovely dears;
To shame ye, disclaim ye,
Ilk honest birkie swears.

For you, no bred to barn and byre, Wha sweetly tune the Scottish lyre,
Thanks to you for your line: The marled plaid ye kindly spare
By me should gratefuly be ware;"Twad please me to the Nine,
I'd be mair vauntie o' my hap,
Douce hingin' owre my curlie,
Than any ermine ever lap,
Or proud imperial purple.
Fareweel then, lang heal then.
And plenty be your fa',
May losses and crosses
Ne'er at your hallan ca'!

EPISTLE TO WILLIAM CREECH.

William Creech was the publisher of the first Edinburgh edition of the poet's works. He was the most celebrated publisher of his time in Edinburgh; and it was his good fortune to be the medium through which the works of the majority of that band of eminent men who made Edinburgh the head-quarters of literature during the latter half of the eighteenth century, passed to the world. This epistle was written during the poet's Border tour, and while Creech was in London.

Auld chuckie Reekie's sair distrest
Down droops her ance wee-burnishist crest,
Nae joy her bonny buskit nest
Can yield ava,
Her darling bird that she lo'es best,
Willie's awa'!

O Willie was a witty wight,
And had o' things an unco slight;
Auld Reekie aye he keepit tight,
And trig and braw:
But now they'll busk her like a fright—
Willie's awa'!

The stiffest o' them a' he bow'd;
The bauldest o' them a' he cow'd;

2 Fatigued. 3 Rest. 4 Idle stories and gossip. 5 Harvest. 6 Comely lass. 7 Made. 8 Glance. 9 Fellow. 10 Blockheads.
They durst nae mair than he allow’d,
That was a law
We've lost a birkie7 weel worth gowd—
Willie’s awa'!

Now gawkies, tawpies, gowks,8 and fools,
Frae colleges and boarding-schools,
May sprout like simmer puddock3 stools
In glen or shaw;
He wha could brush them down to mools10—
Willie’s awa’!

The brethren o’ the Commerce-Chaumer*
May mourn their loss wi’ doolfu’ clam—
He was a dictionar and grammar
Among them a’;
I fear they’ll now mak mony a stam-mer11—
Willie’s awa’!

Nae mair we see his levee door
Philosophers and poets pour,
And toothy critics by the score,
In bloody raw!
The adjutant o’ a’ the core
Willie’s awa’!

Now worthy Gregory’s † Latin face,
Tytler’s‡ and Greenfield’s § modest grace,
Mackenzie,‖ Stewart,¶ sic a brace
As Rome ne’er saw;
They a’ maun12 meet some ither place—
Willie’s awa’!

Poor Burns—e’en Scotch drink canna quicken,
[en.
He cheeps13 like some bewilder’d chick-
Scared frae its minnie14 and the clockin15
By hoodie-craw,
Grief’s glen his heart an unco kickin’—
Willie’s awa’!

Now every sour-mou’d ginnin’ ble-
lum,15
And Calvin’s folk, are fit to fell him;
And self-conceited critic skellum17
His quill may draw;
He wha could brawlie18 ward their bel-
lum19—
Willie’s awa’!

Up wimpling stately Tweed I’ve sped,
And Eden scenes on crystal Jed,
And Ettrick banks now roaring red,
While tempests blaw;
But every joy and pleasure’s fled—
Willie’s awa’!

May I be Slander’s common speech;
A text for Infamy to preach;
And lastly, streekit20 out to bleach
In winter snaw,
When I forget thee, Willie Creech,
Though far awa’!

May never wicked Fortune touzle21 him!
May never wicked men bamboozle22 him!
Until a pow23 as auld’s Methusalem
He canty24 claw!
Then to the blessed New Jerusalem,
Fleet wing awa’!

EPISTLE TO HUGH PARKER.
Mr. Hugh Parker was a Kilmarnock merchant, and an early friend and admirer of the poet’s.
In this strange land, this unco climb,
A land unknown to prose or rhyme;
Where words ne’er cross the muse’s heckles,*
Nor limpet1 in poetic shackles;
A land that Prose did never view it,
Except when drunk he stachert2 through it;
Here, ambush’d by the chimla cheek,3
Hid in an atmosphere of reek,4
I hear a wheel thrum i’ the neuk,5
I hear it—for in vain I leuk.5

The red peat gleams, a fiery kernel,
Enhuskèd by a fog infernal:
Here, for my wonted rhyming raptures,
I sit and count my sins by chapters;
For life and spunk like ither Christians,
I'm dwindledd down to mere existence;
Wi' nae converse but Gallowa bodies,
Wi' nae kenn'd face but Jenny Ged-
Jenny, my Pegasean pride!
Dowie she saunters down Nithside,
And aye a westlin leuk she throws,
While tears hap' o'er her auld brown nose!
Was it for this wi' canny care,
Thou baire the bard through many a shire?
At howes or hillocks never stumbled,
And late or early never grumbled?
Oh, had I power like inclination,
I'd heeze thee up a constellation,
To canter with the Sagitarre,
Or loup the ecliptic like a bar;
Or turn the pole like any arrow;

He'd ne'er cast saut upo' thy tail.
Wi' a' this care and a' this grief,
And sma', sma' prospect of relief,
And nought but peet-reek i' my head,
How can I write what ye can read?
Torbolton, twenty-fourth o' June,
Ye'll find me in a better tune:
But till we meet and weet our whistle,
Tak this excuse for nae epistle.

ROBERT BURNS.

FIRST EPISTLE TO R. GRAHAM,
ESQ., OF FINTRY.

Robert Graham of Fintry was a Commissio-ner of Excise.

WHEN Nature her great masterpiece design'd,
[human mind,
And framed her last, best work, the
[Her eye intent on all the mazy plan,
[&c form'd of various parts the various

Then first she calls the useful many forth;

And merchandise' whole genus take
Each prudent cit a warm existence

And all mechanics' many - apron'd
Some other rarer sorts are wanted yet,
The lead and buoy are needful to the net:
The caput mortuum of gross desires
Makes a material for mere knights and squires,

[grave designs,
Then marks th' unyielding mass with
Law, physic, politics, and deep divines:
Last, she sublines th' Aurora of the poles,
The flashing elements of female souls.

The order'd system fair before her stood,
Nature, well-pleased, pronounced it very good:
But ere she gave creating labour o'er,
Half-jest, she tried one curious labour more.
Some spumy, fiery ignis-fatuus matter,
Such as the slightest breath of air
might scatter;
With arch alacrity and conscious glee (Nature may have her whim as well as we,
[show it)
Her Hogarth-art perhaps she meant to morrow.

A being form'd t' amuse his graver
friends,
Admired and praised—and there the homage ends:
A mortal quite unfit for Fortune's strife,
Yet oft the sport of all the ills of life;
Prone to enjoy each pleasure riches give,
Yet haply wanting wherewithal to live;
Longing to wipe each tear, to heal
each groan,
Yet frequent all unheeded in his own.

But honest Nature is not quite a Turk,

EPISTLE TO JAMES TAIT OF GLENCONNER.

AULD comrade dear, and brither sinner, How's a' the folk about Glenconner? How do ye this blue eastlin' win', That's like to blow a body blin'? For me, my faculties are frozen, My dearest member nearly dozen, I've sent you here, by Johnnie Simson, Twa sage philosophers to glimpse on! Smith, wi' his sympathetic feeling, And Reid, to common sense appealing Philosophers have fought an wrangled, And meikle Greek and Latin mangled, Till wi' their logic jargon tired, And in the depth of science mired, To common sense they now appeal, What wives and wabsters see and feel. But, hark, ye, frien! I charge you strictly,
EPISTLES.

Peruse them, and return them quickly,
For now I'm grown sae cursed douce,
I pray and ponder butt the house;
My shins, my lane, I there sit roasin',
Perusing Bunyan, Brown and Boston;
Till by and by, if I haund on,
I'll grant a real gospel-groan:
Already I begin to try it,
To cast my een up like a prey,
When by the gun she tumbles o'er,
Fluttering and gasping in her gore:
Sae shortly you shall see me bright,
A burning and a shining light.

My heart-warm love to guid auld Glen,
The aye and wale of honest men:
When bending down wi' auld gray hairs,
Beneath the load of years and cares,
May he who made him still support him,
And views beyond the grave comfort him,
His worthy family, far and near,
God bless them a' wi' grace and gear!

My auld schoolfellow, preacher Willie,
The manly tar, my mason Billie,
And Auchenbay, I wish him joy;
If he's a parent, lass or boy,
May he be dad, and Meg the mither,
Just five-and-forty years thegither!
And no forgetting Wabster Charlie,
I'm tauld he offers very fairly.
And, Lord, remember singing Sannock
Wi' hale-breeks, saxpence, and a bannock.

And next my auld acquaintance, Nan—
Since she is fitted to her fancy;
And her kind stars ha'e airted till her
A good chiel wi' a pickle siller.
My kindest, best respects I sen'it,
To cousin Kate and sister Janet; tious,
Tell them, fae me, wi' chielis becauf
For, faith, they'll aiblins fin' them fashious.

To grant a heart is fairly civil,
But to grant a maidenhead's the devil.
And lastly, Jamie, for yourself,
May guardian angels tak a spell,
And steer you seven miles south o' hell:
But first, before you see heaven's glory,
May ye get mony a merry story,

Mony a laugh, and mony a drink,
And aye enough o' needfu' clink.

Now fare ye weel, and joy be wi' you;
For my sake this I beg it o' you,
Assist poor Simson a' ye can,
Ye'll find him just an honest man;
Sae I conclude, and quit my chanter,
Yours, saint or sinner.

ROB THE RANTER.

EPISTLE TO DR. BLACKLOCK,
IN ANSWER TO A LETTER.

Dr. Blacklock, the blind poet, had been educated for the Church, but in consequence of his blindness was disappointed of a charge. He kept a boarding-school for young men attending college. He was much respected by the literati of the town; but, what is more important, it was his letter to Mr. Georgie Lawrie of Kilmarnock, the friend of Burns, which fired the poet's ambition, and induced his visit to Edinburgh, and the abandonment of his projected departure for the West Indies.

Ellisland, October 21, 1789.

Wow, but your letter made me vauntie!
And are ye hale, and well, and cantie?
I kenn'd it still your wee bit jauntie
Wad bring you to:
Lord send you aye as weel's I want ye,
And then ye'll do.

The ill-thief blaw the Heron south!
And never drink be near his drouth!
He tauld mysel', by word o' mouth,
He'd tak my letter;
I lippen'd to the chiel in trouth
And bade nae better.

But aiblins honest Master Heron
Had at the time some dainty fair one
To ware his theologe care on,
And holy study;
And tired o' sauls to waste his lears on,
E'en tried the body.

But what d'ye think, my trusty fier,
I'm turn'd a gauger—Peace be here!

Parnassian queans, I fear, I fear,
Ye'll now disdain me!
And then my fifty pounds a year
Will little gain me.

Lord, help me through this world o' care!
I'm weary sick o't late and air;
Not but I hae a richer share
Than mony ither;
But why should a man better fare,

That's the true pathos and sublime
Of human life.

SECOND EPISTLE TO
ROBERT GRAHAM, ESQ., OF FINTRY,
ON THE CLOSE OF THE DISPUTED ELECTION BETWEEN SIR JAMES JOHNSTON AND CAPTAIN MILLER, FOR THE DUMFRIES DISTRICT OF BOROUGHS.

FINTRY, my stay in wordly strife,
Friend o' my Muse, friend o' my life,
Are ye as idle I am?
Come they, wi' uncouth, kintra leg, O'er Pegasus I'll fling my leg,
And ye shall see me try him.

I'll sing the zeal Drumlanrig bears,
Wha left the all important cares
Of princes and their darlin's;
And, bent on winning borough touns,
Came shaking hands wi' webster louns,
And kissing barefit carlins.

Combustion through our boroughs rode,
Whistling his roaring pack abroad,
Of mad, unmuzzled lions;
As Queensberry 'buff and blue' unfurl'd;
And Westerha' Hopetoun hurl'd To every Whig defiance.

But cautious Queensberry left the war,
The unmanner'd dust might soil his star;
Besides, he hated bleeding:
But left behind him heroes bright, Heroes in Cesarean fight,
Or Ciceronian pleading.

Oh, for a throat like huge Mons-Meg,
To muster o'er each ardent Whig
Beneath Drumlanrig's banners,
Heroes and heroines commix,
All in the field of politics,
To win immortal honours.

M'Murdo\(^{\dagger}\) and his lovely spouse
(Th' enamour'd laurels kiss her brows!)
Led on the Loves and Graces:
She won each gaping burgess' heart,
While he, all conquering, play'd his part
Amang their wives and lasses.

Craigdarroch\(^{\S}\) led a light-arm'd corps;
Tropes, metaphors, and figures pour,
Like Hecla streaming thunder:
Glenriddel,\(^{\parallel}\) skill'd in rusty coins,
Blew up each Tory's dark designs,
And bared the treason under.

In either wing, two champions fought,
Redoubted Staig,\(^{\dagger}\) who set at nought
The wildest savage Tory;
And Welsh,\(^{}\) who ne'er yet flinch'd his ground,
High-waved his magnum-bonum round
With Cyclopean fury.

Miller brought up the artillery ranks,
The many-pounders of the Banks,
Resistless desolation!
While Maxwelton, that baron bold,
Mid Lawson's\(^{\ddagger\ddagger}\) port enrench'd his hold,
And threaten'd worse damnation.

To these, what Tory hosts opposed;
With these, what Tory warriors closed,

With furious speed rush'd to the charge,
Like raging devils driving.

Now for my friends' and brethren's sakes
And for my dear-loved Land o' Cakes,
I pray with holy fire:
Lord, send a rough-shod troop o' hell,
O'er a' wad Scotland buy or sell,
To grind them in the mire

THIRD EPISTLE TO ROBERT GRAHAM, ESQ., OF FINTRY

Late crippled of an arm, and now a leg,*

* Burns wrote to Mrs. Dunlop, on the 7th of February, 1791, 'that, by a fall, not from my horse, but with my horse, I have been a cripple for some time, and this is the first day my arm and hand have been able to serve me in writing.'

FOURTH EPISTLE TO ROBERT GRAHAM, ESQ., OF FINTRY.

The following verses were written in acknowledgment of the favour the previous epistle prayed for.

EPIGRAMS, EPITAPHS, ETC.

THOUGH FICKLE FORTUNE HAS DECEIVED ME.

"The following," says Burns, "was written extempore, under the pressure of a heavy train of misfortunes, which, indeed, threatened to undo me altogether. It was just at the close of that dreadful period mentioned already (in Commonplace-book, March, 1784); and though the weather has brightened up a little with me since, yet there has always been a tempest brewing round me in the grim sky of futurity, which I pretty plainly see will, perhaps ere long, perhaps some time or other, perhaps more, overwhelm me, and drive me into some doleful dell, to pine in solitary, squalid wretchedness."

Thou, fickle Fortune has deceived me,
She promised fair and perform'd but ill;
Of mistress, friends, and wealth bereaved me,
Yet I bear a heart shall support me
I'll act with prudence as far's I'm able,
But if success I must never find,
Then come, Misfortune, I bid thee welcome.
I'll meet thee with an undaunted

TO A PAINTER.

While in Edinburgh, the poet paid a visit to the studio of a well-known painter, whom he found at work on a picture of Jacob's Dream; and having looked at the sketch for a little, he wrote the following verses on the back of it:

DEAR——, I'll gie ye some advice,
You'll tak it no uncivil:
You shouldn'a paint at angels mair,
But try to paint the devil.

To paint an angel's kittle wark,

EPITAPH ON THE AUTHOR'S FATHER.

The following lines were inscribed on a small headstone erected over the grave of the poet's father, in Alloway Kirkyard:

\textbf{O ye whose cheek the tear of pity stains;} [attend!]
\textbf{Draw near with pious reverence, and} [friend;]
\textbf{Here lie the loving husband's dear remains,} \textbf{The tender father, and the generous}
The pitying heart that felt for human woe;
The dauntless heart that fear'd no foe:
"For even his failings lean'd to virtue's side."*

A FAREWELL.

These lines form the conclusion of a letter from Burns to Mr. John Kennedy, dated Kilmarnock, August, 1786.

Farewell, dear friend! may guid luck hit you,
And, 'mang her favourites admit you!
If e'er Detraction shone to smite you,
May nane believe him!
And only deil that thinks to get you.
Good Lord deceive him.

ON A WAG IN MAUCHLINE.

The wag here meant was James Smith, the James Smith of the epistle commencing "Dear Smith, the steemst, pawkie thief."

Lament him, Mauchline husbands a',
He aften did assist ye;
For had ye staid whole years awa',
Your wives they ne'er had miss'd ye.
Ye Mauchline bairns, as on ye pass
To school in bands the gither,
Oh, tread ye lightly on his grass—
Perhaps he was your father.

TO A YOUNG LADY IN A CHURCH.

During the poet's Border tour, he went to church one Sunday, accompanied by Miss Ainslie, the sister of his traveling companion. The text for the day happened to contain a severe denunciation of obstinate sinners; and Burns, observing the young lady intently turning over the leaves of her Bible in search of the passage, took out a small piece of paper, and wrote the following lines upon it, which he immediately passed to her:

Fair maid, you need not take the hint,
Nor idle texts pursue;
"Twas guilty sinners that he meant,
Not angels such as you!

VERSES

WRITTEN UNDER THE PORTRAIT OF FERGUSON, THE POET, IN A COPY OF THAT AUTHOR'S WORKS PRESENTED TO A YOUNG LADY IN EDINBURGH, MARCH, 17, 1787.

Curse on ungrateful man, that can be pleased,
And yet can starve the author of the Othou, my elder brother in misfortune,
By far my elder brother in the Muses,
With tears I pity thy unhappy fate!

Ye heavens, how great is my despair,
How can I see him die!"

EXTEMPORÉ ON TWO LAWYERS.

During Burns' first sojourn in Edinburgh, in 1787, he paid a visit to the Parliament House, and the result was two well-drawn sketches of the leading counsel of the day—the Lord Advocate, Mr. Hay Campbell (afterwards Lord President), and the Dean of Faculty, Harry Erskine.

LORD ADVOCATE.

He clenched'd his pamphlets in his fist,
He quoted and he hinted,

He found it was awa', man;
But what his common sense cam short,
He ekèd out wi’ law, man.

DEAN OF FACULTY.

In heaven itself I’ll ask no more Than just a Highland welcome.

LINES ON VIEWING STIRLING
PALACE.

The following lines were scratched with a diamond on a pane of glass in a window of the Inn at which Burns put up, on the occasion of his first visit to Stirling. They were quoted to his prejudice at the time, and no doubt did him no good with those who could best serve his interests. On his next visit to Stirling, he smashed the pane with the butt-end of his riding whip:—

Here Stuarts once in glory reign’d,
And laws for Scotland’s weal ordain’d;
But now unroof’d their palace stands,
Their sceptre’s sway’d by other hands;
The injured Stuart line is gone,
A race outlandish fills their throne—
An idiot race, to honour lost: [most.
Who know them best despise them.

\(^1\) Lost. \(^2\) Groped.
ON INCIVILITY SHOWN TO HIM AT INVERARY.

The poet having halted at Inverary during his first Highland tour, put up at the inn; but on finding himself neglected by the landlord, whose house was filled with visitors to the Duke of Argyle, he resented the incivility in the following lines:

Who'er he be that sojourns here, I pity much his case, Unless he come to wait upon The lord their god, his Grace.

There's nathing here but Highland pride, And Highland cauld and hunger; If Providence has sent me here, 'Twas surely in His anger.

ON ELPHINSTONE'S TRANSLATION OF MARTIAL'S "EPICRAMS."

"Stopping at a merchant's shop in Edinburgh," says Burns, "a friend of mine one day put Elphinstone's translation of Martial into my hand, and desired my opinion of it. I asked permission to write my opinion on a blank leaf of the book; which being granted, I wrote this epigram:'—

O Thou, whom Poesy abhors! Whom Prose has turned out of doors! Heard'st thou that groan?—proceed no further— [ther!'

LINES

WRITTEN ON A PANE OF GLASS IN THE INN AT MOFFAT.

While Burns was in the inn at Moffat one day, the "charming, lovely Davies" of one of his songs happened to pass, accompanied by a tall and portly lady; and on a friend asking him why God had made Miss Davies so small and the other lady so large, he replied:—

Ask why God made the gem so small, And why so huge the granite? Because God meant mankind should set The higher value on it.

ON A PERSON NICKNAMED THE MARQUIS.

The person who bore this name was the landlord of a tavern in Dumfries frequented by Burns. In a moment of weakness he asked the poet to write his epitaph, which he immediately did, in a style not at all to the taste of the Marquis.

Here lies a mock Marquis, whose titles were sham'm'd;
If ever he rise—it will be to be damn'd.

TO JOHN M'MURDO, ESQ.
John M'Murdo was steward to the Duke of Queensberry, and the faithful friend of Burns during the whole period of his residence in Nithsdale.

To share them with a friend.

ON CAPTAIN FRANCIS GROSE.
One night at table, when the wine had circulated pretty freely, and "The mirth and fun grew fast and furious,"

Captain Grose, it is said, amused with the sallies of the poet, requested a couplet on himself. Having eyed the corpulent antiquary for a little, Burns repeated the following:

The devil got notice that Grose was a-dying, [came flying;
So whip at the summons old Satan
But when he approach'd where poor
Francis lay moaning, [a-groaning,

ON MR. BURTON.
Burns having on one occasion met a young Englishman of the name of Burton, he became very importunate that the poet should compose an epitaph for him. "In vain," says Cunningham, "the bard objected that he was not sufficiently acquainted with his character and habits to qualify him for the task; the request was constantly repeated with a "Dem my eyes, Burns, do write an epitaph for me; oh, dem my blood, do, Burns, write an epitaph for me." Overcome by his importunity, Burns at last took out his pencil and produced the following:

Here cursing, swearing Burton lies,
A buck, a beau, or Dem my eyes!
Who in his life did little good,[ blood!
And his last words were—Dem my

TO THE EDITOR OF THE STAR.
"Burns at one period," says Cunningham, "was in the habit of receiving the Star newspaper gratuitously; but as it came somewhat irregularly to hand, he sent the following lines to head-quarters, to insure more punctuality:"—

Dear Peter, dear Peter,
We poor sons of metre,
Are often negleekit, ye ken;
For instance, your sheet, man,

ON A SHEEP'S-HEAD.
Having been dining at the Globe Tavern, Dumfries, on one occasion when a sheep's head happened to be the fare provided, he was asked to give something new as a grace, and instantly replied:

O Lord, when hunger pinches sore,
Do Thou stand us in stead,
And send us from Thy bounteous store
A tup or wether head!—Amen.

After having dined, and greatly enjoyed this dainty, he was again asked to return thanks, when, without a moment's premeditation, he at once said:

O Lord, since we have feasted thus,
Which we so little merit,
Let Meg now take away the flesh,
And Jock bring in the spirit!—Amen.

ON SEEING THE BEAUTIFUL
SEAT OF LORD GALLOWAY.
This and the three following verses were written as political squibs during the heat of a contested election:
What dost thou in that mansion fair?
Flit, Galloway, and find
Some narrow, dirty, dungeon cave,
The picture of thy mind!

HOWLET FACE.
One of the Lords of Justiciary, says a correspondent of Mr. Chambers’, while on circuit at Dumfries, had dined one day at Mr. Mill-er’s of Dalwinton; and having, according to the custom of the time, taken wine to such an extent as to affect his sight, said to his host, on entering the drawing-room, and at the same time pointing to one of his daughters, who was thought an uncommonly handsome woman, “Wha’s you howletfaced thing in the corner?” The circumstance having been related to Burns, who happened to dine there next day, he took out his pencil and wrote the following lines, which he handed to Miss Miller:

How daur ye ca’ me howlet-faced,
Ye ugly glowering spectre?
My face was but the keekin’ glass,
And there ye saw your picture!

THE BOOK-WORMS.
Having been shown into a magnificent library, while on a visit to a nobleman, and observing a splendidly-bound, but uncut and worm-eaten, copy of Shakespeare on the table, the poet left the following lines in the volume:

THROUGH and through the inspired leaves,
Ye maggots, make your windings;
But, oh, respect his lordship’s taste,
And spare the golden bindings!

EPIGRAM ON BACON.
Brownhill was a posting station some fifteen miles from Dumfries. Dining there on one occasion, the poet met a Mr. Ladyman, a commercial traveller, who solicited a sample of his “rhyming ware.” At dinner, beans and bacon were served, and the landlord, whose name was Bacon, had, as was his wont, thrust himself somewhat offensively into the company of his guests.

At Brownhill we always get dainty good cheer,
And plenty of bacon each day in the We’ve all things that’s neat, and mostly in season,
But why always BACON?—come, give

THE EPITAPH.
In this stinging epitaph Burns satirizes Mrs.
Riddel of Woodley Park. He had taken offence because she seemed to pay more attention to officers in the company than to the poet, who had a supreme contempt for “epauletted puppies,” as he delighted to call them.

Here lies, now a prey to insulting neglect,
What once was a butterfly, gay in Want only of wisdom denied her respect,
Want only of goodness denied her

ON MRS. KEMBLE.
The poet having witnessed the performance of Mrs. Kemble in the part of Yarico, one night at the Dumfries theatre, seized a piece of paper, wrote these lines with a pencil, and handed them to the lady at the conclusion of the performance:

KEMBLE, thou curst my unbelief
Of Moses and his rod;
At Yarico’s sweet notes of grief
The rock with tears had flow’d.
THE CREED OF POVERTY.

"When the Board of Excise," says Cunningham, "informed Burns that his business was to act, and not think, he read the order to a friend, turned the paper, and wrote as follows:"

In politics if thou wouldst mix,
And mean thy fortunes be;
Bear this in mind—"Be deaf and blind;
Let great folks hear and see."

WRITTEN IN A LADY’S POCKET-BOOK.

The following lines indicate how strongly Burns sympathized with the lovers of liberty during the first outbreak of the French Revolution:

GRANT me, indulgent Heaven, that I may live
To see the miscreants feel the pain they deal Freedom’s sacred treasures free as air,
Till slave and despot be but things

THE PARSON’S LOOKS.

Some one having remarked that he saw falsehood in the very look of a certain reverend gentleman, the poet replied:

THAT there is falsehood in his looks
I must and will deny;
They say their master is a knave—
And sure they do not lie.

Your speed will outrival the dart;

ON ROBERT RIDDEL.

The poet traced these lines with a diamond on the window of the hermitage of Friars’ Carse, the first time he visited it after the death of his friend the Laird of Carse.

To Riddel, much-lamented man,
This ivied cot was dear;
Reader, dost value matchless worth?

ON EXCISEMEN.

WRITTEN ON A WINDOW IN DUMFRIES.

"One day," says Cunningham, "while in the King’s Arms Tavern, Dumfries, Burns overheard a country gentleman talking disparagingly concerning excisemen. The poet went to a window, and on one of the panes wrote this rebuke with his diamond:"

YE men of wit and wealth, why all this sneering
'Gainst poor excisemen? give the cause;—
What are poor landlords’ rent-rolls?
taxing ledgers;
What premiers—what? even monarchs’ mighty gaugers:
Nay, what are priests, those seeming godly wise men?
What are they, pray, but spiritual ex-

THE SELKIRR GRACE.

The poet having been on a visit to the Earl of Selkirk at St. Mary’s Isle, was asked to say grace at dinner. He repeated the following words, which have since been known in the district as "The Selkirk Grace:"

Some hae meat, and canna eat,
And some wad eat that want it;
But we hae meat, and we can eat.

TO DR. MAXWELL,

ON MISS JESSIE STAIG’S RECOVERY.

“How do you like the following epigram,” says the poet, in a letter to Thomson, "which I wrote the other day on a lovely young girl’s recovery from a fever? Doctor
Maxwell was the physician who seemingly saved her from the grave; and to him I address the following:—

Maxwell, if merit here you crave,
That merit I deny;
You save fair Jessie from the grave?—
An angel could not die.

---

THE PARVENU.

Burns being present in a company where an ill-educated parvenu was boring every one by boasting of the many great people he had lately been visiting, gave vent to his feelings in the following lines:

And in what lordly circles you've
An insect is still but an insect at most,
Though it crawl on the head of a queen!

POETICAL INSCRIPTION
FOR AN ALTAR TO INDEPENDENCE.

The following lines were inscribed on an altar erected at the seat of Heron of Kerrough-tree. They were written in 1795, when the hopes and triumphs of the French Revolution had made it a fashion to raise altars to Freedom, and plant trees to Liberty.

Thou of an independent mind,
With soul resolved, with soul resign'd;
Prepared power's proudest frown to brave,

THE TOAST.

Burns having been called on for a song at a dinner given by the Dumfries Volunteers in honour of the anniversary of Rodney's great victory of the 12th of April, 1782, gave the following lines in reply to the call:

Instead of a song, boys, I'll give you a toast—
Here's the memory of those on the twelfth that we lost!—
That we lost, did I say? nay, by Heaven, that we found;
For their fame it shall last while the world goes round.

ON THE POET'S DAUGHTER.

The following lines were written on the loss of an "only daughter and darling child" of the poet's, who died in the autumn of 1795:

Here lies a rose, a budding rose,
Blasted before its bloom:
Whose innocence did sweets disclose
Beyond that flower's perfume.
To those who for her loss are grieved,
This consolation's given—
She's from a world of woe relieved,
And blooms a rose in heaven.

Then thou hadst slept forever!

THE TRUE LOYAL NATIVES.

The origin of these lines is thus related by Gromek:—"When politics ran high the poet happened to be in a tavern, and the following lines—the production of one of 'The True Loyal Natives'—were handed over the table to Burns:—

Let Syme, Burns, and Maxwell, pervade wrote this reply:"—

ON A NOISY POLEMIC.

James Humphrey, a working mason, was the "noisy polemic" of this epitaph. Burns and he frequently disputed on Auld-Light and New-Light topics, and Humphrey, although an illiterate man, not unfrequently had the best of it. He died in great poverty, having solicited charity for some time before his death. We have heard it said that in soliciting charity from the strangers who arrived and departed by the Mauchline coach, he grounded his claims to their kindness on the epitaph—"Please, sirs, I'm Burns' bletherin' bitch!"

JOHNNY PEEP.

Burns having been on a visit to a town in Cumberland one day, entered a tavern and opened the door of a room, but on seeing three men sitting, he was about to withdraw, when one of them shouted, "Come in, Johnny Peep." The poet accordingly entered, and soon became the ruling spirit of the party. In the midst of their mirth, it was proposed that each should write a verse of poetry, and place it along with a half-crown, on the table—the best poet to have his half-crown returned, and the other three to be spent in treating the party. It is almost needless to say that the palm of victory was awarded to the following lines by Burns:

Here am I, Johnny Peep;
I saw three sheep,
And these three sheep saw me;
Half-a-crown apiece
Will pay for their fleece,
And so Johnny Peep gets free.

THE HENPECKED HUSBAND.

It is said that the wife of a gentleman, at whose table the poet was one day dining, expressed herself with more freedom than propriety regarding her husband's extravagant convivial habits, a rudeness which Burns rebuked in these sharp lines:

In life,
The crouching vassal to the tyrant wife!

ON THE KIRK OF LAMINGTON IN CLYDESDALE.
Having been stayed by a storm one Sunday at Lamington in Clydesdale, the poet went to church; but the day was so cold, the place so uncomfortable, and the sermon so poor, that he left the following poetic protest in the pew:—

As cauld a wind as ever blew,
A cauldier kirk, and in't but few;
As cauld a minister's e'er spak,

I MURDER hate by field or flood,
Though glory's name may screen us;
In wars at hame I'll spend my blood,
Life-giving wars of Venus.
The deities that I adore,
Are social peace and plenty;
I'm better pleased to make one more,
Than be the death of twenty.

That heals the wounds o' care and dool;
And pleasure is a wanton trout,

ON JOHN BUSHBY.
Bushby, it seems, was a sharp-witted, clever lawyer, who happened to cross the poet's path in politics, and was therefore considered a fair subject for a lampoon.

HERE lies John Bushby, honest man!
Cheat him, devil, gin you can.
LINES TO JOHN RANKINE.

These lines were written by Burns while on his death-bed, and forwarded to Rankine immediately after the poet's death.

HE who of Rankine sang lies stiff and dead,
And a green grassy hillock clings his head;—
Alas! alas! a devilish change indeed!

TO MISS JESSY LEWARS.

"During the last illness of the poet," says Cunningham, "Mr. Brown, the surgeon who attended him, came in, and stated that he had been looking at a collection of wild beasts just arrived, and pulling out the list of the animals, held it out to Jessy Lewars. The poet snatched it from him, took up a pen, and with red ink wrote the following on the back of the paper, saying, 'Now it is fit to be presented to a lady.'"

TALK not to me of savages
From Afric's burning sun,
No savage e'er could rend my heart
As, Jessy, thou hast done.

But Jessy's lovely hand in mine,
A mutual faith to plight,
Not even to view the heavenly choir
Would be so blest a sight.

THE TOAST.

On another occasion, while Miss Lewars was waiting upon him during his illness, he took up a crystal goblet, and writing the following lines on it, presented it to her:

Fill me with the rosy wine,
Call a toast—a toast divine;
Give the poet's darling flame,
Lovely Jessy be the name;
Then thou mayst freely boast
Thou hast given a peerless toast.

ON THE SICKNESS OF MISS JESSY LEWARS.

On Miss Lewars complaining of illness in the hearing of the poet, he said he would provide for the worst, and seizing another crystal goblet, he wrote as follows:

SAY, sages, what's the charm on earth Can turn Death's dart aside?
It is not purity and worth, Else Jessy had not died.

ON THE RECOVERY OF JESSY LEWARS.

On her recovering health, the poet said "There is a poetic reason for it," and composed the following:

But rarely seen since nature's birth,
The natives of the sky;
Yet still one seraph's left on earth
For Jessy did not die.

A BOTTLE AND AN HONEST FRIEND.

Some doubt has been expressed by the brother of the poet as to the authenticity of this small piece:

"There's none that's blest of humankind
But the cheerful and the gay, man.
Fal, fal," &c.

HERE's a bottle and an honest friend!
What wad you wish for pair, man?
Wha kens, before his life may end,
What his share may be of care, man?

Then catch the moments as they fly,
And use them as ye ought, man;
Believe me, Happiness is shy, man,
And comes not aye when sought.

GRACE AFTER DINNER.

O THOU, in whom we live and move,
Who madest the sea and shore;
Thy goodness constantly we prove,
And, grateful, would adore.

And if it please Thee, Power above,
Still grant us, with such store,
The friend we trust, the fair we love,
And we desire no more.

ANOTHER.

LORD, we thank Thee and adore,
For temp'ral gifts we little merit;
At present we will ask no more—
Let William Hyslop give the spirit!
SONGS.

MY HANDSOME NELL.

Tune—"I am a man unmarried."

Nelly Kilpatrick, the heroine of this song, was the daughter of the village blacksmith, and the poet's first partner in the labours of the harvest-field. She was the "sonsie quean" he sings of, whose "witching smile" first made his heart-strings tingle. "This song," he says, "was the first of my performances, and done at an early period of my life, when my heart glowed with honest, warm simplicity—unacquainted and uncorrupted with the ways of a wicked world. It has many faults; but I remember I composed it in a wild enthusiasm of passion; and to this hour I never recollect it but my heart melts—my blood sallies, at the remembrance."

Oh, once I loved a bonny lass,
Aye, and I love her still;
And whilst that virtue warms my breast
I'll love my handsome Nell.

Fal, la! de ral, &c.

As bonny lasses I hae seen,
And mony full as braw;¹
But for a modest, gracefu' mien,
The like I never saw.

A bonny lass, I will confess,
Is pleasant to the ee
But without some better qualities
She's no a lass for me.

But Nelly's looks are blithe and sweet;
And, what is best of a',—
Her reputation is complete,
And fair without a flaw.

She dresses aye sae clean and neat,
Baith decent and genteel;
And then there's something in her gait
Gars² my dress look weel.

A gaudy dress and gentle air
May slightly touch the heart;
But it's innocence and modesty
That polishes the dart.

'Tis this in Nelly pleases me,
'Tis this enchants my soul!
For absolutely in my breast
She reigns without control.

I DREAM'D I LAY WHERE FLOWERS WERE SPRINGING.

"These two stanzas," says the poet, "which are among the oldest of my printed pieces, I composed when I was seventeen."

I DREAM'D I lay where flowers were springing
Gayly in the sunny beam,
Listening to the wild birds singing
By a falling crystal stream:
Straight the sky grew black and daring;
Through the woods the whirlwinds rave;
Trees with aged arms were warring
O'er the swelling, drumlie wave.

Such was my life's deceitful morning,
Such the pleasures I enjoy'd;
But lang or' noon, loud tempests storming,
A' my flowery bliss destroy'd. [me. Though fickle Fortune has deceived
(She promised fair, and perform'd but ill.)
Of mony a joy and hope bereaved me,
I bear a heart shall support me still.

MY NANNIE, O.

TUNE—"My Nannie, O."

BEHIND yon hills, where Lugar flows
'Mang moors and mosses many, O,
The wintry sun the day has closed,
And I'll awa' to Nannie, O.

The westlin' wind blows loud and shrill:
The night's baith mirk and rainy, O;
But I'll get my plaid, and out I'll steal,
And owre the hills to Nannie, O.

My Nannie's charming, sweet, and young,
Nae artfu' wiles to win ye, O:
May ill befa' the flattering tongue
That wad beguile my Nannie, O.

Her face is fair, her heart is true,
As spotless as she's bonny, O:
The opening gowan, I wat wi' dew,
Nae purer is than Nannie, O.

A country lad is my degree,
And few there be that ken me, O;
But what care I how few they be,
I'm welcome aye to Nannie, O.

My riches a's my penny-fee,
And I mannae guide it cannie, O;
But waft's gear ne'er troubles me,
My thoughts are a' my Nannie, O.

Our auld guidman delights to view
His sheep and kye thrive bonny, O;
But I'm as blithe that hauds his plough,
And has na care but Nannie, O.

Come weel, come woe, I care na by,
I'll tak what Heaven will sen' me, O;
Nae ither care in life have I
But live and love my Nannie, O!

O TIBBIE, I HAE SEEN THE DAY.

TUNE—"Invercauld's Reel."

O TIBBIE, I hae seen the day
Ye wadna been sae shy;
For lack o' gear ye lightly' me,
But, trowth, I care na by.

Yestreen I met you on the moor,
Ye spak na, but gaed by like stoure.2
Ye geck3 at me because I'm poor,
But feint a hair care I.

I doubt na, lass, but ye may think,
Because ye hae the name o' clink,4
That ye can please me at a wink
When 'er ye like to try.

But sorrow tak him that's sae mean.
Although his pouch o' coin were clean,
Wha follows ony saucy queen,5
That looks sae proud and high.

Although a lad were e'er sae smart,
If that he want the yellow dirt
Ye'll cast yer head anither airt,6
And answer him fur' dry.

But if he hae the name o' gear,7
Ye'll fasten to him like a brier,
Though hardly he, for sense or lear,8
Be better than the kye.9

But Tibbie, lass, tak my advice,
Your daddie's gear maku sees sae nice;
The deil a ane wad spier your price
Were ye as poor as I.

There lives a lass in yonder park,
I wadna gie her in her sark10
For thee, wi' a' thy thousand mark
Ye need na look sae high.

IMPROVED VERSION.

On Cessnock banks a lassie dwells,
Could I describe her shape and mien,
Our lassies a' she far excels;
And she's twa sparkling, roguish een.

She's sweeter than the morning dawn,
When rising Phoebus first is seen,

MY FATHER WAS A FARMER.

Tune—"The Weaver and his Shuttle, O."

"The following song," says the poet, "is a wild rhapsody, miserably deficient in versification;
but the sentiments were the genuine feelings of my heart at the time it was written."

My father was a farmer
Upon the Currick border, O,
And carefully he bred me
In decency and order, O;
He bade me act a manly part,
Though I had ne'er a farthing, O,
For without an honest manly heart,
No man was worth regarding, O.

Then out into the world
My course I did determine, O;
Though to be rich was not my wish
Yet to be great was charming, O;
My talents they were not the worst,
Nor yet my education, O;
Resolved was I, at least to try,
To mend my situation, O.

In many a way, and vain essay,
I courted Fortune's favour, O;
Some cause unseen still stept between,
To frustrate each endeavour, O;
Sometimes by foes I was o'erpower'd;
Sometimes by friends forsaken, O;
And when my hope was at the top,
I still was worst mistaken, O.

Then sore harass'd, and tired at last,
With Fortune's vain delusion, O,
I dropt my schemes, like idle dreams,
And came to this conclusion, O:
The past was bad, and the future hid;
Its good or ill untried, O;
But the present hour was in my power,
And so I would enjoy it, O.

No help, nor hope, nor view had I,
Nor person to befriend me, O;
So I must toil, and sweat, and broil,
And labour to sustain me, O:
To plough and sow, to reap and mow,
My father bred me early, O;
For one, he said, to labour bred,
Was a match for Fortune fairly, O.

Thus all obscure, unknown, and poor.
Through life I'm doomed to wander, O,
Till down my weary bones I lay
In everlasting slumber, O,
No view nor care, but shun what'er
Might breed me pain or sorrow, O;
I live to-day as well's I may,
Regardless of to-morrow, O.

But cheerful still, I am as well
As a monarch in a palace, O,
Though Fortune's frown still hunts me down,
With all her wanted malice, O:
I make indeed my daily bread,
But ne'er can make it farther, O;
But as daily bread is all I need,
I do not much regard her, O.

When sometimes by my labour
I earn a little money, O,
Some unforeseen misfortune
Comes generally upon me, O:
Mischance, mistake, or by neglect,
Or my good-natured folly, O;
But come what will, I've sworn it still
I'll ne'er be melancholy, O.

All you who follow wealth and power
With unremitting ardour, O,
The more in this you look for bliss,
You leave your view the farther, O,
Had you the wealth Potosi boasts,
Or nations to adore you, O,
A cheerful, honest-hearted clown
I will prefer before you, O!

JOHN BARLEYCORN:

A BALLAD.

The following is an improvement of an early song of English origin, a copy of which was obtained by Mr. Robert Jameson from a black-letter sheet in the Pepys Library, Cambridge, and first published in his
"Ballads:"—
There were three kings into the east,
Three kings both great and high;
And they hae swore a solemn oath
John Barleycorn should die.

They took a plough and plough'd him down,
Put clods upon his head;
And they hae sworn a solemn oath
John Barleycorn was dead.

But the cheerful spring came kindly on,
And showers began to fall;
John Barleycorn got up again,
And sore surprised them all.

The sultry suns of summer came,
And he grew thick and strong;
His head weel arm'd wi' pointed spears,
That no one should him wrong.

The sober autumn enter'd mild,
When he grew wan and pale;
His bending joints and drooping head
Show'd he began to fail.

His colour sicken'd more and more,
He faded into age;
And then his enemies began
To show their deadly rage.

They've ta'en a weapon long and sharp,
And cut him by the knee;
Then tied him fast upon a cart,
Like a rogue for forgerie.

They laid him down upon his back,
And cudgell'd him full sore;
They hung him up before the storm,
And turn'd him o'er and o'er.

They fill'd up a darksome pit
With water to the brim;
They heav'd in John Barleycorn,
There let him sink or swim.

They laid him out upon the floor,
To work him further wo:
And still, as signs of life appear'd,
They toss'd him to and fro.

They wasted o'er a scorching flame
The marrow of his bones;
But a miller used him worst of all—
He crushed him 'tween two stones.

And they hae ta'en his very heart's blood,
And drank it round and round,
And still the more and more they drank,
Their joy did more abound.

John Barleycorn was a hero bold,
Of noble enterprise;
For if you do but taste his blood,
'Twill make your courage rise.

'Twill make a man forget his woe;
'Twill heighten all his joy:
'Twill make the widow's heart to sing,
Though the tear were in her eye.

Then let us toast John Barleycorn,
Each man a glass in hand;
And may his great posterity
Ne'er fail in old Scotland!

MONTGOMERY'S PEGGY.

Tune—"Gala Water."

"Montgomery's Peggy," says the poet, "who had been bred in a style of life rather elegant, was my deity for six or eight months."

Although my bed were in you, muir,
Amang the heather, in my plaidie,
Yet happy, happy would I be,
Had I my dear Montgomery's Peggy.

When o'er the hill beat surly storms,
And winter nights were dark and rainy;
I'd seek some dell, and in my arms
I'd shelter dear Montgomery's Peggy.

Were I a baron proud and high,
And horse and servants waiting ready,
Then a 'twad gie o' joy to me,
The sharin't wi' Montgomery's Peggy.

MARY MORISON.

Tune—"Bide ye yet."

O Mary, at thy window be,
It is the wish'd, the trysted hour!
Those smiles and glances let me see
That make the miser's treasure poor:
How blithely wad I bide the stoure,
A weary slave frae sun to sun;
Could I the rich reward secure,
The lovely Mary Morison.
Yestreen, when to the trembling string,
|ha',
The dance gaed through the lighted
To thee my fancy took its wing—
I sat, but neither heard nor saw;
Though this was fair, and that was braw,
And yon the toast of a' the town,
I sigh'd, and said amang them a',
"Ye are na Mary Morison."

O Mary, canst thou wreck his peace
Wha for thy sake wad gladly die?
Or canst thou break that heart of his
Whase only fault is loving thee?
If love for love thou wilt na gie,
At least be pity to me shown;
A thought ungentle canna be
The thought o' Mary Morison.

THE RIGS O' BARLEY.
TUNE—"Corn Rigs are Bonny."
It was upon a Lammas night,
When corn rigs are bonny,
Beneath the moon's unclouded light,
I held awa' to Annie:
The time flew by wi' tentless heed,
Till, 'tween the late and early,
Wi' sma' persuasion she agreed
To see me through the barley.

The sky was blue, the wind was still,
The moon was shining clearly,
I set her down, wi' right good will,
Amang the rigs o' barley:
I kent her heart was a' my ain,
I loved her most sincerely;
I kiss'd her owre and owre again,
Amang the rigs o' barley.

I lock'd her in my fond embrace!
Her heart was beating rarely,
My blessings on that happy place,
Amang the rigs o' barley!
But by the moon and stars so bright,
That shone that hour so clearly!
She aye shall bless that happy night,
Amang the rigs o' barley.

I hae been blithe wi' comrades dear;
I hae been merry drinkin'!
I hae been joyfu' gath'rin' gear;
I hae been happy thinkin':

But a' the pleasures e'er I saw,
Though three times doubled fairly,
That happy night was worth them a',
Amang the rigs o' barley.

Corn rigs, and barley rigs,
And corn rigs are bonny:
I'll ne'er forget that happy night,
Amang the rigs wi' Annie.

PEGGY.
TUNE—"I had a horse, I had nae mair."
Now westlin winds and slaught'rin' guns
Bring autumn's pleasant weather;
The moorcock springs on whirring wings,
Amang the blooming heather:
Now waving grain, wide o'er the plain,
Delights the weary farmer;
And the moon shines bright, when I rove at night,
To muse upon my charmer.

The partridge loves the fruitful fells;
The plover loves the mountains;
The woodcock haunts the lonely dells;
The soaring hern the fountains:
Through lofty groves the cushat1 roves,
The path of man to shun it;
The hazel bush o'erhangs the thrush,
The spreading thorn the linnet.

Thus every kind their pleasure find,
The savage and the tender;
Some social join, and leagues combine;
Some solitary wander:
Avaunt, away! the cruel sway,
Tyrannic man's dominion; [cry
The sportsman's joy, the murderer
The fluttering, gory pinion!

But Peggy, dear, the evening's clear,
Thick flies the skimming swallow;
The sky is blue, the fields in view,
All fading green and yellow:
Come, let us stray our gladsome way,
And view the charms of nature;
The rustling corn, the fruited thorn,
And every happy creature.

We'll gently walk, and sweetly talk,
Till the silent moon shine clearly;

1 Wood-pigeon.
I'll grasp thy waist, and, fondly prest,
Swear how I love thee dearly:
Not vernal showers to budding flowers,
Not autumn to the farmer,
So dear can be, as thou to me,
My fair, my lovely charmer!

GREEN GROW THE RASHES, O!

Tune—"Green grow the rashes."

Green grow the rashes, O!
Green grow the rashes, O!
The sweetest hours that e'er I spend,
Are spent among the lasses, O!

There's nought but care on every han',
In every hour that passes, O:
What signifies the life o' man,
An' twere na for the lasses, O?

The war'ly race may riches chase,
And riches still may fly them, O;
And though at last they catch them fast,
Their hearts can ne'er enjoy them, O.

But give me a canny hour at een,
My arms about my dearie, O,
And war'ly cares, and war'ly men,
May a' gae tapsalteerie, 3 O.

For you sae douce, ye sneer at this,
Ye're nought but senseless asses, O;
The wisest man the war'l e'er saw,
He dearly loved the lasses, O.

Auld Nature swears the lovely dear
Her noblest work she classes, O,
Her 'prentice hand she tried on man,
And then she made the lasses, O.

The peer I don't envy, I give him his bow;
I scorn not the peasant, though ever so

MY JEAN!

Tune—"The Northern Lass."

"The heroine of this sweet snatch," says Cunningham, "was bonny Jean. It was composed when the poet contemplated the West India voyages, and an eternal separation from the land and an "— was dear to him."

THOUGH cruel fate should bid us part,
Far as the pole and line,
Her dear idea round my heart
Should tenderly entwine.
Though mountains rise, and deserts howl,
And oceans roar between;
Yet, dearer than my deathless soul,
I still would love my Jean.

A FRAGMENT.

Tune—"John Anderson my Jo."

ONE night as I did wander,
When corn begins to shoot,
I sat me down to ponder
Upon an auld tree root:
Auld Ayr ran by before me,
And licker’d 1 to the seas;
A cushat crooled 2 o’er me,
That echo’d through the brays.

WHEN CLOUDS IN SKIES DO COME TOGETHER.

"The following," says the poet in his first Commonplace Book, "was an extemporaneous effusion, composed under a train of misfortunes which threatened to undo me altogether."

ROBIN.

Tune—"Daisy Davie."

It is related that when the poet’s mother felt her time approach, his father took horse in the darkness of a stormy January night, and set out for Ayr to procure the necessary female attendant. On arriving at the ford of a rivulet which crossed the road, he found it so deep in flood, that a female wayfarer sat on the opposite side, unable to cross; and, notwithstanding his own haste, he conveyed the woman through the stream on his horse. On returning from Ayr with the midwife, he found the gipsy, for such she proved to be, seated at his cottage fireside; and on the child’s being placed in the lap of the woman, shortly after his birth, she is said to have inspected his palm, after the manner of her tribe, and made the predictions which the poet has embodied in the song.

---

THERE was a lad was born in Kyle,
But whatna day o’ whatna style,
I doubt it’s hardly worth the while
To be sae nice wi’ Robin.
Robin was a rovin’ boy,
Rantin’ rovin’, rantin’ rovin’;
Robin was a rovin’ boy,
Rantin’ rovin’ Robin!

Our monarch’s hindmost year but ane
Was five and twenty days begun,
’Twas then a blast o’ Januar win
Blew hansel in on Robin.

The gossip keekit 1 in his loof,
Quo’ she, whoa lives will see the proof
This waly 3 boy will be nae coof 4—
I think we’ll ca’ him Robin.

He’ll hae misfortunes great and sma’,
But aye a heart aboon them a’;
He’ll be a credit till us a’,
We’ll a’ be proud o’ Robin.

But, sure as three times three make nine,
I see, by ilka score and line,
This chap will dearly like our kin’,
So leezie 5 me on thee, Robin.

Guid faith, quo’ she, I doubt ye gar
The bonny lasses lie a’spar,
But twenty fants ye may hae waur,
So blessin’s on thee, Robin!

THE MAUCHLINE LADY.
Tune—“I had a horse, I had nae mair.”

When first I came to Stewart Kyle,
My mind it was na steady:
Where’er I gaed, where’er I rade,
A mistress still I had aye;
But when I came roun’ by Mauchline town,
Not dreading’ ony body,
My heart was caught, before I thought,
And by a Mauchline lady.*

THE BRAES O’ BALLOCHMYLE.
Tune—“Braes o’ Ballochmyle.”

The Catrine woods were yellow seen,
The flowers decay’d on Catrine lea,
Nae laverock¹ sang on hillock green,
But nature sicken’d on the ee.
Through faded groves Maria sang,
Hersel in beauty’s bloom the while,
And aye the wild-wood echoes rang,
Fareweel the Braes o’ Ballochmyle!

Low in your wintry beds ye flowers,
Again ye’ll flourish fresh and fair;
Ye birdies dumb in withering bowers,
Again ye’ll charm the vocal air.
But here, alas! for me nae mair
Shall birdie charm or floweret smile:
Fareweel the bonny banks of Ayr,
Fareweel, fareweel! sweet Ballochmyle!

YOUNG PEGGY.
Tune—“The last time I cam o’er the muir.”

Young Peggy blooms our bonniest lass,
Her blush is like the morning,

The rosy dawn the springing grass
With pearly gems adorning:
Her eyes outshine the radiant beams
That gild the passing shower,
And glitter o’er the crystal streams,
And cheer each freshening flower.

Her lips more than the cherries bright,
A richer dye has graced them;
They charm th’ admiring gazer’s sight,
And sweetly temp’t to taste them;
Her smile is, like the evening, mild,
When feather’d tribes are courting,
And little lamb’ uns wanton wild,
In playful bands dispersing.

Were Fortune lovely Peggy’s foe,
Such sweetness would relent her;
As blooming Spring unbends the brow
Of surly, savage Winter.
Detraction’s eye no aim can gain,
Her winning powers to lessen;
And spiteful Envy grins in vain,
The poison’d tooth to fasten.

Ye Powers of Honour, Love, and Truth,
From every ill defend her;
Inspire the highly-favour’d youth
The destinies intend her;
Still fan the sweet connubial flame,
Responsive in each bosom;
And bless the dear parental name
With many a filial blossom.

THE RANTIN’ DOG THE DADDIE O’T.
Tune—“East neuk o’ Fife.”

The subject of this lively ditty was a girl of the name of Elizabeth Paton, a domestic servant in the poet’s house, and the mother of his illegitimate child—“sonsic, smirking, dear-bought Bess.” “I composed it,” he says, “pretty early in life, and sent it to a young girl, a very particular acquaintance of mine, who was at the time under a cloud.”

Oh wha my babie-clouts¹ will buy?
Oh wha will teant² me when I cry?
Wha will kiss me where I lie?—
The rantin’ dog the daddie o’t.

Oh wha will own he did the faut?
Oh wha will buy the growlin’ maut?³

¹ Baby-clouts. ² Heed. ³ Malt to brew ale to welcome the birth of a child.
Oh wha will tell me how to ca’t—

The rantin’ dog the daddie o’t.

When I mount the creepie-chair,*

Wha will sit beside me there!

Gie me Rob, I’ll seek nae mair,

The rantin’ dog the daddie o’t.

Wha will crack to me my lane?

Wha will mak me fidgin-fain?*

Wha will kiss me o’er again?—

The rantin’ dog the daddie o’t.

MENIE.†

Tune— "Johnny’s Gray Breeks."

The chorus of this beautiful lyric was borrowed by Burns from a song composed by an Edinburgh gentleman; but it has been generally objected to by critics as interfering with the sombre sentiments of the lines.

Again rejoicing nature sees

Her robe assume its vernal hues,

Her leafy locks wave in the breeze,

All freshly steep’d in morning dews.

Chorus.

And maun I still on Menie dote,

And bear the scorn that’s in her ee?

For it’s jet, jet black, and it’s like a hawk,

And it winna let a body be!

In vain to me the violets spring;

Amang the reeds the ducklings cry,

The stately swan majestic swims,

And everything is blest but I.

THERE WAS A LASS.

TUNE—"Duncan Davison."

There was a lass, they ca’d her Meg,
And she held o’er the moor to spin;
There was a lad that follow’d her,
They ca’d him Duncan Davison.
The moor was dreigh¹ and Meg was skiegh,²
Her favour Duncan couldn’a win;
For wi’ the rock she wad him knock,
And aye she shook the temper-pin.

As o’er the moor they lightly floored,³
A burn was clear, a glen was green,
Upon the banks they eased their shanks,
And aye she set the wheel between:
But Duncan swore a haly aith,
That Meg should be a bride the morn,
Then Meg took up her spinnin’ graith,⁴
And flang them a’ out o’er the burn.

We’ll big a house—a wee, wee house,
And we will live like king and queen,
Sae blithe and merry we will be
When ye sit by the wheel at e’en.
A man may drink and no be drunk;
A man may fight and no be slain;
A man may kiss a bonny lass,
And aye be welcome back again.

THE HIGHLAND LASSIE.

TUNE—“The deuks dang o’er my daddy.”

“This,” says the poet, “was a composition of mine before I was at all known in the world. My Highland lassie [Mary] was a warm-hearted, charming young creature as ever blessed a man with generous love.”

For an account of this simple, interesting girl, whom the poet’s passion has placed in “Fame’s proud temple,” and clothed with immortality as with a garment, the reader is referred to the introduction to the verses entitled, “To Mary in Heaven,” p. 219.

Burns having sent this song to Mary when she was residing with her parents in the Highlands, her mother saw it, and greatly admired it; and years after the death of this gentle girl, whom every one seems to have loved, it is said the poor old woman was wont to soothe her sorrow by singing to her grandchildren the sweet strains in which the poet has celebrated the beauty and charms of her favourite daughter. Having outlived her husband and many of her children, she died in great poverty at Greenock in 1832.

NAE gentle* dames, though e’er sae fair,
Shall ever be my Muse’s care:

* Gentle is used here in opposition to simple, in the Scottish and old English sense of the word.—Nae gentle dames—no high-blooded names.—CURRIE.
Their titles a' are empty show;
Gie me my Highland Lassie, O.

Within the glen sae bushy, O,
Aboon the plains sae rushy, O,
I set me down wi' right good will,
To sing my Highland Lassie, O.

Oh, were yon hills and valleys mine,
Yon palace and yon gardens fine!
The world then the love should know
I bear my Highland Lassie, O.

But fickle Fortune frowns on me,
And I maun cross the raging sea!
But while my crimson currents flow,
I'll love my Highland Lassie, O.

Although through foreign climes I range,
I know her heart will never change,
For her bosom burns with honour's glow,
My faithful Highland Lassie, O.

For her I'll dare the billows' roar,
For her I'll trace the distant shore,
That Indian wealth may lustre throw
Around my Highland Lassie, O.

She has my heart, she has my hand,
By sacred truth and honour's band!
'Till the mortal stroke shall lay me low,
I'm thine, my Highland Lassie, O.

Fareweel the glen sae bushy, O!
Fareweel the plain sae rushy, O!
To other lands I now must go,
To sing my Highland Lassie, O!

MARY!

TUNE—"Blue Bonnets."

This beautiful song was found amongst the poet's manuscripts after his death, inscribed,
"A Prayer for Mary." Who Mary was the world knows.

POWERS celestial! whose protection
Ever guards the virtuous fair,
While in distant climes I wander;
Let my Mary be your care;

Let her form sae fair and faultless,
Fair and faultless as your own,
Let my Mary's kindred spirit
Draw your choicest influence down.

Make the gales you waft around her
Soft and peaceful as her breast;

Breathing in the breeze that fans her,
Soothe her bosom into rest.

Guardian angels! oh, protect her,
When in distant lands I roam; [me,
To realms unknown while fate exiles
Make her bosom still my home!

WILL YE GO TO THE INDIES, MY MARY?

"In my very early years," says the poet, in a letter to Mr. Thomson in 1792, "when I was thinking of going to the West Indies, I took the following farewell of a dear girl [Highland Mary]:"

WILL ye go to the Indies, my Mary,
And leave auld Scotia's shore?
Will ye go to the Indies, my Mary,
Across the Atlantic's roar?

Oh, sweet grow the lime and the orange,
And the apple on the pine;
But a' the charms o' the Indies
Can never equal thine.

I hae sworn by the Heavens to my Mary,
I hae sworn by the Heavens to be true;
And sae may the Heavens forget me
When I forget my vow!

Oh, plight me your faith, my Mary,
And plight me your lily-white hand;
Oh, plight me your faith, my Mary,
Before I leave Scotia's strand.

We hae plighted our troth, my Mary,
In mutual affection to join;
[us!]
And curst be the cause that shall part
The hour and the moment o' time!

ELIZA.

TUNE—"Gilderoy.

FROM thee, Eliza, I must go,
And from my native shore;
The cruel fates between us throw
A boundless ocean's roar;

But boundless oceans roaring wide
Between my love and me,
They never, never can divide
My heart and soul from thee!

Farewell, farewell, Eliza dear,
The maid that I adore!
A boding voice is in mine ear,
We part to meet no more!
A FAREWELL TO THE BRETHREN OF ST. JAMES’ LODGE, TORBOLTON.

TUNE—“Good night, and joy be wi’ you a’!”

The poet is said to have chanted this “Farewell” at a meeting of St. James’ Mason Lodge at Torbolton, while his chest was on the way to Greenock, and he had just written the last song he thought he should ever compose in Scotland. The person alluded to in the last stanza was Major-General James Montgomery, who was Worshipful Master, while Burns was Depute-Master.

ADIEU! a heart-warm, fond adieu!
Dear brothers of the mystic tie!
Ye favour’d, ye enlight’en’d few,
Companions of my social joy!
Though I to foreign lands must hie, Pursuing Fortune’s slidd’ry ba’,
With melting heart, and brimful eye,
I’ll mind you still, though far awa’.

Oft have I met your social band,
And spent the cheerful, festive night;
Oft, honour’d with supreme command,
Presided o’er the sons of light:
And, by that hieroglyphic bright,
Which none but craftsmen ever saw!
Strong memory on my heart shall write
Those happy scenes when far awa’.

May freedom, harmony, and love,
Unite you in the grand design,
Beneath the Omniscient eye above,
The glorious Architect Divine!
That you may keep the unerring line,
Still rising by the plummet’s law,
Till order bright completely shine,
Shall be my prayer when far awa’.

And you, farewell! whose merits claim,
Justly, that highest badge to wear!
Heaven bless your honour’d, noble name,
To masonry and Scotia dear!
A last request permit me here,
When yearly ye assemble a’,
One round—I ask it with a tear—
To him the Bard that’s far awa’.

1 Slippery ball.

THE SONS OF OLD KILLIE.

TUNE—“Shawnboy.”

Burns having been induced to participate in the festivities of the Kilmarnock Mason Lodge, which was presided over by his friend William Parker, produced the following appropriate song for the occasion:—

YE sons of old Killie, assembled by Willie,
To follow the noble vocation;
Your thrifty old mother has scarce such another
To sit in that honour’d station.
I’ve little to say, but only to pray,
As praying’s the ton of your fashion:
A prayer from the Muse you well may excuse,
’Tis seldom her favourite passion.

Ye powers who preside o’er the wind and the tide,
Who mark’d each element’s border;
Who form’d this frame with beneficent aim,
Whose sovereign statute is order;
Within this dear mansion may wayward Contention
Or wither’d Envy ne’er enter;
May Secrecy round be the mystical bound,
And Brotherly Love be the centre!

SONG,

IN THE CHARACTER OF A RUINED FARMER.

TUNE—“Go from my window, love, do.”

The sun he is sunk in the west,
All creatures retir’d to rest,
While here I sit all sore beset
With sorrow, grief, and wo;
And it’s O, fickle Fortune, O!

The prosperous man is asleep,
Nor hears how the whirlwinds sweep;
But Misery and I must watch
The surly tempest blow:
And it’s O, fickle Fortune, O!

There lies the dear partner of my breast,
Her cares for a moment at rest:
Must I see thee, my youthful pride,
Thus brought so very low!
And it’s O, fickle Fortune, O!
There lie my sweet babies in her arms,
No anxious fear their little heart alarms;
But for their sake my heart doth ache,
With many a bitter throe:
And it's O, fickle Fortune, O!

I once was by Fortune cares't,
I once could relieve the distrest:
Now, life's poor support hardly earn'd,
My fate will scarce bestow:
And it's O, fickle Fortune, O!

No comfort, no comfort I have!
How welcome to me were the grave!
But then my wife and children dear,
O whither would they go?
And it's O, fickle Fortune, O!

O whither, O whither shall I turn!
All friendless, forsaken, forlorn!
For in this world Rest or Peace
I never more shall know!
And it's O, fickle Fortune, O!

THE LASS OF BALLOCHMYLE.

TUNE—“Miss Forbes’ Farewell to Banff.”

The beautiful estate of Ballochmyle, which is situated on the Ayr, in the neighbourhood of Mauchline, was at this period of the poet’s life transferred from the family of the Whitefoords (whose departure he has lamented in the lines on “The Braes of Ballochmyle”) to Mr. Claud Alexander, a gentleman who had made a large fortune as paymaster-general of the East India Company’s troops at Bengal; and having just taken up his residence at the mansion-house, his sister, Miss Wilhelmina Alexander, was one day walking out through the grounds, which appear to have been a favourite haunt of Burns’, when she accidentally encountered him in a musings attitude, with his shoulder leaning against a tree. As the grounds were thought to be strictly private, the lady appears to have been somewhat startled; but, having recovered herself, passed on, and thought no more of the matter. A short time afterwards, however, she was reminded of the circumstance by receiving a letter from the poet, enclosing the song. “I had rov’d out,” he says, “as chance directed in the favourite haunts of my Muse, on the banks of the Ayr, to view nature in all the gayety of the vernal year. The evening sun was flaming over the distant western hills; not a breath stirred the crimson opening blossom, or the verdant spreading leaf. It was a golden moment for a poetic heart. Such was the scene, and such was the hour—when, in a corner of my prospect, I spied one of the fairest pieces of Nature’s workmanship that ever crowned a poetic landscape or met a poet’s eye. The enclosed song was the work of my return home; and perhaps it but poorly answers what might have been expected from such a scene. Much to the mortification of Burns, however, the lady took no notice of either the letter or the song, although she ultimately displayed a high sense of the honour which the genius of the poet had conferred on her. She died unmarried in 1843, at the age of eighty-eight.

'Twas even—the dewy fields were green,
On every blade the pearls hang,
The zephyrs wan’ton’d round the bean,
And bore its fragrant sweets alang:
In every glen the mavis sang,
All nature listening seem’d the while,
Except where greenwood echoes rang,
Among the braes o’ Ballochmyle.

With careless step I onward stray’d,
My heart rejoiced in Nature’s joy,
When musing in a lonely glade,
A maiden fair I chanced to spy;
Her look was like the morning’s eye,
Her air like Nature’s vernal smile,
Perfection whisper’d, passing by,
Behold the lass o’ Ballochmyle!

Fair is the morn in flowery May,
And sweet is night in autumn mild;
When roving through the garden gay,
Or wandering in the lonely wild:
But woman, Nature’s darling child!
There all her charms she does compile;
Even there her other works are foil’d
By the bonny lass o’ Ballochmyle.

Oh! had she been a country maid,
And I the happy country swain,
Though shelter’d in the lowest shed
That ever rose on Scotland’s plain:
Through weary winter’s wind and rain,
With joy, with rapture, I would toil,
And nightly to my bosom strain
The bonny lass o’ Ballochmyle!

Then pride might climb the slippery steep,
Where fame and honours lofty shine;
And thirst of gold might tempt the deep,
Or downward seek the Indian mine;
Give me the cot below the pine
To tend the flocks, or till the soil,
And every day have joys divine
With the bonny lass o' Ballochmyle.

THE BONNY BANKS OF AYR.
Tune—"Roslin Castle."
The gloomy night is gathering fast,
Loud roars the wild inconstant blast;
Yon murky cloud is foul with rain,
I see it driving o'er the plain;
The hunter now has left the moor,
The scatter'd coveys meet secure;
While here I wander, prest with care,
Along the lonely banks of Ayr.

'Tis not the surging billow's roar,
'Tis not the fatal, deadly shore;
Though death in every shape appear,
The wretched have no more to fear!
But round my heart the ties are bound,
That heart transpierced with many a wound;
These bleed afresh, those ties I tear,
To leave the bonny banks of Ayr.

Farewell old Coila's hills and dales,
Her heathy moors and winding vales;
The scenes where wretched fancy roves,
Pursuing past unhappy loves! [foes!]
Farewell, my friends! farewell my
My peace with these, my love with those—
The bursting tears my heart declare;
Farewell the bonny banks of Ayr!

THE BANKS OF DOON.
FIRST VERSION.
The following song relates to an incident in real life—an unhappy love tale. The unfortunate heroine was a beautiful and accomplished woman, the daughter and heiress of a gentleman of fortune in Carrick. Having been deserted by her lover, the son of a wealthy Wigtownshire porprietor, to whom she had borne a child without the sanction of the Church, she is said to have died of a broken heart. The poet composed a second version of this song in 1792, for the Scots
Musical Museum; but it lacks the pathos and simplicity of the present one.

Ye flowery banks o' bonny Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae fu' o' care!
Thou'lt break my heart, thou bonny
bird
That sings upon the bough;
Thou minds me o' the happy days
When my false love was true.

Thou'lt break my heart, thou bonny
bird
That sings beside thy mate;
For sae I sat, and sae I sang,
And wist na o' my fate.
Aft hae I roved by bonny Doon,
To see the woodbine twine;
And ilka bird sang o' its love,
And sae did I o' mine.

Wi' lightsome heart I pu'd a rose,
Frae its thorny tree;
And my false luver staw the rose,
But left the thorn wi' me.

THE AMERICAN WAR.
A FRAGMENT.
Tune—"Killicrankie."

THE BIRKS OF ABERFELDY.

TUNE—“ The Birks of Aberfeldy.”
The poet tells us he composed this song on a visit which he paid to the beautiful falls of

This lovely maid’s of royal blood
That ruled Albion’s kingdoms three,
But oh, alas! for her bonny face,
They’ve wrang’d the Lass of Albany.

In the rolling tide of spreading Clyde
There sits an isle of high degree,
And a town of fame whose princely name
Should grace the Lass of Albany.

But there’s a youth, a witless youth,
That fills the place where she should be;
We’ll send him o’er to his native shore,
And bring our ain sweet Albany.

Alas the day, and wo the day,
A false usurper won the gree
Who now commands the towers and lands—
The royal right of Albany.

We’ll daily pray, we’ll nightly pray,
On bended knees most fervently,
The time may come, with pipe an’
drum,
We’ll welcome hame fair Albany.

BLITHE WAS SHE.

Tune—"Andrew and his Cutty Gun."

Blithe, blithe, and merry was she,
Blithe was she butt and ben:1
Blithe by the banks of Earn,
And blithe in Glenturit glen.

By Auchtertyre grows the aik,2
On Yarrow banks the birken shaw;3
But Phemie was a bonnier lass
Than braes o' Yarrow ever saw.

Her looks were like a flower in May,
Her smile was like a simmer morn;
She tripped by the banks of Earn,
As light's a bird upon a thorn.

Her bonny face it was as meek
As ony lamb upon a lea;
The evening sun was ne'er sae sweet,
As was the blink o' Phemie's ee.

The Highland hills I've wander'd wide,
And o'er the Lowlands I hae been;
But Phemie was the blithest lass
That ever trod the dewy green.

BONNY DUNDEE.

Tune—"Bonny Dundee."

This song appeared in the first volume of the Museum. The second verse alone is Burns', the first having been taken from a very old homely ditty.

Oh, whare did ye get that hauver1 meal bannock? [see?]
Oh, silly blind body, oh, dinna ye I gat it frae a brisk young sodger lad-die, [Dundee.
Between Saint Johnston and bonny Oh gin I saw the laddie that gae me'! Aft has he doudled2 me upon his knee; [laddie,
May Heaven protect my bonny Scots And send him safe hame to his baby and me!

My blessin's upon thy sweet wee lippie,
My blessin's upon thy bonny ceebree! Thy smiles are sae like my blithe sodger laddie, [me!
Thou's aye, be dearer and dearer to

But I'll big a bower on yon bonny banks,
Where Tay rins wimplin' by sae And I'll cleed thee in the tartan sae fine,
And mak the a man like thy daddie

——

THE JOYFUL WIDOWER.

Tune—"Maggy Lauder."

I married with a scolding wife,
The fourteenth of November;
She made me weary of my life
By one unruly member.
Long did I bear the heavy yoke,
And many griefs attended;
But, to my comfort be it spoke,
Now, now her life is ended.

We lived full one-and-twenty years
As man and wife together;
At length from me her course she steer'd,
And's gone I know not whither:
Would I could guess. I do profess,
I speak, and do not flatter,
Of all the women in the world,
I never could come at her.

Her body is bestowed well,
A handsome grave does hide her;
But sure her soul is not in hell,
The deil could ne'er abide her.
I rather think she is aloft,
And imitating thunder;
For why, methinks I hear her voice
Tearing the clouds asunder.

A ROSEBUD BY MY EARLY WALK.

Tune—"The Rosebud."

This song was composed in honour of the young lady to whom the poet addressed the lines beginning, "Beauteous rosebud young and gay." She was Miss Jenny Cruikshank, daughter of Mr. William Cruikshank, one of the masters of the High School of Edinburgh.

A ROSEBUD by my early walk,
Adown a corn-enclosed bawk,1
Sae gently bent its therny stalk,
All on a dewy morning.

1 An open space in a cornfield.
ERE twice the shades o' dawn are fled,
In a' its crimson glory spread
And drooping rich the dewy head,
It scents the early morning.

Within the bush, her covert nest
A little linnet fondly prest,
The dew sat chilly on her breast
Sae early in the morn.

She soon shall see her tender brood,
The pride, the pleasure o' the wood,
Amang the fresh green leaves bedew'd,
Awake the early morning.

So thou, dear bird, young Jenny fair!
On trembling string, or vocal air,
Shall sweetly pay the tender care
That tends thy early morning.

So thou, sweet rosebud, young and gay,
Shalt beauteous blaze upon the day,
And bless the parent's evening ray
That watch'd thy early morning.

BRAVING ANGRY WINTER'S STORMS.

Tune—"Neil Gow's Lamentation for Abercairny."

The two following songs were written in praise of Miss Margaret Chalmers, a relative of the poet's friend, Mr. Gavin Hamilton.

WHERE, braving angry Winter's storms,
The lofty Ochils rise,
Far in their shade my Peggy's charms
First blest my wondering eyes;
As one who by some savage stream,
A lonely gem surveys,
Astonish'd, doubly marks its beam,
With art's most polish'd blaze.

Blest be the wild sequester'd shade,
And blest the day and hour,
Where Peggy's charms I first survey'd,
When first I felt their power!

The tyrant Death, with grim control,
May seize my fleeting breath;
But tearing Peggy from my soul
Must be a stronger death.

MY PEGGY'S FACE.

Tune—"My Peggy's Face."

My Peggy's face, my Peggy's form
The frost of hermit age might warm;

My Peggy's worth, my Peggy's mind,
Might charm the first of humankind.
I love my Peggy's angel air,
Her face so truly, heavenly fair,
Her native grace so void of art,
But I adore my Peggy's heart.

The lily's hue, the rose's dye,
The kindling lustre of an eye;
Who but owns their magic sway
Who but knows they all decay!
The tender thrill, the pitying tear,
The generous purpose, nobly dear,
The gentle look, that rage disarms—
These are all immortal charms.

THE BANKS OF THE DEVON.

Tune—"Bhanarach dhonn a chrudh.

"These verses," says Burns, in his notes in the Musical Museum, "were composed on a charming girl, Miss Charlotte Hamilton, who is now married to James M. Adair, physician. She is sister to my worthy friend Gavin Hamilton of Mauchline, and was born on the banks of the Ayr; but was, at the time I wrote these lines, residing at Harvieston, in Clackmannanshire, on the romantic banks of the little river Devon. The poet, it has been said, wished to be something more than a mere admirer of this young lady; but

"Meg was—eaf as Ailsa Craig;" for the music of his lyre appears to have fallen on ears that would not charm.

How pleasant the banks of the clear-winding Devon,
With green-spreading bushes, and flowers blooming fair!
But the bonniest flower on the banks of the Devon [of the Ayr.

And gentle the fall of the soft vernal shower, [to renew.

With chill hoary wing, as ye usher
And far be thou distant, thou reptile, [and lawn!
That seizes [and lawn!
The verdure and pride of the garden
Let Bourbon exult in his gay gilded lilies, [her proud rose!
And England, triumphant, display

MACPHERSON'S FAREWELL.

Tune—"M'Pherson's Rant."
This fine song, which Lockhart terms "a grand lyric," and Carlyle "a wild, stormful song, that dwells in ear and mind with strange tenacity," was designed by the poet as an improvement of a well-known old ditty entitled, "Macpherson's Lament," and which is said to have been written by a Highland freebooter a night, or two before his execution. As this hero's history contains some elements of interest, we borrow the following account of him from Mr. Robert Chambers' recent edition of the poet's works:—"James Macpherson was a noted Highland freebooter of uncommon personal strength, and an excellent performer on the violin. After holding the counties of Aberdeen, Banff, and Moray in fear for some years, he was seized by Duff of Braco, ancestor of the Earl of Fife, and tried before the sheriff of Banffshire, (November 7, 1700) along with certain gypsies who had been taken in his company. In the prison, while he lay under sentence of death, he composed a song and an appropriate air, the former commencing thus.—

'I've spent my time in rioting,
Debauch'd my health and strength:
I squander'd fast as pilage came,
And fell to shame at length.
But dantonly, and wantonly,
And rantingly I'll gae;
I'll play a tune, and dance it roun'
Beneath the gallows-tree.'

When brought to the place of execution, on the Gallow-hill of Banff, (Nov. 16) he played the tune on his violin, and then asked if any friend was present who would accept the instrument as a gift at his hands. No one coming forward, he indignantly broke the violin on his knee, and threw away the fragments; after which he submitted to his fate. The traditionary accounts of Macpherson's immense prowess are justified by his sword, which is still preserved in Duff House, at Banff, and is an implement of great length and weight—as well as his bones, which were found a few years ago, and were allowed by all who saw them to be much stronger than the bones of ordinary men."

FAREWELL, ye dungeons dark and strong,
The wretch's destinie!
Macpherson's time will not be long
On yonder gallows-tree.

Sae rantingly, sae wantonly,
Sae daintingly gaed he;
He play'd a spring, and danced it round,
Below the gallows-tree.

Oh! what is death but parting breath?—
On mony a bloody plain
I've dared his face, and in this place
I scorn him yet again!

Untie these bands from off my hands,
And bring to me my sword!
And there's no a man in all Scotland
But I'll brave him at a word.

I've lived a life of sturt and strife;
I die by treacherie.
It burns my heart I must depart
And not aveng'd be.

Now farewell light—then sunshine bright,
And all beneath the sky!
May coward shame distain his name,
The wretch that dares not die!

WHISTLE, AND I'LL COME TO YOU, MY LAD.

This version of an old fragment the poet composed for the second volume of the Museum; but he afterwards altered and extended it for Thomson's collection.

Oh, whistle, and I'll come to you, my lad;
Oh, whistle, and I'll come to you, my
Though father and mother should baith gae mad,
Oh, whistle, and I'll come to you, my
Come down the back stairs when ye come to court me;
Come down the back stairs when ye come to court me;
And come as ye were a coming to me.

STAY, MY CHARMER.

Tune—"An Gille dubh ciar dhubh."

STAY, my charmer, can you leave me?
Cruel, cruel to deceive me? [me;
Well you know how much you grieve
Cruel charmer, can you go?
Cruel charmer, can you go?
By my love so ill requited;
By the faith you fondly plighted;
By the pangs of lovers slighted;
Do not, do not leave me so!
Do not, do not leave me so!

STRATHALLAN'S LAMENT.

William, fourth Viscount of Strathallan, whom the poet celebrates in these lines, fell on the rebel side at Culloden in 1746. The poet, perhaps ignorant of this fact, speaks of him as having survived the battle, and fled for safety to some mountain fastness.

THICKEST night, o'erhang my dwelling!
Howling tempests, o'er me rave!
Turbid torrents, wintry swelling,
Still surround my lonely cave!

Crystal streamlets gently flowing,
Busy haunts of base mankind,
Western breezes softly blowing,
Suit not my distracted mind.

In the cause of right engaged,
Wrongs injurious to redress,
Honour's war we strongly waged,
But the heavens denied success.

Farewell, fleeting, fickle treasure,
'Tween Misfortune and Folly shared!
Farewell Peace, and farewell Pleasure!
Farewell flattering man's regard!

Ruin's wheel has driven o'er us,
Not a hope that dare attend,
The wide world is all before us—
But a world without a friend!

THE YOUNG HIGHLAND ROVER.

Tune—"Morag."

LOUD blow the frosty breezes,
The snaw the mountains cover;
Like winter on me seizes,
Since my young Highland rover
Far wanders nations over.
Where'er he go, where'er he stray,
May Heaven be his warden;
Return him safe to fair Strathspey
And bonny Castle-Gordon!

The trees now naked groaning,
Shall soon wi' leaves be hinging,
The birdsie dowie moaning,
Shall a' be blithely singing,

---

And every flower be springing.
Sae I'll rejoice the lee-lang day,
When by his mighty warden
My youth's return'd to fair Strathspey,
And bonny Castle-Gordon.

RAVING WINDS AROUND HER BLOWING.

Tune—"Macgregor of Ruara's Lament."

"I composed these verses," says Burns, "on Miss Isabella M'Leod of Raasay, alluding to her feelings on the death of her sister, and the still more melancholy death of her sister's husband, the late Earl of Loudon, who shot himself out of sheer heartbreak at some mortification he suffered from the deranged state of his finances."

Raving winds around her blowing,
Yellow leaves the woodlands strowning,
By a river hoarsely roaring,
Isabella stray'd deploiring:—
"Farewell hours that late did measure
Sunshine days of joy and pleasure;
Hail thou gloomy night of sorrow,
Cheerless night that knows no morrow!"

"O'er the past too fondly wandering,
On the hopeless future pondering;
Chilly Grief my life-blood freezes,
Fell Despair my fancy seizes.
Life, thou soul of every blessing,
Load to Misery most distressing,
Oh, how gladly I'd resign thee,
And to dark oblivion join thee!"

MUSING ON THE ROARING OCEAN.

Tune—"Druimion Dubh."

"I composed these verses," says the poet,
"out of compliment to a Mrs. Maclachlan, whose husband was an officer in the East Indies."

Musing on the roaring ocean,
Which divides my love and me;
Wearying Heaven in warm devotion,
For his weal where'er he be.

Hope and Fear's alternate billow
Yielding late to Nature's law;
Whispering spirits round my pillow
Talk of him that's far awa'.

Ye whom sorrow never wounded,
Ye who never shed a tear,
Care-untouched, joy-surrounded,
Gaudy Day to you is dear.
Gentle Night, do thou befriend me;
Downy Sleep, the curtain draw;
Spirits kind, again attend me,—
'Talk of him that's far awa'!

BONNY PEGGY ALISON.
*Tune—" Bracs o' Balquhiddir."
I'll kiss thee yet, yet,
And I'll kiss thee o'er again;
And I'll kiss the yet, yet,
My bonny Peggy Alison!

Ilk care and fear, when thou art near,
I ever mair defy them, O;
Young kings upon their hasnel' throne
Are nae sae blest as I am, O!

When in my arms, wi' a' thy charms,
I clasp my countless treasure O,
I seek nae mair o' Heaven to share,
Than sic a moment's pleasure, O!

And by thy een, sae bonny blue,
I swear I'm thine for ever, O!—
And on thy lips I seal my vow,
And break it shall I never, O!

THE CHEVALIER'S LAMENT.
*Tune—" Captain O'Kean."
"Yesterday," wrote Burns to his friend Cleghorn, "as I was riding through a tract of melancholy, joyless moors, between Galloway and Ayrshire, it being Sunday, I turned my thoughts to psalms, and hymns and spiritual songs; and your favourite air, 'Captain O'Kean,' coming at length into my head, I tried these words to it. 'I am tolerably pleased with the verses; but as I have only a sketch of the tune, I leave it with you to try if they suit the measure of the music."
Cleghorn answered that the words delighted him, and fitted the tune exactly.
"I wish," added he, "that you would send me a verse or two more; and, if you have o no objection, I would have it in the Jacobite style. Suppose it should be sung after the fatal field of Culloden, by the unfortunate Charles." The poet took his friend's advice, and infused a Jacobite spirit into the first verse as well as the second.

The small birds rejoice in the green leaves returning,
The murmuring streamlet winds
through the vale;

The hawthorn trees blow, in the dew
of the morning,
And wild scatter'd cowslips bedeck
the green dale;
But what can give pleasure, or what can seem fair,
While the lingering moments are number'd by care?

No flowers gayly springing, nor birds
sweetly singing,
Can soothe the sad bosom of joyless
The deed that I dared, could it merit their malice,
A king, and a father, to place on His right are these hills, and his right are these valleys,
Where the wild beasts find shelter,
but I can find none:

But 'tis not my sufferings thus wretched,—forlorn,
My brave gallant friends! 'tis your ruin I mourn;
Your deeds proved so loyal in hot bloody trial—

Alas! can I make you no sweeter return?

OF A' THE AIRTS THE WIND CAN BLAW.
*Tune—" Miss Admiral Gordon's Strathspey.
"I composed this song," says the poet, "out of compliment to Mrs. Burns, during our honeymoon."

Of a' the airts the wind can blaw,
I dearly like the west,
For there the bonny lassie lives,
The lassie I lo'e best: [row.1
There wild woods grow, and rivers
And mony a hill between;
But day and night, my fancy's flight
Is ever wi' my Jean.

I see her in the dewy flowers,
I see her sweet and fair;
I hear her in the tuneful birds,
I hear her charm the air:
There's not a bonny flower that springs
By fountain, shaw, 2 or green,
There's not a bonny bird that sings,
But minds me o' my Jean.*

OH, WERE I ON PARNASSUS' HILL.

TUNE—"My love is lost to me."

This song was also produced in honour of Mrs. Burns, shortly before she took up her residence at Ellishad as the poet's wife. It is thought to have been composed while he was one day gazing towards the hill of Corsincon, at the head of Nithsdale, and beyond which, though at some distance, was the quiet vale where lived his "bonny Jean."

Oh, were I on Parnassus' hill!
Or had of Helicon my fill;
That I might catch poetic skill
To sing how dear I love thee.

But Nith maun be my Muse's well,
My Muse maun be thy bonny sel;
On Corsincon I glower \(^1\) and spell,
And write how dear I love thee.

Then come, sweet Muse, inspire my lay!
For a' the lee-lang simmer's day
I couldna sing, I couldna say,
How much, how dear, I love thee.

I see thee dancing o'er the green,
Thy waist see jimp,\(^2\) thy limbs sae clean.\(^3\)
Thy tempting lips, thy roguish een—
By heaven and earth I love thee!

By night, by day, a-field, at hame,
The thoughts o' thee my breast inflame;
And aye I muse and sing thy name—
I only live to love thee.

Though I were doom'd to wander on
Beyond the sea, beyond the sun,
Till my last weary sand was run;
Till then—and then I'd love thee.

THE FETE CHAMPETRE.

TUNE—"Killiecrankie."

The poet's brother, Gilbert Burns, gives the following account of the origin of this ballad:—When Mr. Cunningham of Enterkin came to his estate, two mansion-houses on it. Enterkin and Annbank, were both in a ruinous state. Wishing to introduce himself with some éclat to the county, he got temporary erections made on the banks of the "Ayr, tastefully decorated with shrubs and flowers, for a supper and ball, to which most of the respectable families in the county were invited. It was a novelty in the county, and attracted much notice. A dissolution of parliament was soon expected, and this festivity was thought to be an introduction to a canvass for representing the county. Several other candidates were spoken of, particularly Sir John Whitefoord, then residing at Cloncaird, commonly pronounced Glencaird, and Mr. Boswell, the well-known biographer of Dr. Johnson. The political views of this festive assemblage, which are alluded to in the ballad, if they ever existed, were, however, laid aside as Mr. Cunningham did not canvass the county."

Oh, who will to Saint Stephen's house,
To do our errands there, man?
Oh, who will to Saint Stephen's house,
O' th' merry lads of Ayr, man?
Or will we send a man-o'-law?
Or will we send a sodger?
Or him who led o'er Scotland a'?
The meikle Ursa-Major?

Come, will ye court a noble lord,
Or buy a score o' lairds, man?
For worth and honour pawn their word,
Their vote shall be Glencaird's man?

THE DAY RETURNS.

TUNE—“Seventh of November.”

In a letter to Miss Chalmers, an intimate female friend of the poet’s, he says regarding this song:—“One of the most tolerable things I have done for some time is these two stanzas I made to an air a musical gentleman of my acquaintance [Captain Riddel of Glenriddle] composed for the anniversary of his wedding day.”

The day returns, my bosom burns,
The blissful day we twa did meet,
Though Winter wild in tempest toil’d,
Ne’er Summer sun was half sae sweet.

Than a’ the pride that loads the tide,
And crosses o’er the sultry line;
Than kingly robes, than crowns and globes,
[mine! Heaven gave me more—it made theo

While day and night can bring delight,
Or nature aught of pleasure give,
While joys above my mind can move,
For thee, and thee alone, I live!
When that grim foe of life below
Came in between to make us part,
The iron hand that breaks our band
It breaks my bliss—it breaks my heart.

THE DISCREET HINT.

“Lass when your mither is frae hame,
May I but be sae bauld
As come to your bower window,
And creep in frae the cauld?
As come to your bower window,
And when it’s cauld and wat,
Warm me in thy fair bosom—
Sweet lass, may I do that?”

“Young man, gin ye should be sae kind,
When our gudewife’s frae hame,
As come to my bower window,
Whare I am laid my lane,
To warm thee in my bosom—
Take tent, I’ll tell thee what,
The way to me lies through the kirk—
Young man, do ye hear that?"
MY BONNY MARY.

TUNE—"Go fetch to me a pint o' wine."

The first four lines of this song are from an old ballad composed in 1636, by Alexander Lesly of Edin, on Doveran side, grandfather to the celebrated Archbishop Sharpe—the rest are Burns.

Go fetch to me a pint o' wine,
And fill it in a silver tassie,
That I may drink, before I go,
A service to my bonny lassie;
The boat rocks at the pier o' Leith;
Fu' loud the wind blaws frae the ferry;
The ship rides by the Berwick-law,
And I maun leave my bonny Mary.

The trumpets sound, the banners fly,
The glittering spears are rankèd ready;
The shouts o' war are heard afar,
The battle closes thick and bloody,
But it's not the roar o' sea or shore
Wad make me langer wish to tarry;
Nor shout o' war that's heard afar—
It's leaving thee, my bonny Mary.

MY HEART WAS ANCE AS BLITHE AND FREE.

TUNE—"To the weaver's gin ye go."

The chorus of this song is taken from a very old ditty—the rest is the production of the poet.

My heart was ance as blithe and free
As simmer days were lang,
But a bonny westlin' weaver lad
Has gart me change my sang.

To the weavers gin ye go, fair maids,
To the weavers gin ye go,
I rede you right, gang ne'er at night,
To the weavers gin ye go.

My mither sent me to the town,
'To warp a plaiden wab;
But the weary, weary warpin' o't
Has gart me sigh and sab.

A bonny westlin' weaver lad
Sat working at his loom;

He took my heart as wi' a net,
In every knot and thrum.

I sat beside my warpin'-wheel,
And aye I ca'd it roun';
But every shot and every knock,
My heart it gae a stoun.

The moon was sinking in the west
Wi' visage pale and wan,
As my bonny westlin' weaver lad
Convey'd me through the glen.

But what was said, or what was done,
Shame fa' me gin I tell;
But, oh! I fear the kintrum soon
Will ken as weel's mysel.

BRAW LADS OF GALA WATER.

TUNE—"Gala Water."

The air and chorus of this song are both very old. This version Burns wrote for the Scots Musical Museum; but he was so enamoured with the air, that he afterwards wrote another set of words to it for his friend Thomson, which will be found at p. 250.

BRAW, braw lads of Gala Water;
Oh, braw lads of Gala Water.
I'll kilt my coats aboon my knee,
And follow my love through the water.

Sae fair her hair, sae brent her brow,
Sae bonny blue her een, my dearie;
Sae white her teeth, sae sweet her mon,
The mair I kiss she's aye my dearie.

O'er you bank and o'er you brae,
O'er you moss among the heather;
I'll kilt my coats aboon my knee,
And follow my love through the water.

Down among the broom, my dearie,
The lassie lost her silken snood,
That cost her mony a blirt and bleary.

WEARY FA' YOU, DUNCAN GRAY.

Tune—"Duncan Gray."

This first version of an old song was written for the Museum. The poet afterwards composed another and better version for the collection of his friend Thomson, which will be found at p. 243.

THE PLOUGHMAN.

Tune—"Up with the ploughman."
The fourth and fifth verses only of this piece are by Burns, the remainder by some older writer.

The ploughman he's a bonny lad,
His mind is ever true, jo;
His garters knit below his knee,
His bonnet it is blue, jo.

Then up wi' my ploughman lad,
And hey my merry ploughman!
Of a' the trades that I do ken,
Commend me to the ploughman!

My ploughman he comes hame at e'en,
He's aften wat and weary;
Cast aff the wat, put on the dry,
And gae to bed, my dearie!

I will wash my ploughman's hose,
And I will dress his o'erlay;¹
I will make my ploughman's bed,
And cheer him late and early.

I hae been east, I hae been west,
I hae been at Saint Johnston;
The bonniest sight that e'er I saw
Was the ploughman laddie dancin'.

Slew white stockin's on his legs,
And siller buckles glancin';
A guid blue bonnet on his head—
And oh, but he was handsome!

Commend me to the barn yard,
And the corn-mou,* man;
I never gat my coggie fou,
Till I met wi' the ploughman.

RATTLIN', ROARIN' WILLIE.

Tune—"Rattlin', roarin' Willie."

"The hero of this chant," says Burns, "was one of the worthiest fellows in the world—William Dunbar, Esq., writer to the Signet, Edinburgh, and colonel of the Crochallan corps—a club of wits, who took that title at the time of raising the fencible regiments."
The last stanza only was the work of the poet.

O RATTLIN', roarin' Willie,
Oh, he held to the fair,
And for to sell his fiddle,
And buy some other ware;
But parting wi' his fiddle,
The saunt tear blin' his ee;
And rattlin', roarin' Willie,

OH, WILLIE BREW'D A PECK O' MAUT.
Tune—"Willie brew'd a peck o' maut."
The poet's account of the origin of this song is as follows:—"The air is Allan Masterton's, the song mine. The occasion of it was this—Mr. William Nicol of the High School, Edinburgh, being at Moffat during the autumn vacation, honest Allan—who was at that time on a visit to Dalswinton—and I went to pay Nicol a visit. We had such a joyous meeting that Masterton and I agreed, each in our own way, that we should celebrate the business."

TO MARY IN HEAVEN.

TUNE—"Death of Captain Cook."

The story of Mary Campbell has been briefly alluded to in the memoir of the poet, and in the notes to the Correspondence. She belonged to the neighbourhood of Dunoon, a beautiful watering-place on the Clyde, and was in the service of Colonel Montgomery of Coilsfield when the poet made her acquaintance, and afterwards in that of Gavin Hamilton. They would appear to have been seriously attached to each other. When Jean Armour's father had ordered her to relinquish all claims on the poet, his thoughts naturally turned to Mary Campbell. It was arranged that Mary should give up her place with the view of making preparations for their union; but before she went home they met in a sequestered spot on the banks of the Ayr. Standing on either side of a purling brook, and holding a Bible between them, they exchanged vows of eternal fidelity. Mary presented him with her Bible, the poet giving his own in exchange. This Bible has been preserved, and on a blank leaf, in the poet's handwriting, is inscribed, "And ye shall not swear by my name falsely; I am the Lord," (Lev. xix. 12.) On the second volume, "Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oath." (Matt. v. 33.) And on another blank leaf his name and mark as a Royal Arch mason. The lovers never met again. Mary Campbell having died suddenly at Greenock. Over her grave a monument has been erected by the admirers of the poet. On the third anniversary of her death, Jean Armour, then his wife, noticed that, towards the evening, "he grew sad about something, went into the barn-yard, where he strode restlessly up and down for some time, although repeatedly asked to come in. Immediately on entering the house, he sat down and wrote 'To Mary in Heaven,'" which Lockhart characterizes "as the noblest of all his ballads."

THOU lo'ring star, with less'ning ray,
That lovest to greet the early morn,
Again thou usher'st in the day
My Mary from my soul was torn.
O Mary! dear departed shade!
Where is thy place of blissful rest?
See'st thou thy lover lowly laid?
Hearst thou the groans that rend
his breast?

That sacred hour can I forget,
Can I forget the hallow'd grove,
Where by the winding Ayr we met,
To live one day of parting love!
Eternity will not efface
Those records dear of transports
Thy image at our last embrace,
Ah! little thought we 'twas our last!

Ayr, gurgling, kiss'd his pebbled shore,
O'erhung with wild woods, thick'n'ing green,
The fragrant birch, and Hawthorn hoar,
Twined amorous round the raptured scene;
The flowers sprang wanton to be prest,
The birds sang love on every spray—
Till too, too soon, the glowing west
Proclaim'd the speed of wing'd day.

Still o'er these scenes my memory wakes,
And fondly broods with miser care!
Time but the impression stronger makes,
As streams their channels deeper wear,
My Mary! dear departed shade!
Where is thy place of blissful rest!
See'st thou thy lover lowly laid?
Hearst thou the groans that rend
his breast?

THE LADIES BY THE BANKS OF NITH.

TUNE—"Up and waur them a'."

The following ballad originated in a contest for the representation of the Dumfries burghs, which took place in September, 1789, between the former member, Sir James Johnston of Westerhall, who was supported by the court and the Tories, and Captain Miller of Dalswinton, the eldest son of the poet's landlord, who had the interest of the Duke of Queensberry and the Whigs. As Burns had the warmest veneration for individuals of both parties, he wished to avoid taking any active part on either side, and contented himself therefore with penning this piece chiefly against the Duke of Queensberry, the largest landed proprietor in Nithsdale, and for whose character he seems to have entertained the utmost detestation. The allusion in the first verse is to the vote his Grace gave on the regency question, when he deserted the king, his master, in whose household he held office, and supported the right of the Prince of Wales to assume the government without the consent of Parliament.

THE FIVE CARLINES.

TUNE—"Chevy-chase."

This is another ballad which the poet penned on the contested election mentioned above.
It represents the five burghs in cleverly-drawn figurative characters—Dumfries, as Maggy on the banks of Nith; Annan, as Blinkin Bess of Annan 'side; Kirkcudbright, as Whisky Jean of Galloway; Sanquhar, as Black Joan frae Crichton Peel; and Lochmaben, as Marjory of the Many Lochs—each of which is more or less locally appropriate.

There were five carlines\(^1\) in the south,
They fell upon a scheme,
To send a lad to Lon' on town,
To bring them tidings hame.

Not only bring them tidings hame,
But do their errands there;
And aiblins\(^2\) gowd and honour baith
Might be that laddie's share.

There was Maggy by the banks o' Nith,
A dame wi' pride enough;

And Marjory of the Mony Lochs,
A carline aud and tough,
And Blinkin Bess of Annandale,
That dwelt near Solway-side,
And Whisky Jean, that took her gill
In Galloway sae wide.

And Black Joan, frae Crichton Peel,
O' gipsy kith and kin;—
Five wighter\(^3\) carlines were na foun'
The south countrie within.

To send a lad to Lon' on town,
They met upon a day;
And mony a knight, and mony a laird,
Their errand fain wad gae.

Oh, mony a knight, and mony a laird,
This errand fain wad gae;
But nae ane could their fancy please,
Oh, ne'er ane but twae.

The first he was a belted knight,*
Bred o' a Border clan;
And he wad gae to Lon' on town,
Might nae man him withstan';

And he wad do their errands weil,
And meikle he wad say;
And ilk ane at Lon' on court
Wad bid to him guid day.

Then neist cam in a sodger youth,†
And spak wi' modest grace,
And he wad gae to Lon' on town,
If sae their pleasure was.

He wadna hecht\(^4\) them courtly gifts,
Nor meikle speech pretend;
But he wad hecht an honest heart
Wad ne'er desert his friend.

Now, wham to choose, and wham re fuse,
At strife thir carlines fell;
For some had gentlefolks to please,
And some wad please themsel.

Then out spak mim-mou'd\(^5\) Meg o' Nith,
And she spak up wi' pride,
And she wad send the sodger youth,
Whatever might betide.

For the auld guidman† o’ Lon’on court
She didna care a pin;
But she wad send a sodger youth
To greet his eldest son.§

Then up sprang Bess of Annandale,
And swore a deadly aith,
Says, “I will send the Border knight
Spite o’ you carlines bairth.

“For far-off fowls hae feathers fair,
And fools o’ change are fain;
But I hae tried this Border knigh’
And I’ll try him yet again.”

Then Whisky Jean spak owre her drink,
“Ye weel ken, kimmers a’,
The auld guidman o’ Lon’on court,
His back’s been at the wa’.

“And mony a friend that kiss’d his cup
Is now a frenit² wight,
But it’s ne’er be said o’ Whisky Jean,
I’ll send the Border knight.”

Says Black Joan frae Crichton Peel,
A carline stoor ⁷ and grim,—
“The auld guidman, and the young guidman,
For me may sink or swim;
“For fools will prate o’ right and wrang,
While knaves laugh in their sleeve;
But wha blows best the horn shall win,
I’ll spier nae courtier’s leave.”

Then slow raise Marjory o’ the Lochs,
And wrinkled was her brow,
Her ancient weed was russet gray,
Her auld Scots bluid was true.

“The Lon’on court set light by me—
I set as light by them;
And I will send the sodger lad
To shaw that court the same.”

Sae how this weighty plea may end,
Nae mortal wight can tell:
God grant the king, and ilka man,
May look weel to himsel’!

THE BLUE-EYED LASSIE.

Air—“The Blue-eyed Lass.”
The “Blue-Eyed Lassie” was Miss Jean Jeffrey, daughter of the Rev. Mr. Jeffrey of Lochmaben, in Dumfriesshire, at whose house the poet was a frequent visitor. On the occasion of his first visit, the young lady, then a charming, blue-eyed creature of eighteen, did the honours of the table, and so pleased the poet, that next morning at breakfast he presented her with the following passport to fame, in the form of one of his finest songs. Miss Jeffrey afterwards went out to New York, where she married an American gentleman of the name of Renwick, to whom she bore a numerous family. One of her daughters became the wife of Captain Wilks, of the United States Navy.

I GAED a waefu’ gate ¹ yestreen,
A gate, I fear, I’ll dearly rue;
I gat my death frae twa sweet een,
Twa lovely een o’ bonny blue.

’Twas not her golden ringlets bright;
Her lips like roses wat wi’ dew;
Her heavin bosom, lily-white—
It was her een sae bonny blue.

She talk’d, she smiled, my heart she wiled;
She charm’d my soul—I wist na’
And aye the stound,² the deadly wound,
Cam frae her een sae bonny blue.

But spare to speak, and spare to speed,³
She’ll aiblins ⁴ listen to my vow:
Should she refuse, I’ll lay my dead⁴
To her twa een sae bonny blue.

WHEN FIRST I SAW FAIR
JEANIE’S FACE.

Air—“Maggie Lauder.”

This song first appeared in the New York Mirror in 1846, with the following notice of the heroine, Mrs. Renwick (née Miss Jean Jeffrey) mentioned above:—“The lady to whom the following verses—never before published—were addressed, known to the readers of Burns as the ‘Blue-eyed Lassie,’ is one of a race whose beauties and virtues formed for several generations, the inspira—tion of the masters of Scottish song. Her mother was Agnes Armstrong, in whose honour the touching words and beautiful air of 'Roslin Castle' were composed.

WHEN first I saw fair Jeanie's face,
I couldna tell what a' il'd me,
My heart went fluttering pit-a-pat,
My een they almost fall'd me.
She's aye sae neat, sae trim, sae tight,
All grace does round her hover,
Ae look deprived me o' my heart,
And I became a lover.
She's aye, aye sae blithe, sae gay,
She's aye so blithe and chearie;
She's aye sae bonny, blithe, and gay,
Oh, gin I were her dearie!

Had I Dunbas' whole estate,
Or Hopetoun's wealth to shine in;
Did warlike laurels crown my brow,
Or humber bays entwining—
I'd laid them a' at Jeannie's feet,
Could I but hope to move her,
And pronder than a belted knight,
I'd be my Jeannie's lover.

She's aye, aye sae blithe, &c.

But sair I fear some happier swain
Has gained sweet Jeannie's favour:
If so, may every bliss be hers,
Though I man never have her;
But gang she cast, or gang she west,
'Twixt Forth and Tweed all over,
While men have eyes, or ears or taste,
She'll always find a lover.

She's aye, aye see blithe, &c.

MY LOVELY NANCY.

TUNE—"The Quaker's Wife."

The following song," says the poet, in a letter to Clarinda, to whose charms, proba-ably, we owe the lines, "is one of my latest productions; and I send it to you as I would do anything else, because it pleases myself;"—

THINE am I, my faithful fair,
Thine, my lovely Nancy;
Every pulse along my veins,
Every roving fancy.

To thy bosom lay my heart,
There to throb and languish;
Though despair had wrung its core,
That would heal its anguish.

Take away these rosy lips,
Rich with balmy treasure;
Turn away thine eyes of love,
Lest I die with pleasure.

What is life when wanting love?
Night without a morning;
Love's the cloudless summer sun,
Nature gay adorning.

TIBBIE DUNBAR.
TUNE—"Johnny M'Gill."

Oh, wilt thou go wi' me, sweet Tibbie
Dunbar? [Dunbar?
Oh, wilt thou go wi' me, sweet Tibbie
Wilt thou ride on a horse, or be drawn in a car, [Dunbar?
Or walk by my side, oh, sweet Tibbie

I care na thy daddie, his lands and his money, [lordly:
I care na thy kin, sae high and sae
But say thou wilt hae me for better for waur— [Dunbar!
And come in thy coatie, sweet Tibbie

WHEN ROSY MAY COMES IN WI' FLOWERS.

TUNE—"The gardener wi' his paidle."

The poet afterwards produced a new version of this song, with a change in the burden at the end of the stanzas.

WHEN rosy May comes in wi'flowers,
To deck her gay green-spreading bow-
ers,
Then busy, busy, are his hours—
The gardener wi' his paidle.\(^1\)
The crystal waters gently fa'
The merry birds are lovers a';
The scented breezes round him blaw—
The gardener wi' his paidle.

When purple morning starts the hare
To steal upon her early fare, [pair—
Then through the dews he maun re-
The gardener wi' his paidle.
When day, expiring in the west,
The curtain draws of nature's rest,
He flies to her arms he lo'es the best—
The gardener wi' his paidle.

MY HARRY WAS A GALLANT GAY.

Tune—"Highlander’s Lament."

The chorus of this song, the poet tells us, he picked up from an old woman in Dunblane, the rest being his own. The old song was composed on a Highland love affair; but this version was evidently intended for a Jacobite melody.

My Harry was a gallant gay,
Fu’ stately strode he on the plain;
But now he’s banish’d far away,
I’ll never see him back again.

Oh, for him back again!
Oh, for him back again!
I wad gie a’ Knockhaspie’s land
For Highland Harry back again.

When a’ the lave gae to their bed,
I wander dowie up the glen;
I set me down and greet my fill,
And aye I wish him back again.

Oh, were some villains hangit high,
And ilka body had their ain!
Then I might see the joyfu’ sight,
My Highland Harry back again.

BEWARE O’ BONNY ANN.

Tune—"Ye gallants bright."

"I composed this song," says the poet, "out of compliment to Miss Ann Masterton, the daughter of my friend, Mr. Allan Masterton, composer of the air, ‘Strathallan’s Lament.’"

Ye gallants bright, I rede ye right,
Beware o’ bonny Ann;
Her comely face sae fu’ o’ grace,
Your heart she will trepan.
Her een sae bright, like stars by night,
Her skin is like the swan;
Sae jimpily laced her gentry waist,
That sweetly ye might span.

Youth, Grace, and Love, attendant move,
And Pleasure leads the van: [arms,
In a’ their charms, and conquering
They wait on bonny Ann.

The captive bands may chain the hands,
But love enslaves the man;
Ye gallants braw, I rede you a’,
Beware o’ bonny Ann!

JOHN ANDERSON, MY JO.

Tune—"John Anderson, my Jo."

John Anderson, my jo! John,
When we were first acquaint;
Your locks were like the raven,
Your bonny brow was brett.
But now your brow is beld, John,
Your locks are like the swan;
But blessings on your frosty pow,
John Anderson, my jo.

John Anderson, my jo, John,
We clamb the hill thegither;
And mony a canty day, John,
We’ve had wi’ ane anither:
Now we mann totter down, John,
But hand in hand we’ll go;
And sleep thegither at the foot,
John Anderson, my jo.

THE BATTLE OF SHERIFF-MUIR.

Tune—"Cameronian Rant."

"O hie com ye here the fight to shun,
Or herd the sheep wi’ me, man?
Or were ye at the Sherra-muir,
And did the battle see man?"

"I saw the battle sair and tough,
And reekin’ red ran mony a sheugh;
My heart, for fear, gaed sough for sough,
To hear the thuds, and see the cluds,
O’ clans frae woods, in tartan duds,
Wha glaum’d at kingdoms three man.

"The red-coat lads, wi’ black cockades,
To meet them werna slaw, man:
They rush’d and push’d, and bluid out-gush’d,
And mony a bouk’d did fa’, man:
The great Argyle led on his files,
I wit they glanced for twenty miles,

"But had ye seen the philabegs, And skyrin' tartan trews, man;
When in the teeth they dared our Whigs
And covenant true-blues, man;
In lines extended lang and large,
When bayonets o'erpower'd the targe,
And thousands hasten'd to the charge,
Wi' Highland wrath they frae the sheath
Drew blades o' death, till out o' breath,
They fled like frightened doos,  man."

"Oh, how deil, Tam, can that be true? The chase gaed frae the north, man;
I saw mysel they did pursue
The horsemen back to Forth, man:
And at Dunblane, in my ain sight,
They took the brig wi' a' their might,
And straught to Stirling wing'd their flight;
But, cursed lot! the gates were shut;
And mony a huntit, poor red-coat,
For fear amaist did swar,  man!

"My sister Kate cam up the gate
Wi' crowdie unto me, man;
She swore she saw some rebels run
Frac Perth unto Dundee, man:
Their left-hand general had nae skill,
The Angus lads had nae good will
That day their neighbors' blood to spill;
For fear by foes that they should lose
Their cogs o' brose, they seared at blows,
And hameward fast did flee, man.

"They've lost some gallant gentlemen
Amang the Highland clans, man;
I fear my Lord Panmure is slain,
Or fallen in Whiggish hands, man:
Now wad ye sing this double fight,
Some fell for wrang, and some for right;
And mony bade the world guid-night;
Then ye may tell how pell and mel.
By red claymores, and muskets' knell,
Wi' dying yell, the Tories fell,
And Whigs to hell did flee, man.

MY HEART'S IN THE HIGHLANDS.

Tune—"Faille na Miosg."

"The first half stanza of this song," says Burns, "is old; the rest is mine."

My heart's in the Highlands, my heart is not here; [the deer;
My heart's in the Highlands, a-chasing
A-chasing the wild deer, and following the roe—[I go.
My heart's in the Highlands wherever

Farewell to the Highlands, farewell to the North, [of worth:
The birthplace of valour, the country
Wherever I wander, wherever I rove,
The hills of the Highlands forever I love.

Farewell to the mountains high cover'd with snow; [leys below;
Farewell to the straths and green val-
Farewell to the forests and wild-hang-

THE BANKS OF NITH.
TUNE—" Robie donna Gorach."
THE Thames flows proudly to the sea,
Where royal cities stately stand;
But sweeter flows the Nith, to me,
Where Cummins* ane had high command:
When shall I see that honour'd land,
That winding stream I love so dear!
Must wayward Fortune's adverse hand
Forever, ever keep me here?

How lovely, Nith, thy fruitful vales,
Where spreading hawthorns gayly bloom!
How sweetly wind thy sloping dales,
Where lambkins wanton through the broom! [doo,
Though wandering, now, must be my
Far from thy bonny banks and braes,
May there my latest hours consume,
Amang the friends of early days!

To anger them a' is a pity,
But what will I do wi' Tam Glen?

I'm thinking, wi' sic a braw fallow,
In poornith I might mak a fen;2
What care I in riches to wallow,
If I mauna marry Tam Glen?

There's Lowrie the Laird o' Drumeller,
"Guid day to you brute!" he comes ben,
He brags and blasph o' his siller,
But when will he dance like Tam
Glen?

My minnie3 does constantly deave me,
And bids me beware o' young men;
They flatter, she says, to deceive me,
But wha can think sae o' Tam Glen?

My daddie says, gin I'll forsake him,
He'll gie me guid hunder marks ten;
But if it's ordain'd I maun take him,
Oh, wha will I get but Tam Glen?

Yestreen at the valentines' dealing,
My heart to my mou' gied a sten;4
For thrice I drew ane without failing,
And thrice it was written—Tam
Glen!

The last Halloween I lay waukin'5
My droukit6 sark-sleeve, as ye ken;7
His likeness came up the housestankin',
And the very gray breeks o' Tam
Glen!

Come counsel, dear tittie! dont tarry—
I'll gie ye my bonny black hen,
Gif ye will advise me to marry
The lad I lo'e dearly—Tam Glen.

OUR THRISSES FLOURISHED FRESH AND FAIR.

TUNE—"Awa', Whigs, awa'."
The second and fourth stanzas only of this song are from the pen of the poet: the others belong to an old Jacobite ditty.

Our thrisses flourish'd fresh and fair, And bonny bloom'd our roses; But Whigs cam like a frost in June, And wither'd a' our posies.
Awa', Whigs, awa'! Awa', Whigs, awa'! Ye're but a pack o' traitor loun's, Ye'll do nae guid at a'.
Our ancient crown's fa'n in the dust— Deil blin' them wi' the-stoure o't; And write their names in his black beuk Wha gie the Whigs the power o't;
Our sad decay in Church and State Surpasses my describing; The Whigs cam o'er us for a curse, And we hae done wi' thriving.

And laugh and answer’d ready,
I learn’d a sang in Annandale,
A dark man for my lady.

But for a country queen like thee,
Young lass, I tell thee fairly,
That wi’ the white I’ve made a shift,

WHISTLE O'ER THE LAVE O'T.

TUNE—"Whistle o'er the lave o't."

First when Maggy was my care,
Heaven, I thought, was in her air;
Now we're married—spier nae mair—
Whistle o'er the lave o't.—

Meg was meek, and Meg was nae mair,
Bonny Meg was nature's child;
Wiser men than me's beguiled—
Whistle o'er the lave o't.

Women's MINDS.
Tune—"For a' that."
Though women's minds, like winter winds,
May shift and turn and a' that,
The noblest breast adores them maist,
A consequence I draw that.

For a' that, and a' that,
And twice as muckle's a' that,
The bonny lass that I lo'e best
She'll be my ain for a' that.

Great love I bear to all the fair,
Their humble slave, and a' that;
But lordly will, I hold it still,
A mortal sin to throw that.

But there is ane aboon the lave,1
Has wit, and sense, and a' that;
A bonny lass, I like her best,
And wha a crime dare ca' that?

It is na, Jean, thy bonny face.
Tune—"The Maid's Complaint."
It is na, Jean, thy bonny face,
Nor shape, that I admire,

Although thy beauty and thy grace
Might weel awake desire.
Something, in ilka part o' thee,
To praise, to love, I find;
But, dear as is thy form to me,
Still dearer is thy mind.

Nae mair ungenerous wish I hae,
No stronger in my breast,
Than if I cauna mak thee sae,
At least to see thee blest.
Content am I, if Heaven shall give
But happiness to thee;
And, as wi' thee I'd wish to live,
For thee I'd bear to die.

My love she's but a lassie yet.
Tune—"Lady Badinschoth's Reel."
My love she's but a lassie yet,
My love she's but a lassie yet;
We'll let her stand a year or twa,
She'll no be half sae saucy yet.
I rue the day I sought her, O,
I rue the day I sought her, O;
Wha gets her needna say she's woo'd;
But he may say he's bought her, O!

Come, draw a drap o' the best o't yet;
Come draw a drap o' the best o't yet;
Gae seek for pleasure where ye will,
But here I never miss'd it yet.
We're a' dry wi' drinking o't;
We're a' dry wi' drinking o't;
The minister kiss'd the fiddler's wife,
And couldna preach for thinkin' o't.

Ca' the ewes.
Tune—"Ca' the Ewes to the Knowés."
The fourth and fifth stanzas of this song, which was written for the Museum, are old, with a few touches of improvement by Burns. He afterwards wrote a much better version for Thomson's collection, which will be found at p. 263.

As I gaed down the water-side,
There I met my shepherd lad,
He row'd me sweetly in his plaid,
And ca'd me his dearie.
Ca’ the ewes to the knowes,
Ca’ them whare the heather grows,
Ca’ them whare the burnie rowes,
My bonny dearie!

Will ye gang down the water-side,
And see the waves sae sweetly glide?
Beneath the hazels spreading wide
The moon it shines fu’ clearly.

I was bred up at nae sic school,
My shepherd lad, to play the fool,
And a’ the day to sit in dool,
And naebody to see me.

Ye sall get gowns and ribbons meet,
Cauf-leather shoon upon your feet,
And in my arms ye’se lie and sleep,
And ye sall be my dearie.

If ye’ll but stand to what ye’ve said,
I se gang wi’ you, my shepherd lad,
And ye may rowe me in your plaid,
And I sall be your dearie.

While waters wimple to the sea:
While day blinks in the lift sae hie;
Till clay-cauld death sall blin’ my ee,
Ye sall be my dearie.

SIMMER’S A PLEASANT TIME.

TUNE—“Aye Waukin, O.”

This is an old song, on which the poet appears to have made only a few alterations.

SIMMER’s a pleasant time,
Flowers of every colour;
The water rins o’er the heugh,
And I long for my true lover.

A waukin, O,
Waukin still and wearie:
Sleep I can get nane
For thinking on my dearie.

When I sleep I dream,
When I waak I’m eerie;
Sleep I can get nane
For thinking on my dearie.

Lonely night comes on,
A’ the lave are sleepin’;
I think on my bonny lad,
And I bleer my een with greetin’.

THERE’LL NEVER BE PEACE TILL JAMIE COMES HAME.

TUNE—“There are few guid fellows when Willie’s awa.’”

“When political combustion,” says the poet, in a letter to Thomson, enclosing this song, which had evidently been composed while in a Jacobitical mood, “ceases to be the object of princes and patriots, it then, you know, becomes the lawful prey of historians and poets.”

By you castle wa’, at the close of the day,

LOVELY DAVIES.

TUNE—“Miss Muir.”

The heroine of this song was Miss Deborah Davies, a beautiful young Englishwoman, connected by ties of blood with the family of Captain Riddel of Glenriddel, at whose house the poet probably first met her. Her beauty and accomplishments appear to have made a deep impression upon the poet, for he has celebrated them in a number of effusions in both prose and verse. In a letter to her enclosing this song, he says, in a strain of enthusiastic gallantry:—“When my theme is youth and beauty—a young lady whose personal charms, wit, and sentiment, are equally striking and unaffected—by Heavens! though I had lived threescore years a married man, and threescore years before I was a married man, my

1 Weep.  2 Churchyard.  3 Lost. imagination would hallow the very idea; and I am truly sorry that the enclosed stanzas have done such poor justice to such a subject.”

Oh, how shall I unskilfu’ try
The poet’s occupation,
The tuneful powers, in happy hours,
That whisper inspiration?
Even they maun dare an effort mair
Than aught they ever gave us,
Or they rehearse, in equal verse,
The charms o’ lovely Davies.

Each eye it cheers, when she appears,
Like Phoebus in the morning, the
When past the shower and every flow,
The garden is adorning.
As the wretch looks o’er Siberia’s
When winter-bound the wave is;
Sae droops our heart when we maun part
Frae charming, lovely Davies.

Her smile’s a gift, frae ‘boon the lift,
That makes us mair than princes;
A sceptred hand, a king’s command,
Is in her darting glances: [charms,
The man in arms, ’gainst female
Even he her willing slave is;
He hugs his chain, and owns the reign
Of conquering, lovely Davies.

My Muse, to dream of such a theme,
Her feeble powers surrender;
The eagle’s gaze alone surveys
The sun’s meridian splendour:
I wad in vain essay the strain,
The deed too daring brave is;
I’ll drop the lyre, and mute admire
The charms o’ lovely Davies.

THE BONNY WEE THING.

TUNE—“Bonny wee Thing.”

This is another, though briefer and more sentimental, song in celebration of the lady mentioned above—“The charming, lovely Davies.”

BONNY wee thing, cannie wee thing,
Lovely wee thing, wert thou mine,
I wad wear thee in my bosom,
Lest my jewel I should tine.1

Wishfully I look and languish
In that bonny face o’ thine;
And my heart it stounds2 wi’ anguish,
Lest my wee thing be na mine.

Wit, and grace, and love, and beauty,
In ae constellation shine;
To adore thee is my duty,
Goddess o’ this soul o’ mine!
Bonny wee thing, cannie wee thing,
Lovely wee thing, wert thou mine,
I wad wear thee in my bosom,
Lest my jewel I should tine!

WAR SONG.

Air—“Oran an Doig;” or, “The Song of Death.”

“I have just finished,” says the poet, in a letter to Mrs. Dunlop, enclosing this noble lyric, “the following song, which, to a lady, the descendant of Wallace, and herself the mother of several soldiers, needs neither preface nor apology.” The subject, the poet tells us, was suggested to him by an Isie-of-Skye tune entitled, “Oran an Doig;” or, “The Song of Death,” which he found in a collection of Highland airs, and to the measure of which he adapted his stanzas.

Scene—A field of battle—Time of the day,
Evening—The wounded and dying of the victorious army are supposed to join in the following song:

FAREWELL, thou fair day, thou green earth, and ye skies,
Now gay with the broad setting sun!
Farewell loves and friendships, ye dear tender ties!
Our race of existence is run!

Thou grim King of Terrors, thou life’s gloomy foe!
Go, frighten the coward and slave!
Go teach them to tremble, fell tyrant!
but know,
No terrors hast thou to the brave!

Thou strik’st the dull peasant,—he sinks in the dark, [name;—
Nor saves e’en the wreck of a Thou strik’st the young hero—a glorious mark!
He falls in the blaze of his fame!

AE FOND KISS.

TUNE—“Rory Dall’s Port.”

This exquisitely beautiful song sprang from the depth of the poet’s passion for Clarinda; and is one of the most vehement and impressive outbursts of intense feeling ever written.

AE fond kiss, and then we sever; Ae farewell, and then, forever! Deep in heart-wrung tears I’ll pledge thee, Warring sighs and groans I’ll wage

Who shall say that Fortune grieves him,
While the star of hope she leaves him? Me, nae cheerfu’ twinkle lights me; Dark despair around benights me.

I’ll ne’er blame my partial fancy, Naething could resist my Nancy; But to see her was to love her; Love but her, and love forever.

Had we never loved sae kindly, Had we never loved sae blindly, Never met—or never parted, We had ne’er been broken-hearted.

Fare-thee-weel, thou first and fairest! Fare-thee-weel, thou best and dearest! Thine be ilk joy and treasure, Peace, Enjoyment, Love, and Pleasure!

Ae fond kiss, and then we sever; Ae farewell, alas! forever! Deep in heart-wrung tears I’ll pledge thee, Warring sighs and groans I’ll wage

GLOOMY DECEMBER.

TUNE—“Wandering Willie.”

The last interview of the poet with Clarinda took place in Edinburgh on the 6th of December, 1791, and appears to have been deeply affecting on both sides. In remembrance of this meeting, and while still under the influence of the feelings evoked by it, the poet composed these beautiful lines:

ANCE mair I hail thee, thou gloomy December! [care; Ance mair I hail the, wi’ sorrow and Sad was the parting thou makes me remember, [mair.

Parting wi’ Nancy, oh! ne’er to meet Fond lovers’ parting is sweet painful pleasure, [ing hour; Hope beaming mild on the soft part— But the dire feeling, oh, farewell forever! [pure. Is anguish unmingled, and agony Wild as the winter now tearing the forest, [down; Till the last leaf o’ the summer is Such is the tempest has shaken my bosom, [is gone! Since my last hope and last comfort Still as I hail thee, thou gloomy December, [care; Still shall I hail thee wi’ sorrow and For sad was the parting thou makes me remember, [mair.

Parting wi’ Nancy, oh! ne’er to meet

BEHOLD THE HOUR.

TUNE—“Oran Gaoil.”

A month after the interview mentioned in the introduction to the preceding song—on the 25th of January, 1792—Clarinda, in anticipation of her immediate departure for Jamaica to join her husband, wrote to the poet bidding him farewell. “Seek God’s favour,” she says; “keep His commandments—be solicitous to prepare for a happy eternity. There, I trust, we will meet in never-ending bliss!” She sailed a month afterwards; and the poet poured his feelings on the occasion into the following fine song:

BEHOLD the hour, the boat arrive,
Thou goest, thou darling of my heart!
Sever’d from thee can I survive?
But Fate has will’d, and we must part.

I’ll often greet this surging swell,
Yon distant isle will often hail:
"E'en here I took the last farewell;
There latest mark'd her vanish'd sail!"*

Along the solitary shore,
While flitting sea-fowl round me cry,
Across the rolling dashing roar,
I'll westward turn my wistful eye.

Happy, thou Indian grove, I'll say,
Where now my Nannie's path may be!
While through thy sweets she loves to stray,
Oh, tell me, does she muse on me?

THE MIRK NIGHT O' DECEMBER.
Tune—"O May, thy morn."

The following song, the production of a lighter mood, is also said to have been written in commemoration of the final meeting with Clarinda:—

O May, thy morn was ne'er sae sweet,
As the mirk night o' December;
For sparkling was the rosy wine,
And private was the chamber:
And dear was she I darena name,
But I will aye remember.
And dear was she I darena name,
But I will aye remember.

And here's to them that, like oursel,
Can push about the jorum;
And here's to them that wish us weel,
May a' that's guid watch o'er them!
And here's to them we darena tell,
The dearest o' the quorum.
And here's to them we darena tell,
The dearest o' the quorum!

MY NANNIE'S AWA'.
Tune—"There'll never be peace."

Some months after the departure of Clarinda, when time had mellowed the poet's passion,

* The above two stanzas of this song are given by Chambers as follows:—
Behold the hour, the boat arrive!
My dearest Nancy, oh, fareweel!
Sever'd frae thee, can I survive,
Frae thee whom I hae loved sae weel?
Endless and deep shall be my grief;
Nae ray o' comfort shall I see;
But this most precious, dear belief!
That thou wilt still remember me, and absence calmed the tumult of his feelings, he wrote the following touching pastoral:—

Now in her green mantle blithe nature arrays,
[O'er the braes,
And listens the lambs that bleat
While birds warble welcome in ilk green shaw;]{Nannie's awa'}!
But to me it's delightless—my

The snaw-drap and primrose our woodlands adorn, [Primrose;
And violnets bathe in the weet{Dew} o' the
They pain my sad bosom, sae sweetly they blaw, {Nannie's awa'}!
They mind me o' Nannie—and

Thou laverock that springs frae the dews of the lawn,
The shepherd to warn o' the gray
breaking dawn,

And thou mellow mavis that hails the
Give over for pity—my Nannie's awa'!

Come, Autumn sae pensive, in yellow and gray,

And soothe me with tidings o' Nature's
The dark dreary winter, and wild driving swan,

WANDERING WILLIE.

In composing this song, Burns is thought to have thrown himself sympathetically into the circumstances of his mistress—Clarinda—and to have given expression to the feelings with which he supposed her to be animated in seeking, after a separation of many years, a reunion with her wayward, wandering husband. The idea of this song appears to have been taken from an old one, of which the two following verses have been preserved:—

"Here awa', there awa', here awa', Willie,
Here awa', there awa', here awa' hame;
Long have I sought thee, dear have I bought thee,
Now I hae gotten my Willie again.

"Through the lang muir I have follow'd my Willie,
Through the lang muir I have follow'd him hame;
Whatever betide us, nought shall divide us,
Love now, rewards all my sorrow and pain."
Here awa', there awa', wandering Willie,
Here awa', there awa', haud awa',
Come to my bosom, my ain only dearie,
Tell me thou bring'st me my Willie
the same.

Winter winds blow loud and cauld at
our parting, [in my ec;
Fears for my Willie brought tears
Welcome now simmer, and welcome
my Willie— [to me.
The simmer to nature, my Willie
Rest, ye wild storms, in the cave of your slumbers, [alarms!
How your dread howling a lover
Wauken, ye breezes! row gently, ye billows! [to my arms!
And waft my dear laddie ance mair

But oh, if he's faithless, and minds na
his Nannie, [roaring main!
Flow still between us thou wide
May I never see it, may I never trow it;
But, dying, believe that my Willie's

TUNE—"The deil cam fiddling through the town."

The deil cam fiddling through the town,
And danced awa' wi' the Exciseman,
And ilka wife cries—"Auld Mahoun,
I wish you luck o' the prize, man!"

The deil's awa', the deil's awa',
The deil's awa' wi' the Exciseman;

That danced awa' wi' the Exciseman.

The deil's awa', the deil's awa',
The deil's awa' wi' the Exciseman;
He's danced awa', he's danced awa',
He's danced awa' wi' the Exciseman!

There's threesome reels, there's foursome reels, [man;
There's hornpipes and strathspeys,
But the ae best dance e'er cam to the land, [man
Was—the deil's awa' wi' the Excise-
man.

The deil's awa', the deil's awa',
The deil's awa' wi' the Exciseman;
He's danced awa', he's danced awa',
He's danced awa' wi' the Exciseman!

BONNY LESLEY.

The poet in a letter to Mrs. Dunlop, gives the following account of the origin of this song: —
"Apropos!—do you know that I am almost in love with an acquaintance of yours? Know, then," said he, "that the heart-struck awe, the distant humble approach, the delight we should have in listening upon and listening to a messenger of Heaven, appearing in all the unpolluted yearning to, among the coarse, polluted, far inferior sons of men, to deliver to them tidings that should make their hearts swim in joy, and their imaginations soar in transport,—such, so delightful and and so pure, were the emotions of my soul of meeting the other day with Miss Lesley
Bailie, your neighbour at Mayfield. Mr.
Bailie, with his two daughters, accompanied by Mr. H. of G., passing through Dumfries a few days ago, on their way to England, did me the honour of calling on me, on which I took my horse, (though God knows
I could ill spare the time,) and accompanied them fourteen or fifteen miles, and dined and spent the day with them. 'Twas about ine, I think, when I left them; and riding home, I composed the following ballad.
You must know that there is an old one beginning with—

'My bonny Lizzie Bailie,
I'll rowe thee in my plaidie, &c.
So I parodied it as follows," Miss Bailie ultimately became Mrs. Cumming of Logie, and died in Edinburg in 1843.

Oot, saw ye bonny Lesley
As she gaed o'er the Border?
She's gane like Alexander,
To spread her conquests farther.

To see her is to love her,
And love but her forever;
For Nature made her what she is
And never made anither!

Here awa', there awa', wandering Willie,
Here awa', there awa', haud awa',
Come to my bosom, my ain only dearie,
Tell me thou bring'st me my Willie
the same.

Winter winds blow loud and cauld at
our parting, [in my ec;
Fears for my Willie brought tears
Welcome now simmer, and welcome
my Willie— [to me.
The simmer to nature, my Willie
Rest, ye wild storms, in the cave of
your slumbers, [alarms!
How your dread howling a lover
Wauken, ye breezes! row gently, ye

And waft my dear laddie ance mair

But oh, if he's faithless, and minds na

May I never see it, may I never trow it;
But, dying, believe that my Willie's

And danced awa' wi' the Exciseman,
And ilka wife cries—"Auld Mahoun,

The deil's awa', the deil's awa',
The deil's awa' wi' the Exciseman;

Thou art a queen, fair Lesley,
Thy subjects we, before thee;
Thou art divine, fair Lesley,
The hearts o' men adore thee.

The devil he couldn't skaith\(^1\) thee,
Nor aught that wad belong thee;
He'd look into thy bonny face,
And say, "I canna wrang thee."

The powers aboon will tent\(^2\) thee;
Misfortune shah' na steer thee;
Thou'rt like themselves sae lovely,
That ill they'll ne'er let near thee.

Return again, fair Lesley,
Return to Caledonie!
That we may brag we hae a lass
There's nane again sae bonny.

CRAIGIE-BURN WOOD.

The poet composed the following song to aid the eloquence of a Mr. Gillespie, a friend of his, who was paying his addresses to a Miss Lorimer, a young lady who resided at a beautiful place on the banks of the Moffat, called Craigie-burn Wood.

_Sweet_ closes the evening on Craigie-burn Wood,
And blithely awakens the morrow;
But the pride of the spring in the Craigie-burn Wood
Can yield to me nothing but sorrow.

Beyond thee, dearie, beyond thee,
dearie,
And oh! to be lying beyond thee;
Oh, sweetly, soundly, weel may he sleep
That's laid in the bed beyond thee!

I see the spreading leaves and flowers,
I hear the wild birds singing;
But pleasure they hae nane for me,
While care my heart is wringing.

I canna tell, I maunna tell,
I dared for your anger;
But secret love will break my heart,
If I conceal it langer.

I see thee grace'fu', straight, and tall;
I see thee sweet and bonny;
But oh, what will my torments be,
If thou refuse thy Johnnie!

To see thee in another's arms,
In love to lie and languish,
'Twad be my dead,\(^1\) that will be seen,
My heart wad burst wi' anguish.

But, Jeanie, say thou wilt be mine,
Say thou lo'es nane before me;
And a' my days o' life to come
I'll gratefully adore thee.

---

SECOND VERSION.

Sweet fa's the eve on Craigie-burn,
And blithe awakens the morrow;
But a' the pride o' spring's return
Can yield me nought but sorrow.

I see the flowers and spreading trees,
I hear the wild birds singing;
But what a weary wight can please,
And care his bosom wringing?

Fain, fain would I my griefs impart,
Yet dare na for your anger;
But secret love will break my heart,
If I conceal it langer.

If thou refuse to pity me,
If thou shalt love another,
When yon green leaves fade frae the tree,
Around my grave they'll wither.

FRAE THE FRIENDS AND LAND I LOVE.

Air—"Carron Side."

In his notes to the _Museum_, the poet says of this song:—"I added the last four lines by way of giving a turn to the theme of the poem—such as it is." The entire song, however, was in his own handwriting, and is generally thought to be his own composition, as the other twelve lines have not been found in any collection.

I DO CONFESS THOU ART SAE FAIR.

TUNE—"I do confess thou art sae fair."

This song was altered by the poet into Scotch, from a poem by Sir Robert Ayton, private secretary to Anne, consort of James VI. "I think," says Burns, "that I have improved the simplicity of the sentiments by giving them a Scots dress." *

I do confess thou art sae fair.
I wud been owr, the lugs in luve,
Had I na found the slightest prayer
That lips could speak thy heart could move.
I do confess thee sweet, but find
Thou art sae thriftless o' thy sweets,
Thy favours are the silly wind,
That kisses like a thing it meets.

See yonder rosebud, rich in dew,
Amang its native briers sae coy;
How sure it tines its scent and hue
When pu'd and worn a common toy!
Sic fate, ere lang, shall thee betide,
Though thou may gayly bloom a while;
Yet sure thou shalt be thrown aside
Like ony common weed and vile.

The scented birk and hawthorn white,
Across the pool their arms unite,
Alike to screen the birdies' nest,
And little fishes' caller5 rest;

Where blithe I turn my spinning-wheel.

NITHSDALE'S WELCOME HAME.

This song was written to celebrate the return to Scotland of Lady Winifred Maxwell, a descendant of the attainted Earl of Nithsdale. The music to which the poet composed the verses was by Captain Riddell of Glenriddel.

The noble Maxwells and their powers
Are coming o'er the Border,
And they'll gae big Terregle's towers,
And set them a' in order.
And they declare Terregle's fair,
For their abode they choose it;
There's no a heart in a' the land
But's lighter at the news o't.

Though stars in skies may disappear,
And angry tempests gather;
The happy hour may soon be near
That brings us pleasant weather
The weary night o' care and grief
May hae a joyful' morrow;
So dawning day has brought relief—
Fareweel our night o' sorrow!

A hungry care's an unco care:
And willfu' folk maun hae their will;
Syne⁶ as ye brew, my maiden fair,
Keep mind that ye maun drink the yill."

"Oh, gear will buy me rigs o' land,
And gear will buy me sheep and kye;
But the tender heart o' leesome⁷ luve
The gowd and siller canna buy;
We may be poor—Robbie and I,
Light is the burden luve lays on;
Content and luve bring peace and joy—
What mair hae queens upon a throne?"

FAIR ELIZA.

TURN again, thou fair Eliza,
Ae kind blink before we part,
Rue on thy despairing lover!
Canst thou break his faithful heart?
Turn again, thou fair Eliza;
If to love thy heart denies,
For pity hide the cruel sentence
Under friendship's kind disguise!

Thee, dear maid, hae I offended?
The offence is loving thee:
Canst thou wreck his peace forever
Wha for thine war gladly die?
While the life beats in my bosom,
Thou shalt mix in ilka throe;
Turn again, thou lovely maiden,
Ae sweet smile on me bestow.

Not the bee upon the blossom,
In the pride o' sunny noon;
Not the little sporting fairy.
All beneath the simmer moon:

¹ Sheltered place. ² Shed. ³ Age. ⁴ Wisely choose. ⁵ A home with plenty in it. ⁶ Struggle. ⁷ Easiest way. ⁸ And. ⁹ Glad some.
Not the poet, in the moment
Fancy lightens in his ee,
Kens the pleasure, feels the rapture,
That thy presence gies to me.

OH, LUVE WILL VENTURE IN.

TUNE—"The Posie."

Oh, luve will venture in
Where it daurna weel be seen;
Oh, love will venture in Where wisdom ance has been;
But I will down yon river rove,
Amang the woods sae green—
And a' to pu' a posie
To my ain dear May.

The primrose I will pu',
The firstling of the year;
And I will pu' the pink,
The emblem o' my dear;
For she's the pink o' womankind,
And blooms without a peer—
And a' to be a posie
To my ain dear May.

I'll pu' the budding rose,
When Phæbus peeps in view,
For it's like a bauny kiss
O' her sweet, bonny mou';
The hyacinth's for constancy,
Wi' its unchanging blue—
And a' to be a posie
To my ain dear May.

The lily it is pure,
And the lily it is fair,
And in her lovely bosom
I'll place the lily there;
The daisy's for simplicity,
And unaffected air—
And a' to be a posie
To my ain dear May.

The hawthorn I will pu',
Wi' its locks o' siller gray,
Where, like an aged man,
It stands at break of day. [bush
But the songster's nest within the
I winna tak away—
And a' to be a posie
To my ain dear May.

The woodbine I will pu',
When the evening star is near.

And the diamond draps o' dew
Shall be her een sae clear;
The violet's for modesty,
Which weel she fa's to wear—
And a' to be a posie
To my ain dear May.

I'll tie the posie round
Wi' the silken band of love,
And I'll place it in her breast,
And I'll swear by a' above,
That to my latest draught o' life
The band shall ne'er remove—
And this will be a posie
To my ain dear May.

THE BANKS O' DOON.

TUNE—"Caledonian Hunt's Delight."

This is a second version of the song which the poet composed in 1787: and although greatly inferior in many respects to the first, it has almost entirely superseded it. For the subject of the song, see the first version, p. 203.

Ye banks and braes o' bonny Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair;
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary, fu' o' care!
Thou'll break my heart, thou warbling bird,
That wantons through the flowering
Thou minds me o' departed joys,
Departed—never to return!

Oft hae I roved by bonny Doon,
To see the rose and woodbine twine,
And ilk bird sang o' its luve.
And fondly sae did I o' mine.
Wi' lightsome heart I pu'd a rose,
Fu' sweet upon its thorny tree;
And my fause luver stole my rose.
But, ah! he left the thorn wi' me.

SIC A WIFE AS WILLIE HAD.

TUNE—"The Eight Men of Moidart."

Willie Wastle dwalt on Tweed,
The spot they ca'd it Linkum-doddie;
Willie was a weaber, 1 guid,
Could stown 2 a clue wi' ony bodie;
He had a wife was dour and din,
Oh, Tinkler Madgie was her mither;

1 Weaver.  2 Stolen.
Sic a wife as Willie had,
I wadna gie a button for her.

She has an ee—she has but ane,
The cat has twa the very colour;
Five rusty teeth, forby3 a stump,
A clapper-tongue wad deave a miller;
A whiskin' beard about her mou',
Her nose and chin they threaten ither—

Sic a wife as Willie had,
I wadna gie a button for her.

She’s bow-hough’d, she’s hein-shinn’d,
Ae limpin’ leg, a hand-breed shorter;
She’s twisted right, she’s twisted left,
To balance fair in ilka quarter:
She has a hump upon her breast,
The twin o’t that upon her shouther—

Sic a wife as Willie had,
I wadna gie a button for her.

Auld baudrons1 by the ingle5 sits,
And wi’ her loof6 her face a-washin’;
But Willie’s wife is nae sae trig,1
She dights her grunzie8 wi’, a hush-ion;9
Her walle nieves10 like midden-creels,
Her face wad fyle the Logan Water—

Sic a wife as Willie had,
I wadna gie a button for her.

SMILING SPRING COMES IN REJOICING.

TUNE—‘The Bonny Bell.’

The smiling Spring comes in rejoicing,
And surly Winter gringly flies;
Now crystal clear are the falling waters,
And bonny blue are the sunny skies;
Fresh o’er the mountains breaks forth the morning,
The evening gilds the ocean’s swell;
All creatures joy in the sun’s returning,
And I rejoice in my bonny Bell.

The flowery Spring leads sunny Summer,
And yellow Autumn presses near,
Then in his turn comes gloomy Winter,
Till smiling Spring again appear.

Thus seasons dancing, life advancing,
Old Time and Nature their changes tell,
But never ranging, still unchanging,
I adore my bonny Bell.

THE GALLANT WEAVER.

TUNE—‘The Weavers’ March.’

WHERE Cart* rins rowin’ to the sea,
By mony a flower and spreading tree,
Their lives a lad, the lad for me,
He is a gallant weaver.

Oh, I had wooers aught or nine,
They gied me rings and ribbons fine;
And I was fear’d my heart would tine,1
And I gied it to the weaver.

My daddie sign’d my tocher-band,2
To gie the lad that has the land,
But to my heart I’ll add my hand,
And gie it to the weaver.

While birds rejoice in leafy bowers;
While bees delight in opening flowers;
While corn grows green in summer showers,

I’ll love my gallant weaver.

SHE’S FAIR AND FAUSE.

TUNE—‘She’s Fair and Fause.’

She’s fair and fause that causes my smart,
I lo’ed her meikle and lang;
She’s broken her vow, she’s broken my heart,
And I may e’en gae hang.

A coof1 cam wi’ routh o’ gear,2
And I hae tint3 my dearest dear;
But woman is but world’s gear,
Sae let the bonny lassie gang.

Whae’er ye be that woman love,
To this be never blind,
Nae ferlie4 tis, though fickle she prove,
A woman has’t by kind,
O woman, lovely woman fair!

An angel form’s fa’n to thy share:
’Twed been o’er meikle to gien5 thee mair—

I mean an angel mind.

MY AIN KIND DEARIE, O.

TUNE—“The Lea-Rig.”

When o’er the hill the eastern star
Tells bughtin-time1 is near, my jo;
And owsen frac the furrow’d field
Return sae doun2 and weary, O;
Down by the burn, where scented birks3
Wi’ dew are hanging clear, my jo,
I’ll meet thee on the lea-rig,4
My ain kind dearie, O!

In mirkest5 glen, at midnight hour,
I’d rove, and ne’er be cérie,6 O;
If through that glen I gaed to thee,
My ain kind dearie, O!
Although the night were ne’er sae wild,
And I were ne’er sae wary, O,
I’d meet thee on the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O!

The hunter lo’es the morning sun,
To rouse the mountain deer, my jo;
At noon the fisher seeks the glen,
Along the burn to steer, my jo;
Gie me the hour o’ gloamin’ gray,
It makes my heart sae cheery, O,
To meet thee on the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O!

MY WIFE’S A WINSOME WEE THING.

The following lively lines, the poet tells us, were written extempore to the old air of “My Wife’s a Wanton Wee Thing:—

She is a winsome wee thing,
She is a handsome wee thing,
She is a bonny wee thing,
This sweet wee wife o’ mine.

I never saw a fairer,
I never lo’ed a dearer:
And neist my heart I’ll wear her,
For fear my jewel tine.1

She is a winsome wee thing,
She is a handsome wee thing,
She is a bonny wee thing,
This sweet wee wife o’ mine.

The world’s wrack we share o’,
The warstle and the care o’;
Wi’ her I’ll blithely bear it,
And think my lot divine.

HIGHLAND MARY.

TUNE—“Kathrine Ogie.”

This is another of those glorious lyrics inspired by the poet’s passion for Highland Mary; and which celebrates, in strains worthy of the occasion, their last interview, and her untimely and lamented death. “The following song,” he says, in a letter to Thomson, enclosing the verses, “pleases me: I think it is in my happiest manner. The subject of the song is one of the most interesting passages of my youthful days; and I own that I should be much flatter’d to see the verses set to an air which would insure celebrity. Perhaps, after all, it is the still glowing prejudice of my heart that throws a borrowed lustre over the merits of the composition.” See p. 219, for an account of Mary.

Ye banks, and braes, and streams around
The castle o’ Montgomery, fflowers,
Green be your woods, and fair your
Your waters never drumle!1
There simmer first unfaulds her robes,
And there the langest tarry;
For there I took the last fareweel
O’ my sweet Highland Mary.

How sweetly bloom’d the gay green birk!2
How rich the hawthorn’s blossom!
As underneath their fragrant shade,
I clasped her to my bosom!
The golden hours, on angel wings,
Flew o’er me and my dearie;
For dear to me, as light and life,
Was my sweet Highland Mary!

Wi’ mony a vow, and lock’d embrace,
Our parting was fu’ tender;
And, pledging aft to meet again,
We tore oursels asunder;
But, oh! fell Death’s untimely frost,
That nipt my flower sae early!—
Now green’s the sod, and cauld’s the clay,
That wraps my Highland Mary!

Oh, pale, pale now, those rosy lips,
I aft hae kiss’d sae fondly!
And closed for aye the sparkling glance
That dwelt on me sae kindly!

AULD BOB MORRIS.

The two first lines of the following song were taken from an old ballad—the rest is the poet's:

There's auld Rob Morris that wins1 in yon glen,
He's the king o' guid fellows and wale2 of auld men;
He has gowd in his coffers, he has owsen and kine, [mine].
And ae bonny lassie, his darling and
She's fresh as the morning the fairest in May; [new hay;
She's sweet as the evening among the
As blithe and as artless as lambs on the lea, [my ee.
And dear to my heart as the light to
But oh! she's an heiress—auld Robin's a laird, [house and yard;
And my daddie has nought but a cot.
A wooer like me maumna hope to come speed; [be my dead.3
The wounds I must hide that will soon
The day comes to me, but delight brings me nane; [it is gane.
The night comes to me, but my rest
I wander my lane like a night-troubled ghast, [my breast.
And I sigh as my heart it was burst in
Oh, had she but been of a lower degree, I then might hae hoped she'd hae smiled upon me! [my bliss, Oh, how past describing4 had then been
As now my distraction no words can express!

DUNCAN GRAY.

This song was written on the model and to the tune of a coarse old ditty in Johnson's Museum, the name of the hero, and a line or two, being all that was retained.

DUNCAN GRAY cam here to woo,
Ha, ha, the wooing o't,

On blithe yule night when we were fou,
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
Maggie coost her head fu' high,
Look'd askent and unco skieh,1
Gart poor Duncan stand a'beigh,2
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.

Duncan fleech'd,3 and Duncan pray'd,
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
Meg was deaf as Ailsa Craig,*
Ha, ha, the wooing o't,
Duncan sigh'd baith out and in,
Grat4 his een baith bleert and blin',
Spak o' lowpin' o'er a linn;
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.

Time and chance are but a tide;
Ha, ha, the wooing o't;
Slighted love is sair to bide;
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
Shall I, like a fool, quoth he,
For a haughty hizzie die?
She may gae to—France for me!
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.

How it comes let doctors tell;
Ha, ha, the wooing o't;
Meg grew sick as he grew heal;
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
Something in her bosom wrings,
For relief a sigh she brings;
And oh, her een, they spak sic things!
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.

Duncan was a lad o' grace;
Ha, ha, the wooing o't;
Maggie's was a piteous case;
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
Duncan couldna be her death,
Swelling pity smoor'd5 his wrath;
Now they're crouse and canty6 baith;
Ha, ha, the wooing o't.

COCK UP YOUR BEAVER.

Tune—"Cock up your beaver."

The second stanza only of this song is Burns'—the first is old.

WHEN first my brave Johnnie lad
Came to this town,
He had a blue bonnet
That wanted the crown;

1 Disdainful. 2 Aloof. 3 Flattered. 4 Wept. 5 Smothered. 6 Cheerful and happy.

* A well-known rocky islet in the Frith of Clyde.
But now he has gotten
A hat and a feather,—
Hey, brave Johnnie lad,
Cock up your beaver!

Cock up your beaver,
And cock it fu’ sprush,
We’ll over the Border
And gie them a brush;
There’s somebody there
We’ll teach them behaviour—
Hey, brave Johnnie lad,
Cock up your beaver!

BONNY PEG.
As I came in by our gate end,
As day was waxin’ weary,
Oh, wha came tripping down the street,
But bonny Peg, my dearie!

Her air sae sweet, and shape complete,
Wi’ nae proportion wanting,
The Queen of Love did never move
Wi’ a motion mair enchanting.

Wi’ linked hands, we took the sands
Adown yon winding river;
And, oh! that hour and broomy bower,
Can I forget it ever?

THE TITHER MORN.
To a Highland Air.
The tither morn,
When I forlorn,
Aneath an aik sat moaning,
I did na trow
I’d see my jo’d
Beside me gin the gloaming.
But he sae trig
Lap o’er the rig,
And dawtingly did cheer me,
When I, what reck,
Did least expec’
To see my lad sae near me.

His bonnet he,
A thought ajeë,
Cock’d sprush when first he clasp’d me;
And I, I wat,
Wi’ fainness grat,
While in his grips he press’d me.
Deil tak the war!
I late and air

Hae wish’d since Jock departed;
But now as glad
I’m wi’ my lad
As short syne broken-hearted.

Fu’ aft at e’en
Wi’ dancing keen,
When a’ were blithe and merry,
I cared na by,
Sae sad was I
In absence o’ my dearie.
But, praise be blest,
My mind’s at rest,
I’m happy wi’ my Johnny;
At kirk and fair,
I’se aye be there,
Ane be as canty’s’ ony.

THE DEUK’S DANG O’ER MY DADDIE, O.

Tune—“The deuk’s dang o’er my daddie.”
The bairns gat out wi’ an unco shout,
The deuk’s¹ dang o’er my daddie, O!
The fient may care, quo’ the feiric² auld wife,
He was but a paidlin³ body, O!
He paidles out, and he paidles in,
And he paidles late and early, O!
Thae seven lang years I hae lien by his side,
And he is but a fusionless⁴ carlie, O!

Oh, haud your tongue, my feiric auld wife;
Oh, haud your tongue now, Nansie,
I’ve seen the day, and sae hae ye,
Ye wadna been sae dosnie,⁵ O!
I’ve seen the day ye butter’d my brose,
And cuddled⁶ me late and early, O;
But downa do’s⁷ come o’er me now,
And, oh! I feel it sairly, O!

Frien'ship mak's us a' mair happy,
Frien'ship gies us a' delight;
Frien'ship consecrates the drappie,
Frien'ship brings us here to-night.

OH, SAW YE MY DEARIE.

Tune—"Eppie M'Nab."

Oh, saw ye my dearie, my Eppie
M'Nab? [M'Nab?
Oh, saw ye my dearie, my Eppie
She's down in the yard, she's kissin' the laird, [Rab.
She winna come hame to her ain Jock

Oh, come thy ways to me, my Eppie
M'Nab! [M'Nab!
Oh, come thy ways to me, my Eppie
Whate'er thou hast done, be it late, be it soon, [Rab.
Thou's welcome again to thy ain Jock

What says she, my dearie, my Eppie
M'Nab? [M'Nab?
What says she, my dearie, my Eppie
She lets thee to wit,\(^1\) that she has thee forgot, [Rab.
And forever disowns thee, her ain Jock

YE JACOBITES BY NAME.

TUNE—"Ye Jacobites by Name."

Ye Jacobites by name, give an ear, give an ear;
Ye Jacobites by name, give an ear;
Your faults I will proclaim, Your doctrines I maun blame—
You shall hear.

What is right, and what is wrang, by the law, by the law,
What is right, and what is wrang, by the law!
What is right, and what is wrang? A short sword, and a lang,
A weak arm and a strang
For to draw.

What makes heroic strife famed afar, famed afar?
What makes heroic strife famed
What makes heroic strife?
To whet th' assassin's knife,
Or hunt a parent's life
Wi' bluidie war.

Then let your schemes alone, in the state, in the state;
Then let your schemes alone in the Then let your schemes alone,

An ye think it fit,
We'll sing him a year
To the college yet:
We'll sew a green ribbon
Round about his hat,
And that will let them ken
He's to marry yet.
Lady Mary Ann
Was a flower i' the dew,
Sweet was its smell,
And bonny was its hue;
And the langer it blossom'd
The sweeter it grew;
For the lily in the bud
Will be bonnier yet.
Young Charlie Cochrane
Was the sprout of an aik;
Bonny and bloomin'
And straugh was its make;
The sun took delight
To shine for its sake,
And it will be the brag
O' the forest yet.
The simmer is gane
When the leaves they were green,
And the days are awa',
That we hae seen;
But far better days
I trust will come again,
For my bonny laddie's young,
But he's growin' yet.

OH, KENMURE'S ON AND AWA'.

Tune—"Oh, Kenmure's on and awa', Willie."

"This song," says Cunningham, "refers to the fortunes of the gallant Gordons of Kenmure in the fatal 'Fifteen.' The Viscount left Galloway with two hundred horsemen well armed; he joined the other lowland Jacobites—penetrated to Preston—repulsed, and at last yielded to, the attack of General Carpenter—and perished on the scaffold. He was a good as well as a brave man, and his fate was deeply lamented. The title has since been restored to the Gordon's line." Burns was, once at least, an invited guest at Kenmure Castle, near New Galloway.

Oh, Kenmure's on and awa', Willie! Oh, Kenmure's on and awa'! And Kenmure's lord's the bravest lord That ever Galloway saw.

Success to Kenmure's band, Willie! Success to Kenmure's band; There's no a heart that fears a Whig That rides by Kenmure's hand.

Here's Kenmure's health in wine, Willie! Here's Kenmure's health in wine; There ne'er was a coward o' Kenmure's blude, Nor yet o' Gordon's line.

Oh, Kenmure's lads are men, Willie! Oh, Kenmure's lads are men; Their hearts and swords are metal true— And that their faes shall ken.

They'll live or die wi' fame, Willie! They'll live or die wi' fame; But soon wi' sounding victorie May Kenmure's lord come hame!

Here's him that's far awa', Willie! Here's him that's far awa'! And here's the flower that I lo'e best— The rose that's like the snaw!

MY COLLIER LADDIE.

Tune—"The Collier Laddie."

"I do not know," says Burns, "a blither old song than this;" which he modified and altered, and then sent to the Museum.

Oh, whare live ye, my bonny lass? And tell me what they ca' ye? My name, she says, is Mistress Jean, And I follow the Collier Laddie. My name, she says, is Mistress Jean, And I follow the Collier Laddie.

Oh, see you not yon hills and dales, The sun shines on sae brawlie! They a' are mine, and they shall be thine, Gin ye'll leave your Collier Laddie. They a' are mine, and they shall be thine, Gin ye'll leave your Collier Laddie.

And ye shall gang in gay attire, Weel buskit¹ up sae gaudy; And ane to wait at every hand, Gin ye'll leave your Collier Laddie. And ane to wait at every hand, Gin ye'll leave your Collier Laddie.

Though ye had a' the sun shines on, And the earth conceals sae lowly, I wad turn my back on you and it a', And embrace my Collier Laddie. [a', I wad turn my back on you and it And embrace my Collier Laddie.

I can win my five pennies a day, And spent at night fu' brawlie; And mak my bed in the Collier's neuk² And lie down wi' my Collier Laddie. And mak my bed in the Collier's neuk, [die. And lie down wi' my Collier Laddie.

Luve for luve is the bargain for me, Though the wee co'house should haud me; [bread, And the warld before me to win my And fair fa' my Collier Laddie. And the warld before me to win my bread, And fair fa' my Collier Laddie.

FAREWELL TO A' OUR SCOTTISH FAME.

Tune—"Such a Parcel of Rogues in a Nation."

"Burns," says Cunningham, "has expressed sentiments in this song which were once popular in the north." The poet himself, indeed, appears to have been in the habit of expressing his feelings pretty freely regarding the Union. —"What," he exclaimed, on one occasion, "are all the advantages which my country reaps from the Union that can counterbalance the annihilation of her independence, and even her very name? Nothing can reconcile me to the terms, 'English Ambassador, 'English Court,'" &c.

FAREWELL to a' our Scottish fame,
Fareweel our ancient glory!
Fareweel even to the Scottish name,
Sae famed in martial story!
Now Sark rins o'er the Solway sands,
And Tweed rins to the ocean,
To mark where England's province stands—
Such a parcel of roges in a nation!

What force or guile could not subdue,
Through many warlike ages,
Is wrought now by a coward few,
For hireling traitors' wages.
The English steel we could disdain,
Secure in valour's station;
But English gold has been our bane—
Such a parcel of roges in a nation!

Oh, would, ere I had seen the day
That treason thus could sell us,
My auld gray head had lien in clay,
Wi' Bruce and loyal Wallace!
But pith and power, till my last hour,
I'll mak this declaration; [gold—
We're bought and sold for English
Such a parcel of roges in a nation.

HERE'S A HEALTH TO THEM THAT'S AWA'.

Tune—"Here's a health to them that's awa'."

The poet's political predilections at this period of his life being somewhat marked, and of an ultra-liberal tendency, he is supposed to have thrown them into the following song, composed in honour of the leaders of the liberal party in the House of Commons:

HERE's a health to them that's awa',
Here's a health to them that's awa';
And wha winna wish guid luck to our cause,
May never guid luck be their fa'!
It's guid to be merry and wise,
It's guid to be honest and true,
It's guid to support Caledonia's cause,
And bide by the buff and the blue.
Here's a health to them that's awa',
Here's a health to them that's awa'.
Here's a health to Charlie* the chief
Of the clan,
Although that his band be but sma'.
May Liberty meet wi' success!
May Prudence protect her rare evil!
May tyrants and tyranny tine in the mist,
And wander their way to the devil!
Here's a health to them that's awa',
Here's a health to them that's awa',
Here's a health to Tammie,† the Nor-land laddie,
That lives at the lug o' the law!
Here's freedom to him that wad read,
Here's freedom to him that wad write!
There's name ever fear'd that the truth
Should be heard
But they tham the truth wad indite.†
Here's a health to them that's awa',
Here's a health to them that's awa',
Here's Chieftain M'Leod,‡ a chieftain
Worth godw,
Though bred amang mountains o' snaw!
Here's a health to them that's awa',
Here's a health to them that's awa',
And wha winna wish guid luck to our cause,
May never guid luck be their fa'!

LOD GREGORY.

This song was written in imitation of Dr. Wolcot's (Peter Pindar) ballad on the same subject, of which Burns says, in a letter to Thomson, "Pindar's 'Lord Gregory' is beautiful. I have tried to give you a Scots version, which is at your service. Not that I intend to enter the lists with Peter—that would be presumption indeed! My song though much inferior in poetic merit, has, I think, more of the ballad simplicity in it." The idea of both songs, however, is taken from an old strain.

Oh, mirk,1 mirk is this midnight hour,
And loud the tempest's roar;
A waefu' wanderer seeks thy tower—
Lord Gregory, ope thy door!

An exile frae her father's ha',
And a' for loving thee;
At least some pity on me shaw,
If love it may na be.

Lord Gregory, mind'st thou not the grove,
By bonny Irwin-side,
Where first I own'd that virgin love
I lang, lang had denied?

How aften didst thou pledge and vow
Thou wad for aye be mine;
And my fond heart, itsel sae true,
It ne'er mistrusted thine.

1 Dark.

* The following is Wolcot's version:—

"Ah, ope, Lord Gregory, thy door!
A midnight wanderer sighs,
Hard rush the rains, the tempests roar,
And lightnings cleave the skies.

Who comes with woe at this drear night—
A pilgrim of the gloom?
If she whose love did once delight,
My cot shall yield her room.

"Alas! thou heard'st a pilgrim mourn
That once was prized by thee;
Think of the ring by yonder burn
Thou gav'st to love and me.

"But shouldst thou not poor Marian know,
I'll turn my feet and part;
And think the storms that round me blow
Far kinder than thy heart."
Hard is thy heart, Lord Gregory,
And flinty is thy breast—
Thou dart of heaven that flashest by,
Oh, wilt thou give me rest?
Ye mustering thunders from above,
Your willing victim see!
But spare, and pardon my false love
His wrangs to Heaven and me!

OPEN THE DOOR TO ME, OH!

“Oo, open the door, some pity to show,
Oh, open the door to me, oh!
Though thou hast been false, I'll ever prove true,
Oh, open the door to me, oh!
“Cauld is the blast upon my pale cheek,
But cauldier thy love for me, oh!
The frost that freezes the life at my heart
Is nought to my pains frae thee, oh!
“The wan moon is setting behind the white wave,
And time is setting with me, oh!
False friends, false love, farewell! for mair
I'll ne'er trouble them nor thee, oh!”
She has open’d the door, she has open’d it wide;
[oh!
She sees his pale corpse on the plain,
“My true love!” she cried, and sank down by his side,
Never to rise again, oh!

THE POOR AND HONEST SODGER.

Air—“The Mill, Mill O’”

When wild war’s deadly blast was blawn,
And gentle peace returning,
Wi’ mony a sweet babe fatherless,
And mony a widow mourning;
I left the lines and tented field,
Where lang I’d been a lodger,
My humble knapsack a’ my wealth,
A poor and honest sodger.
A leal light heart was in my breast,
My hand unstain’d wi’ plunder,
And for fair Scotia, hame again,
I cheery on did wander.
I thought upon the banks o’ Coil,
I thought upon my Nancy,
I thought upon the witching smile
That caught my youthful fancy.

At length I reach’d the bonny glen
Where early life I sported;
I pass’d the mill, and trysting thorn,
Where Nancy aft I courted:
Wha spied I but my ain dear maid,
Down by her mother’s dwelling!
And turn’d me round to hide the flood
That in my een was swelling.

Wi’ alter’d voice, quoth I, “Sweet lass,
Sweet as yon hawthorn’s blossom,
Oh! happy, happy may he be,
That’s dearest to thy bosom!

And fain wad be thy lodger;

She gazed—she reddens like a rose—

She saek within my arms, and cried,

For gold the merchant ploughs the main,
The farmer ploughs the manor;

WELCOME TO GENERAL DUMOURIER.

Some one, in the presence of the poet, having expressed joy at the desertion of General
Dumourier from the army of the French Republic, in 1793, after having gained some splendid victories with it, in a few moments he chanted, almost extempore, the following verses to the tune of "Robin Adair:"—

You're welcome to despotis, Dumourier;
You're welcome to despotis, Dumourier.
How does Dampiere² do?
Ay, and Beurnonville too?
Why did they not come along with you, Dumourier?

I will fight France with you, Dumourier;
I will fight France with you, Dumourier.
I will fight France with you,
I will take my chance with you;
By my soul I'll dance a dance with you,
Dumourier.

Then let us fight about, Dumourier;
Then let us fight about, Dumourier;
Then let us fight about,
Till Freedom's spark is out,
Then we'll be damn'd, no doubt, Dumourier.

THE LAST TIME I CAME O'ER
THE MOOR.

In this song the poet is supposed to have given expression to certain feelings of illicit love which it is known he entertained for the beautiful and fascinating Mrs. Riddell of Woodley Park. It is but just to remember, however, and charitable to believe, that the poet, with an eye to artistic effect, may have purposely heightened his colours in order to increase the general effect of his picture.

The last time I came o'er the moor,
And left Maria's dwelling,
What throes, what tortures passing cure,
Were in my bosom swelling:
Condemned to see my rival's reign,
While I in secret languish;
To feel a fire in every vein,
Yet dare not speak my anguish.

Love's veriest wretch, despairing, I
Fain, fain my crime would cover:
The unwept groan, the bursting sigh,
Betray the guilty lover.
I know my doom must be despair,
Thou wilt nor canst relieve me;
But, O Maria, hear my prayer,
For pity's sake, forgive me!

The music of thy tongue I heard,
Nor wist while it enslaved me;
I saw thine eyes; yet nothing fear'd,
Till fears no more had saved me.
The unwary sailor thus aghast
The wheeling torrent viewing,
In circling horrors yields at last
In overwhelming ruin!

BLITHE HAE I BEEN.

TUNE—"Liggeram Cosh."

BLITHE hae I been on yon hill,
As the lambs before me;
Careless ilka thought and free,
As the breeze flew o'er me.
Now nae langer sport and play,
Mirth or sang can please me;
Lesley is sae fair and coy,
Care and anguish seize me.

Heavy, heavy is the task,
Hopeless love declaring;

Trembling, I dow nocht but glower,1
Sighing, dumb, despairing!
If she winna ease the thaws?
In my bosom swelling;
Underneath the grass-green sod,
Soon maun be my dwelling.

LOGAN BRAES.

TUNE—"Logan Water."

The poet, in a letter to Thomson, enclosing this song, says, regarding its origin:
"Have you ever, my dear sir, felt your bosom ready to burst with indignation on reading of those mighty villains who divide kingdom against kingdom, desolate provinces, and lay nations waste, out of the wantonness of ambition, or often from still more ignoble passions? In a mood of this kind to-day, I recollected the air of 'Logan Water,' and it occurred to me that its quen-ulous melody probably had its origin from the plaintive indignation of some swelling, suffering heart, fired at the tyrannic strides of some public destroyer; and overwhelmed with private distress, the consequence of a country's ruin. If I have done anything at all like justice to my feelings, the following song, composed in three-quarters of an hour's meditation in my elbow-chair, ought to have some merit." The two last lines of the first stanza the poet took from a very pretty song to the same air, written by Mr. John Mayne, author of a poem entitled, "The Siller Gun."

O LOGAN, sweetly didst thou glide
That day I was my Willie's bride!
And years sinesyne hae o'er us run,
Like Logan to the simmer sun.
But now thy flowery banks appear
Like drumlie Winter, dark and drear,
While my dear lad maun face his faes,
Far, far frae me and Logan braes!

Again the merry month o' May
Has made our hills and valleys gay;
The birds rejoice in leafy bowers,
The bees hum round the breathing flowers:
Blithe morning lifts his rosy eye,
And evening's tears are tears of joy:
My soul delightless, a' surveys,
While Willie's far frae Logan braes.

Within yon milk-white hawthorn bush,
Amang her nestlings sits the thrush;

---

1 Dare nought but stare. 2 Throes.
1 Clouded and rainy.
Her faithfu' mate will share her toil,
Or wi' his song her cares beguile:
But I, wi' my sweet nurslings here,
Nae mate to help, nae mate to cheer,
Pass widow'd nights and joyless days
While Willie's far frae Logan braes.

Oh, wae upon you, men o' state,
That brethren rouse to deadly hate!
As ye make mony a fond heart mourn,
Sae may it on your heads return!
How can your flinty hearts enjoy
The widow's tears, the orphan's cry?
But soon may peace bring happy days
And Willie hame to Logan braes!

THERE WAS A LASS, AND SHE WAS FAIR.

*TUNE—"Bonny Jean."

* I have just finished the following ballad," says the poet to Thomson, "and as I do think it is in my best style, I send it to you."

There was a lass, and she was fair,
At kirk and market to be seen,
When a' the fairest maidies were met,
The fairest maid was bonny Jean.

And aye she wrought her mammie's wark,
And aye sang sae merrilie;
The blithest bird upon the bush
Had ne'er a lighter heart than she.

But hawks will rob the tender joys
That bless the little lintwhite's nest:
And frost will blight the fairest flowers,
And love will break the soundest rest.

Young Robie was the brawest lad,
The flower and pride of a' the glen:
And he had owsen, sheep and kye,
And wanton naigies1 nine or ten.

He gaed wi' Jeanie to the tryste,2
He danced wi' Jeanie on the down;
And, lang ere witless Jeanie wist,
Her heart was tint,3 her peace was stown.4

As in the bosom o' the stream,
The moonbeam dwells at dewy e'en;

---

So trembling, pure, was tender love
Within the breast o' bonny Jean.

And now she works her mammie's wark,
And aye she sighs wi' care and pain,
Yet wist na what her ail might be,
Or what wad make her weel again.

But did na Jeanie's heart loup light,
And did na joy blink in her ee,
As Robie tauld a tale o' love
Ae e'en on the lily lea?

The sun was sinking in the west,
The birds sang sweet in ilka grove;
His cheek to hers he fondly prest,
And whisper'd thus his tale o' love:

"O Jeanie fair, I lo'e thee dear;
Oh, canst thou think to fancy me?
Or wilt thou leave thy mammie's cot,
And learn to tent the farms wi' me?"

"At barn or byre thou shalt na drudge,
Or naething else to trouble thee;
But stray amang the heather-bells,
And tent the waving corn wi' me."

Now what could artless Jeanie do?
She had nae will to say him na:
At length she blush'd a sweet consent,
And love was aye between them twa.

PHILLIS THE FAIR.

*TUNE—"Robin Adair."

While larks with little wing
Fann'd the pure air,
Tasting the breathing spring,
Forth I did fare;
Gay the sun's golden eye
Peep'd o'er the mountains high;
Such thy morn! did I cry,
Phillis the fair.

In each bird's careless song
Glad did I share;
While you wild flowers among,
Chance led me there:
Sweet to the opening day
Rosebuds bent the dewy spray;
Such thy bloom! did I say,
Phillis the fair.

1 Horses. 2 Fair. 3 Lost. 4 Stolen. 5 Mind.
Down in a shady walk
Doves cooing were:
I mark'd the cruel hawk
Caught in a snare:
So kind may Fortune be,
Such make his destiny!
He who would injure thee,
Phillis the fair.

HAD I A CAVE.

TUNE—"Robin Adair."

Mr. Alexander Cunningham, a writer to the Signet in Edinburgh, and a warm friend of the poet's, had wooded and, as he thought, won, a young lady of great beauty and accomplishments; but another lover having presented himself, with weightier claims to her regard than poor Cunningham possessed,
"The fickle, faithless queen, Took the carl, and left her Johnnie;" and appears to have cast him off with as little ceremony as she would a piece of faded frippery. The poet, in the following lines, has endeavoured to express the feelings of his friend on the occasion.

HAD I A CAVE ON SOME WILD, Distant shore, [dashing roar;
Where the winds howl to the waves'!
There would I weep my woes,
There seek my last repose,
Till grief my eyes should close,
Ne'er to wake more.

Falsetest of womankind, canst thou declare [as air!
All thy fond plighted vows fleeting
To thy new lover hie,
Laugh o'er thy perjury,
Then in thy bosom try
What peace is there!

BY ALLAN STREAM I CHANCED TO ROVE.

TUNE—"Allan Water."

In a letter to Thomson, dated August, 1793, enclosing this song, the poet says:—"I walked out yesterday evening with a volume of the Museums in my hand, when, turning up 'Allan Water,' as the words appeared to me rather unworthy of so fine an air, I sat and raved under the shade of an old thorn, till I wrote one to suit the meature. I may be wrong, but I think it not in my worst style. Bravo! say I; it is a good song. Autumn is my propitious season. I make more verses in it than all the year celse."

BY ALLAN STREAM I CHANCED TO ROVE,
While Phoebus sunk beyond Benledie;
The winds were whispering through the grove,
The yellow corn was waving ready:
I listen'd to a lover's song,
And thought on youthful pleasures many;
Aad aye the wild wood echoes rang—
Oh, dearly do I love thee, Annie!
Oh, happy be the woodbine bower,
Nae nightly bogle make it eerie;
Nor ever sorrow stain the hour,
The place and time I met my dearie!
Her head upon my throbbing breast,
She, sinking, said, 'I'm thine for ever!'
While mony a kiss the seal impress,
The sacred vow,—we ne'er should sever.

OH, WHISTLE, AND I'LL COME TO YOU, MY LAD.

admire very much, and yesterday I set the following verses to it:"

At kirk, or at market, when'er ye meet me,
Gang by me as though that ye cared
But steal me a blink o' your bonny black ee,
Yet look as ye were na looking at me.

Aye vow and protest that ye care na for me,
And whiles ye may lightly\(^3\) my beauty
But court na anither, though jokin' ye be,
For fear that she wile your fancy frae

ADOWN WINDING NITH.

_Tune—"The Muckling o' Geordie's Byre."_

ADOWN winding Nith did I wander,
To mark the sweet flowers as they spring;
Adown winding Nith I did wander,
Of Phillis to muse and to sing.

Awa' wi' your belles and your beauties,
They never wi' her can compare:
Whoever has met wi' my Phillis,
Has met wi' the queen o' the fair.

The daisy amused my fond fancy,
So artless, so simple, so wild;
Thou emblem, said I, o' my Phillis,
For she is Simplicity's child.

The rosebud's the blush o' my charmer,
Her sweet balmy lip when 'tis prest:
How fair and how pure is the lily,
But fairer and purer her breast!

Yon knot of gay flowers in the arbour,
They ne'er wi' my Phillis can vie:
Her breath is the breath o' the woodbine,
Its dew-drop o' diamond her eye.

1 Carefully heed. 2 Gate. 3 Disparage.

Her voice is the song of the morning,
That wakes through the green spreading grove,
When Phœbus peeps over the moun-

On music, and pleasure, and love.

But beauty how frail and how fleeting,
The bloom of a fine summer's day!
While worth in the mind o' my Phillis
Will flourish without a decay.

COME, LET ME TAKE THEE

_Air—"Caud Kail."_

COME, let me take thee to my breast,
And pledge we ne'er shall sunder;
And I shall spurn as vilest dust
The world's wealth and grandeur:
And do I hear my Jeanie own
That equal transports move her?
I ask for dearest life alone,
That I may live to love her.

Thus in my arms, wi' all thy charms,
I clasp my countless treasure;
I'll seek nae mair o' heaven to share
Than sic a moment's pleasure:
And by thy een, sae bonny blue,
I swear I'm thine forever!
And on thy lips I seal my vow,
And break it shall I never!

DAINTY DAVIE.

This is an improved version of a song which the poet wrote some years before for the _Museum_, and which will be found at p. 222.
The old song which furnished the air is said to have been composed on a somewhat indelicate incident that occurred in the life of the Rev. David Williamson, during the times of the Persecution in Scotland. This worthy, it is affirmed, after having married seven wives, died minister of St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh.

Now rosy May comes in wi' flowers,
To deck her gay green-spreading bow-
ers;
And now comes in my happy hours
To wander wi' my Davie.

Meet me on the warlock knowe,
Dainty Davie, dainty Davie;
There I'll spend the day wi' you,
My ain dear dainty Davie.
The crystal waters round us fa',
The merry birds are lovers o',
The scented breezes round us blow,
A-wandering wi' my Davie.

When purple morning starts the hare,
To steal upon her early face,
Then through the dews I will repair,
To meet my faithful Davie.

When day, expiring in the west,
The curtain draws o' nature's rest,
I flee to his arms I lo'e best,
And that's my ain dear Davie.

BRUCE'S ADDRESS TO HIS ARMY AT BANNOCKBURN.

Tune—"Hey, tuttie tattie."

"There is a tradition," says the poet, in a letter to Thomson, enclosing this glorious ode, "that the old air, 'Hey, tuttie tattie,' was Robert Bruce's march at the battle of Bannockburn. This thought, in my solitary wanderings, has warmed me to a pitch of enthusiasm on the theme of liberty and independence which I have thrown into a kind of Scottish ode, fitted to the air, that one might suppose to be the gallant Scot's address to his heroic followers on that eventful morning." This ode, says Professor Wilson—the grandest out of the Bible—is sublime!

Scots, wha hae wi' Wallace bled,
Scots, wham Bruce has often led;
Welcome to your gory bed,
Or to Victory!

Now's the day, and now's the hour,
See the front o' battle lour;
See approach proud Edward's power—
Chains and slavery!

Wha will be a traitor knave?
Wha can fill a coward's grave?
Wha sae base as be a slave?
Let him turn and flee!

Wha, for Scotland's king and law,
Freedom's sword will strongly draw;
Freeman stand, or freeman fa',
Let him follow me!

By Oppression's woes and pains!
By your sons in servile chains!
We will drain our dearest veins,
But they shall be free!

Lay the proud usurpers low!
Tyrants fall in every foe!
Liberty's in every blow!—
Let us do or die!

---

THOU HAST LEFT ME EVER.

Tune—"Fee him, father."

The poet, in sending these verses to Thomson, says:—"I do not give them for any merit they have. I composed them about the 'back o' midnight,' and by the leeside of a bowl of punch, which had overset every mortal in company except the Muse."

Thou hast left me ever, Jamie!
Thou hast left me ever;
Thou hast left me ever, Jamie!
Thou hast left me ever.
Aften hast thou vow'd that death
Only should us sever;
Now thou'st left thy lass for aye—
I maun see the never, Jamie,
I'll see the never!

Thou hast me forsaken, Jamie!
Thou hast me forsaken;
Thou hast me forsaken, Jamie!
Thou hast me forsaken.
Thou caust love anither jo,
While my heart is breaking:
Soon my weary een I'll close—
Never mair to waken, Jamie,
Ne'er mair to waken!

FAIR JENNY.

Tune—"Saw ye me father."

Where are the joys I have met in thy morning,
That danced to the lark's early song?
Where is the peace that awaited my wandering,
At evening the wild woods among?

No more a-winding the course of yon river,
And marking sweet flowerets so fair,
No more I trace the light footsteps of pleasure,
But sorrow and sad sighing care.

Is it that Summer's forsaken our valleys,
And grim, surly Winter is near?
No, no! the bees humming round the gay roses
Proclaim it the pride of the year.

Fain would I hide what I fear to discover,
Yet long, long too well have I
All that has caused this wreck in my bosom
Is Jenny, fair Jenny alone.

Time cannot aid me, my griefs are immortal,
Nor hope dare a comfort bestow:
Come then, enamour’d and fond of my anguish,
Enjoyment I’ll seek in my woe.

DELUDED SWAIN, THE PLEASURE.

TUNE—"The Collier’s Bonny Lassie."
DELUDED swain, the pleasure
The fickle fair can give thee
Is but a fairy treasure—
Thy hopes will soon deceive thee.

The billows on the ocean,
The breezes idly roaming,
The clouds uncertain motion—
They are but types of woman.

Oh! art thou not ashamed
To doat upon a feature?
If man thou wouldst be named,
Despise the silly creature.

Go, find an honest fellow;
Good claret set before thee;
Hold on till thou art mellow,
And then to bed in glory.

MY SPOUSE, NANCY.

TUNE—"My Jo, Janet."

"HUSBAND, husband, cease your strife,
Nor longer idly rave, sir;
Though I am your wedded wife,
Yet I am not your slave, sir."

"One of two must still obey,
Nancy, Nancy;
Is it man, or woman, say,
My spouse, Nancy?"

"If ’tis still the lordly word,
Service and obedience;
I’ll desert my sovereign lord,
And so, good-by allegiance!"

"Sad will I be so, bereft,
Nancy, Nancy;
Yet I’ll try to make a shift,
My spouse, Nancy."

"My poor heart then break it must,
My last hour I’m near it:
When you lay me in the dust,
Think, think how you will bear it."

"I will hope and trust in Heaven,
Nancy, Nancy;
Strength to bear it will be given,
My spouse, Nancy."

"Well, sir, from the silent dead,
Still I’ll try to daunt you;
Ever round your midnight bed
Horrid sprites shall haunt you."

"I’ll wed another, like my dear Nancy, Nancy;
Then all hell will fly for fear,
My spouse, Nancy."

OH, WERE MY LOVE YON LILAC FAIR.

TUNE—"Hughie Graham."

The first two stanzas only of this song are by Burns; the other two are old.

Oh, were my love yon lilac fair,
Wi’ purple blossoms to the spring;
And I a bird to shelter there,
When wearied on my little wing;

How I wad mourn, when it was torn,
By autumn wild, and winter rude!
But I wad sing, on wanton wing,
When youthfu’ May its bloom renew’d.

Oh, gin my love were yon red rose,
That grows upon the castle wa’,
And I mysel a drap o’ dew,
Into her bonny breast to fa’!

Oh! there, beyond expression blest,
I’d feast on beauty a’ the night;
Seal’d on her silk-saft faulds to rest,
Till they’d awa’ by Phœbus’ light!

\[1\] Frightened.
THE LOVELY LASS OF INVERNESS.

TUNE—"The Lass of Inverness."

The lovely lass of Inverness
Nae joy nor pleasure can she see;
For e'en and morn she cries, alas!
And aye the saut tear blin's her ee:
Drumossie Moor—Drumossie day—
A wae'ful day it was to me!
For there I lost my father dear,
My father dear, and brethren three.

Their winding-sheet the bluidy clay,
Their graves are growing green to see;
And by them lies the dearest lad
That ever blest a woman's ee!
Now wae to thee, thou cruel lord,
A bluidy man I trow thou be;
For mony a heart thou hast made sair
That ne'er did wrang to thine or thee.

A RED, RED ROSE.

TUNE—"Graham's Strathspey."

Och, my luve's like a red, red rose,
That's newly sprung in June:
Oh, my luve's like the melodie
That's sweetly play'd in tune.

As fair art thou, my bonny lass,
So deep in luve am I;
And I will luve thee still, my dear,
Till a' the seas gang dry.

Till a' the seas gang dry, my dear,
And the rocks melt wi' the sun:
I will luve thee still my dear,
While the sands o' life shall run.

And fare thee well, my only luve!
And fare thee well a while!
And I will come again, my luve,
Though it were ten thousand mile.

A VISION.

The following lines were written amid the ruins of Lincluden Abbey, a favourite haunt of the poet's. He contributed a version somewhat different to the Scot's Musical Museum:

As I stood by yon roofless tower,
Where the wa'-flower scents the dewy air,
Where the howlet mourns in her ivy bower,
And tells the midnight moon her care;
The winds were laid, the air was still,
The stars they shot along the sky;
The fox was howling on the hill,
And the distant-echoing glens reply.

The stream adown its hazel path,
Was rushing by the ruin'd wa's,
Fastening to join the weeping Nith,
Whose distant roaring swells and fa's.

The cauld blue North was streaming forth
Her lights, wi' hissin', eerie din:
A' the lift they start and shift,
Like Fortune's favours, tint\(^2\) as win.

By headless chance I turn'd mine eyes,
And by the moonbeam, shook to see
A stern and stalwart glaist arise,
Attired as minstrels wont to be.

Had I a statue been o' stane,
His daring look had daunted me;
And on his bonnet graved was plain,
The sacred posy—"Liberty!"

And frae his harp sic strains did flow,
Might roused the slumbering dead to hear;
But, oh! it was a tale of woe,
As ever met a Briton's ear!

He sang wi' joy the former day,
He, weeping, wail'd his latter times;
But what he said it was nae play,—
I winna venture't in my rhymes.

OUT OVER THE FORTH.

TUNE—"Charlie Gordon's Welcome Hame."

Out over the Forth I look to the north,
But what is the north and its High lands to me?
[breast,]
The south nor the east gie ease to my
The far foreign land, or the wild-rolling sea.

JEANIE'S BOSOM.

TUNE—"Louis, what reck I by thee?"

LOUIS, what reck I by thee,
Or Geordie on his ocean?
Dyvor,¹ beggar loons to me—
I reign in Jeanie's bosom.

Let her crown my love her law,
And in her breast enthrone me:
King and nations—swith, awa'!
Reif-randies,² I disown ye!

FOR THE SAKE OF SOMEBODY.

TUNE—"For the Sake of Somebody."

My heart is sair—I dare na tell—
My heart is sair for Somebody;
I could wake a winter night
For the sake o' Somebody.
Oh-hon! for Somebody!
Oh-hey! for Somebody!
I could range the world around,
For the sake o' Somebody!

Ye Powers that smile on virtuous love,
Oh, sweetly smile on Somebody!
Fræ ilka danger keep him free,
And send me safe my Somebody.
Oh-hon! for Somebody!
Oh-hey! for Somebody!
I wad do—what wad I not?
For the sake o' Somebody!

WILT THOU BE MY DEARIE.

AIR—"The Sutor's Dochter,"

Wilt thou be my dearie?
When sorrow wrings thy gentle heart,
Wilt thou let me cheer thee?
By the treasure of my soul,
That's the love I bear thee!
I swear and vow that only thou
Shall ever be my dearie.

Only thou, I swear and vow,
Shall ever be my dearie.

Lassie, say thou lo'es me;
Or, if thou wilt na be my ain,
Say na thou'll refuse me:
If it winna, canna be,
Thou, for thine may choose me,
Let me, lassie, quickly die,
Trusting that thou lo'est me.
Lassie, let me quickly die,
Trusting that thou lo'es me.

LOVELY POLLY STEWART.

TUNE—"Ye're welcome, Charlie Stewart."

O LOVELY Polly Stewart!
O charming Polly Stewart! [May
There's ne'er a flower that blooms in
That's half so fair as thou art.
The flower it blaws, it fades and fa's,
And art can ne'er renew it;
But worth and truth eternal youth
Will gie to Polly Stewart.

May he whose arms shall fauld thy charms
Possess a leal and true heart;
To him be given to ken the heaven
He grasps in Polly Stewart!
O lovely Polly Stewart!
O charming Polly Stewart! [May
There's ne'er a flower that blooms in
That's half so sweet as thou art.

TO MARY.

TUNE—"At Setting Day."

COULD aught of song declare my pains,
Could artful numbers move thee,
The Muse should tell, in labour'd strains,
O Mary, how I love thee!
They who but feign a wounded heart
May teach the lyre to languish;
But what avails the pride of art,
When wastes the soul with anguish?

Then let the sudden bursting sigh
The heart-felt pang discover,
And in the keen, yet tender eye,
Oh, read th' imploring lover.

Anna, thy charms my bonny Mary.

Anna, thy charms my bosom fire,
And waste my soul with care;
But ah! how bootless to admire,
When fated to despair?
Yet in thy presence, lovely fair,
To hope may be forgiven;
For sure 'twere impious to despair,
So much in sight of heaven.

My lady's gown, there's gairs upon't.

My lady's gown, there's gairs upon't,
And gowden flowers sae rare upon't;
But Jenny's jimps and jirkinet, 3
My lord thinks meikle mair upon't.

My lord a-hunting he is gane,
But hounds or hawks wi' him are nane;
By Colin's cottage lies his game,
If Colin's Jenny be at home.

My lady's white, my lady's red,
And kith and kin o' Cassilis' blude;
But her ten-pund lands o' tocher guid
Were a' the charms his lordship lo'ed.

Out o'er yon muir, out o'er yon moss,

JOCKEY'S TA'EN THE PARTING KISS.

Tune—"Bonny Lassie, tak a Man."
Jockey's ta'en the parting kiss,
O'er the mountains he is gone;
And with him is a' my bliss,
Nought but griefs with me remain.
Spare my luve, ye winds that blaw,
Plashy sleets and beating rain!
Spare my luve, thou featherly snaw,
Drifting o'er the frozen plain!

When the shades of evening creep
O'er the day's fair gladsome ee,
Sound and safely may he sleep,
Sweetly blithe his waukening be!
He will think on her he loves,
Fondly he'll repeat her name;
For where'er he distant roves,
Jockey's heart is still at hame.

OH, LAY THY LOOF IN MINE, LASS.

Tune—"Cordwainers' March."
Oh, lay thy loof in mine, lass,
In mine, lass, in mine, lass;
And swear on thy white hand, lass,
That thou wilt be my ain.

A slave to love's unbounded sway,
He ait has wrought me meikle wae;
But now he is my deadly 'gae,
Unless thou be my ain.

There's mony a lass has broke my rest,
That for a blink I hae lo'ed best;
But thou art queen within my breast,
Forever to remain.

Oh, lay thy loof in mine, lass,
In mine, lass, in mine, lass;
And swear on thy white hand, lass,
That thou wilt be my ain.

OH, MALLY'S MEEK, MALLY'S SWEET.

As I was walking up the street,
A barefitt maid I chanced to meet
But oh, the road was very hard
For that fair maiden's tender feet
Oh, Mally's meek, Mally's sweet,
Mally's modest and discreet,
Mally's rare, Mally's fair,
Mally's every way complete.

It were mair meet that those fine feet
Were weel laced up in silken shoon,
And 'twere more fit that she should sit
Within your chariot gilt aboon.

Her yellow hair, beyond compare,
Comes trinkling down her 'swan-like' neck;
And her two eyes, like stars in skies,
Would keep a sinking ship frae wreck.

THE BANKS OF CREE.

Tune—"The Banks of Cree."
Lady Elizabeth Heron having composed an air entitled "The Banks of Cree," in remembrance of a beautiful and romantic stream of that name, "I have written," says the poet, "the following song to it, as her ladyship is a particular friend of mine."

Here is the glen, and here the bower,
All underneath the birchen shade;
The village-bell has told the hour—
Oh, what can stay my lovely maid?
'Tis not Maria's whispering call;
'Tis not the balmy-breathing gale,
Mixt with some warbler's dying fall,
The dewy star of eve to hail.

It is Maria's voice I hear!
So calls the woodlark in the grove,
His little faithful mate to cheer—
At once 'tis music, and 'tis love.
And art thou come? and art thou true?
Oh, welcome, dear, to love and me!
And let us all our vows renew
Along the flowery banks of Cree.

ON THE SEAS AND FAR AWAY.
TUNE—“O’er the hills and far away.”
How can my poor heart be glad,
When absent from my sailor lad?
How can I the thought forego,
He’s on the seas to meet the foe?
Let me wander, let me rove,
Still my heart is with my love:
Nightly dreams, and thoughts by day,
Are with him that’s far away.

On the seas and far away,
On stormy seas and far away;
Nightly dreams, and thoughts by day,
Are aye with him that’s far away.

When in summer noon I faint,
As weary flocks around me pant,
Haply in the scorching sun
My sailor’s thundering at his gun:
Bullets, spare my only joy!
Bullets, spare my darling boy!
Fate, do with me what you may—
Spare but him that’s far away!

At the starless midnight hour, [power,
When winter rules with boundless
As the storms the forests tear,
And thunders rend the howling air,
Listening to the doubling roar,
Surging on the rocky shore,
All I can—i weep and pray,
For his weal that’s far away.

Peace, thy olive wand extend,
And bid wild War his ravage end,
Man with brother man to meet,
And as a brother kindly greet: [gales
Then may Heaven with prosperous
Fill my sailor’s welcome sails,
To my arms their charge convey—
My dear lad that’s far away.

CA’ THE YOWES.
This is an improved version, which the poet prepared for his friend Thomson, of a song already given at p. 229.

Ca’ the yowes to the knowes
Ca’ them where the heather grows,
Ca’ them where the burnie rowes,
My bonny dearie!

Hark the mavis’ evening sang
Sounding Cluden’s woods among!
Then a faulding let us gang,
My bonny dearie.

We’ll gae down by Cluden side,
Through the hazels spreading wide,
O’er the waves that sweetly glide,
To the moon sae clearly.

Yonder Cluden’s silent towers,
Where at moonshine midnight hours,
O’er the dewy bending flowers,
Fairies dance sae cheery.

Ghaist nor bogle shalt thou fear;
Thou’rt to love and heaven sae dear,
Nocht of ill may come thee near,
My bonny dearie.

Fair and lovely as thou art,
Thou hast stown my very heart;
I can die—but canna part—
My bonny dearie!

SHE SAYS SHE LO’ES ME BEST
OF A’.
TUNE—“Onagh’s Waterfall.”
Sae flaxen were her ringlets,
Her eyebrows of a darker hue,
Bewitchingly o’er-arching
Twa laughing een o’ bonny blue.
Her smiling sae willing,
Wad make a wretch forget his woe;
What pleasure, what treasure,
Unto these rosy lips to grow!
Such was my Chloris’ bonny face,
When first her bonny face I saw;
And aye my Chloris’ dearest charm,
She says she lo’es me best of a’.

Like harmony her motion;
Her pretty ankle is a spy,
Betraying fair proportion,
Wad mak a saint forget the sky.
Sae warming, sae charming,
Her faultless form and graceful’ air;
Ilk feature—auld Nature
Declared that she could do nae mair.
Hers are the willing chains o' love,
   By conquering beauty's sovereign law;
And aye my Chloris' dearest charm,
   She says she lo'es me best o' a'.

Let others love the city,
   And gaudy show at sunny noon;
Gie me the lonely valley,
   The dewy eve, and rising moon;
Fair beaming and streamling,
   Her silver light the boughs amang;
While falling, recalling,
   The amorous thrush concludes his
There, dearest Chloris, wilt thou rove
   By wimpling burn and leafy shaw,
And hear my vows o' truth and love,
   And say thou lo'est me best of a?

THE LOVER'S MORNING SALUTE
TO HIS MISTRESS.

TUNE—"Deil tak the wars."

"Having been out in the country dining with a friend," (Mr. Lorimer of Kemmis Hall,) says the poet in a letter to Thomson, "I met with a lady, (Mrs. Whelpdale—Chloris,) and as usual got into song, and on returning home composed the following:—

SLEEP'ST thou or wakest thou, fairest creature?
   Rosy morn now lifts his eye,
Numbering ilk bud which nature
   Waters wi' the tears o' joy:
Now through the leafy woods,
   And by the reeking floods, [stray.
Wild nature's tenants, freely, gladly,
   The lintwhite in his bower
Chants o'er the breathing flower,*
   The laverock to the sky
Ascends wi' songs o' joy,
   While the sun and thou arise to bless the day.

Phæbus, gilding the brow o' morning,
   Banishes ilk darksome shade,
Nature gladdening and adorning;
   Such to me my lovely maid.
When absent frae my fair,
   The murky shades o' care
With startless gloom o'ercast my sul-len sky;
   But when, in beauty's light,
   She meets my ravish'd sight,
When through my very heart
Her beaming glories dart— [joy.
'Tis then I wake to life, to light, and CHLORIS.

Regarding the following lines, the poet says:
—"Having been on a visit the other day to my fair Chloris—that is the poetic name of the lovely goddess of my inspiration—she suggested an idea, which, on my return home, I wrought into the following song:—

My Chloris, mark how green the groves,
The primrose banks how fair;
The balmy gales awake the flowers,
   And wave thy flaxen hair.

The laverock shuns the palace gay,
And o'er the cottage sings;
For nature smiles as sweet, I ween,
   To shepherds as to kings.

Let minstrels sweep the skilfu' string
   In lordly lighted ha':
The shepherd stops his simple reed,
   Blithe, in the birken shaw;[1]
The princely revel may survey
   Our rustic dance wi' scorn;
But are their hearts as light as ours,
   Beneath the milk-white thorn?
The shepherd in the flowery glen,
   In shepherd's phrase will woo;
The courtier tells a finer tale—
   But is his heart as true?

VAR.—
"When frae my Chloris parted,
   Sad, cheerless, broken-hearted,
Then night's gloomy shades, cloudy, dark,
   O'ercast my sky:
But when she charms my sight,
   In pride of beauty's light:
When through my very heart
   Her beaming glories dart,
'Tis then, 'tis then I wake to life and joy.'"
These wild-wood flowers I've pu'd,
To deck
That spotless breast o' thine;
The courtier's gems may witness love—
But 'tisna love like mine.

TO CHLORIS

The following lines, says the poet, were "written on the blank leaf of a copy of the last edition of my poems, and presented to the lady whom, with the most ardent sentiments of real friendship, I have so often sung under the name of Chloris."

'Tis Friendship's pledge, my young,
Fair friend,
Nor thou the gift refuse,
Nor with unwilling ear attend
The moralising Muse.

Since thou, in all thy youth and charms,
Must bid the world adieu, [arms]
(A world 'gainst peace in constant
To join the friendly few;
Since thy gay morn of life o'ercast,
Chill came the tempests lower;
(And ne'er misfortune's eastern blast
Did nip a fairer flower;)

Since life's gay scenes must charm no more,
Still much is left behind;
Still nobler wealth hast thou in store—
The comforts of the mind!

Thine is the self-approving glow
On conscious honour's part;
And—dearest gift of Heaven below—
Thine friendship's truest heart.

The joys refined of sense and taste,
With every Muse to rove:
And doubly were the poet blest,
These joys could he improve.

AH, CHLORIS!
Tune—"Major Graham."

Ah, Chloris! since it mayna be
That thou of love wilt hear;
If from the lover thou mann flee,
Yet let the friend be dear.

Although I love my Chloris mair
Than ever tongue could tell;

My passion I will ne'er declare,
I'll say, I wish thee well.

Though a' my daily care thou art,
And a' my nightly dream,
I'll hide the struggle in my heart,
And say it is esteem.

SAW YE MY PHELY?

Tune—"When she cam ben she bobbit."

Oh, saw ye my dear, my Phely?
Oh, saw ye my dear, my Phely?
She's down i' the grove, she's wi' a new love,
She winna come hame to her Willy.

What says she, my dearest, my Phely?
What says she, my dearest, my Phely?
She lets thee to wit that she has thee forgot,
And forever disowns thee, her Willy.

HOW LONG AND DREAMY IS THE NIGHT!

To a Gaelic Air.

How long and dreary is the night,
When I am frae my dearie!
I sleepless lie frae e'en to morn,
Though I were ne'er sae weary.
I sleepless lie frae e'en to morn,
Though I were ne'er sae weary.

When I think on the happy days
I spent wi' you, my dearie,
And now what lands between us lie,
How can I be but eerie?
And now what lands between us lie,
How can I be but eerie?

How slow ye move, ye heavy hours,

1 Loncil. 2 Glided.
IMPROVED VERSION.

Tune—"Ca'Sail Kail in Aberdeen."

How long and dreary is the night,
When I am frae my dearie!
I restless lie frae e'en to morn,
Though I were ne'er sae weary.

For oh! her lonely nights are lang;
And oh, her dreams are eerie;
And oh, her widower's heart is sair,
That's absent frae her dearie.

When I think on the lightsome days
I spent wi' thee, my dearie;
And now what seas between us roar—
How can I be but eerie?

How slow ye move, ye heavy hours!
The joyless day how dreary!
When sae ye glinted by,
Where I was wi' my dearie.

LET NOT WOMAN E'ER COMPLAIN.

Tune—"Duncan Gray."

"I have been at 'Duncan Gray,' says the poet to Thomson, "to dress it into English; but all I can do is deplorably stupid. For instance:"—

LET not woman e'er complain
Of inconstancy in love;
Let not woman e'er complain
Fickle man is apt to rove:
Look abroad through nature's range,
Nature's mighty law is change;
Ladies, would it not be strange,
Man should then a monster prove?

Mark the winds, and mark the skies;
Ocean's ebb, and ocean's flow:
Sun and moon but set to rise,
Round and round the seasons go:
Why then ask of silly man
To oppose great Nature's plan?
We'll be constant while we can—
You can be no more, you know.

THE CHARMING MONTH OF MAY.

The poet having given the following English dress to an old Scotch ditty, says, in transmitting it to Thomson:—"You may think meanly of this; but if you saw the bombast of the original you would be surprised that I had made so much of it."

IT was the charming month of May,
When all the flowers were fresh and gay,
One morning by the break of day,
The youthful, charming Chloe;
From peaceful slumber she awoke,
Girt on her mantle and her hose,
And o'er the flowery mead she goes,
The youthful, charming Chloe.

Lovely was she by the dawn,
Youthful Chloe, charming Chloe;
Tripping o'er the pearly lawn,
The youthful, charming Chloe.

The feather'd people you might see
Perch'd all around, on every tree,
In notes of sweetest melody,
They hail the charming Chloe;
Till painting gay the eastern skies,
The glorious sun began to rise,
Out-riv'ld by the radiant eyes
Of youthful, charming Chloe.

LASSIE WI' THE LINT-WHITE LOCKS.

Tune—"Rothemurche's Rant.

"This piece," says the poet, "has at least the merit of being a regular pastoral: the verbal merna, the summer noon, the autumnal evening, and the winter night, are regularly rounded."

Now nature cleeds the flowery lea,
And a' is young and sweet like thee;
Oh, wilt thou share its joy wi' me,
And say thou'lt be my dearie, O?

Lassie wi' the lint-white locks,
Bonny lassie, artless lassie,
Wilt thou wi' me tent the flocks?
Wilt thou be my dearie, O?

And when the welcome simmer-shower
Has cheer'd ilk drooping little flower,
We'll to the breathing woodbine bower
At sultry noon, my dearie, O.

When Cynthia lights wi' silver ray,
The weary shearer's homeward way:
Through yellow waving fields we'll stray,
And talk o' love, my dearie, O.

1 Clothes. 2 Tend. 3 Reapers.
And when the howling wintry blast
Disturbs my lassie's midnight rest;
Enclasped to my faithfu' breast,
I'll comfort thee, my dearie, O.

FAREWELL, THOU STREAM.

_Tune—"Nancy's to the greenwood gane."_
This song appears to be an improved version of the one entitled, "The last time I came o'er the moor," (p. 253,) with the substitution of the name Eliza for that of Maria. This change probably arose from the poet's quarrel with Mrs. Riddel having rendered her name distasteful to him. See the introduction to the song entitled, "Canst thou leave me thus, my Katy?" in the following page.

FAREWELL, thou stream that winding flows
_Around Eliza's dwelling!_
_O Memory! spare the cruel throes_
_Within my bosom swelling:_
_Condemn'd to drag a hopeless chain,_
_And yet in secret languish;_
_To feel a fire in every vein,_
_Nor dare disclose my anguish._

Love's veriest wretch, unseen, unknown,
I fain my griefs would cover;
The bursting sigh, th' unwee'ting groan,
Betray the hapless lover.
I know thou dost me to despair,
Nor wilt, nor canst, relieve me;
But oh, Eliza, hear one prayer—
For pitty's sake, forgive me!

The music of thy voice I heard,
Nor wist while it enslaved me,
I saw thine eyes, yet nothing fear'd,
'Till fears no more had saved me:
The unwary sailor thus aghast,
The wheeling torrent viewing;
Mid circling horrors sinks at last
In overwhelming ruin.

OH PHILLY, HAPPY BE THAT DAY.

_Tune—"The Sow's Tail."_
_O Philly, happy be that day,_
_When roving through the gather'd hay,_
_My youthful' heart was stown away,_
_And by thy charms, my Philly._

_SHE._

O Willy, aye I bless the grove
Where I first own'd my maiden love,
Whilst thou didst pledge the Powers above
To be my ain dear Willy.

 HE.

As songsters of the early year
Are ilka day mair sweet to hear,
So ilka day to me mair dear,
And charming is my Philly.

_SHE._

The milder sun and bluer sky
That crown my harvest cares wi' joy,
Wee never so welcome to my eye
As is a sight o' Philly.

 HE.

The little swallow's wanton wing,
Though wafting o'er the flowery spring,
Did ne'er to me sic tidings bring
As meeting o' my Willy.

_SHE._

The bee that through the sunny hour
Sips nectar in the opening flower,
Compared wi' my delight is poor,
Upon the lips o' Philly.

 SHE._

The woodbine in the dewy weet
When evening shades in silence meet,
Is nocht sae fragrant or sae sweet
As is a kiss o' Willy.

 HE.

Let Fortune's wheel at random rin,
And fools may tyne, and knaves may win;
My thoughts are a' bound up in ane,
And that's my ain dear Philly.

_SHE._

What's a' the joys that gowd can gie,
I carena wealth a single flie;
The lad I love's the lad for me,
And that's my ain dear Willy.
CONTENDED WI' LITTLE.
TUNE—"Lumps o' Pudding."
This song is entitled to more than ordinary attention, as it appears the poet meant it for a personal sketch: for, in a letter to Thomson, thanking him for the present of a picture of "The Cotter's Saturday Night," by David Allan, the leading painter of the day, he says—"Ten thousand thanks for your elegant present. I have some thoughts of suggesting to you to prefix a vignette of me to my song. 'Contented wi' little, and cantie wi' mair,' in order that the portrait of my face, and the picture of my mind, may go down the stream of time together."

CANST THOU LEAVE ME THUS,
MY KATY?
TUNE—"Roy's Wife."
This song, which the poet says he composed in two or three turns across his little room, was meant as a representation of the kindly feelings which he now once more began to entertain for his former beautiful and fascinating friend, Mrs. Riddel of Woodley Park. She replied to his song in a similar strain of poetic licence. The poet, it will be observed, with the usual freedom of the sons of Apollo, addresses her as a mistress, and in that character she replies to him.

Is this thy plighted, fond reward,
Thus cruelly to part, my Katy?
Is this thy faithful swain's regard—
An aching, broken heart, my Katy?

Canst thou leave me thus, my Katy?
Canst thou leave me thus, my Katy?

* The following are the pieces which Mrs Riddel sent to the poet in reply to his song.—
TUNE—"Roy's Wife,"
"Tell me that thou yet art true,
And a'my wrongs shall be forgiven;
And when this heart proves false to thee,
Yon sun shall cease its course in heaven.

"Stay, my Willie—yet believe me,
Stay, my Willie—yet believe me,
For, ah! thou know'st na every pang [me.
Wad wring my bosom, shouldst thou leave

"But to think I was betray'd,
[sunder!
That falsehood e'er our loves should
To take the floweret to my breast,
And find the guilefu' serpent under.

"Could I hope thou'dst ne'er deceive,
Celestial pleasures might I choose 'em,
I'd slight, nor seek in other spheres
That heaven I'd find within thy bosom.

"Stay, my Willie—yet believe me,
Stay, my Willie—yet believe me,
For ah! thou know'st na every pang
Wad wring my bosom, shouldst thou leave me."

"To thee, loved Nith, thy gladsome plains,
Where late with careless thought I ranged,
Though prest with care, and sunk in woe,
To thee I bring a heart unchanged.
I love thee, Nith, thy banks and braes,
Though Memory there my bosom tear,
For there he roved that broke my heart,
Yet to that heart, ah, still how dear!

"And now your banks and bonny braes
But waken sad remembrance' smart;
The very shades I held most dear
Now strike fresh anguish to my heart;
Deserted bower! where are they now—
Ah! where the garlands that I wove
With faithful care, each morn to deck
The altars of ungrateful love?

"The flowers of spring, how gay they bloom'd,
When last with him I wander'd here!
The flowers of spring are pass'd away
For wintry horrors, dark and drear.
Yon osier'd stream, by whose lone banks
My songs have lull'd him oft to rest,
Is now in icy fetters lock'd—
Cold as my false love's frozen breast."
Well thou knowest my aching heart—
And canst thou leave me thus for Farewell! and ne'er such sorrows tear
That fickle heart of thine, my Katy!
Thou mayst find those will love thee,
But not a love like mine, Katy!

Indeed, maun I, quo’ Findlay.
What mak ye sae like a thief?
Oh, come and see, quo’ Findlay;
Before the morn ye’ll work mischief—

LINES ON A MERRY
PLOUGHMAN.

As I was a wandering ae morning in spring, [sweetly to sing;
I heard a merry ploughman say

1 Way. 2 If. 3 Remain.
1 Bought. 2 Hauss-lock—the wool from the throat—the finest of the flock.

1 Plenty. 2 Old women. 3 Women.
And as he was singin' thae words he did say,
There's nae life like the ploughman's in the mouth o' sweet May.
The laverock in the morning she'll rise free her nest,
And mount in the air wi' the dew on
And wi' the merry ploughman she'll whistle and sing; [back again.
And at night she'll return to her nest.

THE WINTER OF LIFE.

Tune—"Gil Morice."
But lately seen in gladsome green,
The woods rejoiced the day;
Through gentle showers the laughing flowers
In double pride were gay:
But now our joys are fled
On winter blasts awa'!
Yet maiden May in rich array,
Again shall bring then a'.

But my white pow'! nae kindly thowe,²
Shall melt the snaws of age;
My trunk of cild,³ but¹ buss or bield⁴
Sinks in Time's wintry rage.
Oh! age has weary days,
And nights o' sleepless pain!
Thou golden time o' youthfu' prime,
Why comest thou not again!

ILL AYE CA' IN BY YON TOWN.

Tune—"I'll gae nae mair to yon town."
I'll aye ca' in by yon town,
And by yon garden green, again;
I'll aye ca' in by yon town,
And see my bonny Jean again.

There's nane sall ken, there's nane sall guess,
What brings me back the gate again;
But she, my fairest, faithful' lass,
And stowllins¹ we sall meet again.
She'll wander by the aiken tree,
When trystin'-time draws near again;
And when her lovely form I see,
Oh, haith, she's doubly dear again!

I'll aye ca' in by yon town,
And by yon garden green, again;
I'll aye ca' in by yon town,
And see my bonny Jean again.

THE GOWDEN LOCKS OF ANNA.

Tune—"Banks of Banna."
"A Dumfries maiden," says Cunningham
"with a light foot and a merry eye, was the heroine of this clever song. Burns thought so well of it himself that he recommended it to Thomson; but the latter—aware, perhaps, of the free character of her of the gowden locks, excluded it, though pressed to publish it by the poet. Irritated, perhaps, at Thomson's refusal, he wrote the additional stanza, by way of postscript, in defiance of his colder-blooded critic."

YESTREEN I had a pint o' wine,
A place where body saw na;
Yestreen lay on this breast o' mine
The gowden locks of Anna.
The hungry Jew in wilderness,
Rejoicing o'er his manna,
Was naething to my hinnys bliss
Upon the lips of Anna.

Ye monarchs tak the east and west,
Frah Indus to Savannah!
Gie me within my straining grasp
The melting form of Anna.
There I'll despise imperial charms,
An empress or sultana,
While dying raptures in her arms
I give and take with Anna!

Awa', thou flaunting god o' day!
Awa', thou pale Diana!
Ilk star gae hide thy twinkling ray,
When I'm to meet my Anna.
Come, in thy raven plumage, Night!
Sun, moon, and stars withdrawn a',
And bring an angel pen to write
My transports wi' my Anna!

POSTSCRIPT.

The kirk and state may join, and tell
To do such things I maunna;
The kirk and state may gae to hell,
And I'll gae to my Anna.
She is the sunshine o' my ee,—
To live but¹ her I canna;
Had I on earth but wishes three,
The first should be my Anna.

HAD I THE WYTE.

Tune—"Had I the wyte?—she bade me."

HAD I THE WYTE.
Had I the wyte, I had the wyte,
Had I the wyte?—she bade me;
She watch'd me by the hie-gate side,
And up the loan she shaw'd me;
And when I wadna venture in,
A coward loon she ca'd me;
Had kirk and state been in the gate,
I lighted when she bade me.

Sae craftlie she took me ben,
And bade me make nae clatter; man
"For our ramgunshoch, glum guid-
Is o'er ayont the water?"
Whae'er shall say I wanted grace,
When I did kiss and dawe her,
Let him be planted in my place,

Could I for shame, could I for shame,
Could I for shame refuse her?
And wadna manhood been to blame
Had I unkindly used her?
He claw'd her wi' the riplin-kame,
And blae and bluidy bruised her;
When sic a husband was frae hame,
What wife but wad excused her?

I dight'd aye her een sae blue,
And bann'd the cruel randy;
And weel I wot her willing mou'
Was e'en like sugar candy.
At gloamin'-shot it was, I trow,
I lighted on the Monday;
But I cam through the Tysday's dew,
To wanton Willie's brandy.

CALEDONIA.

Tune—"Caledonian Hunt's Delight."

TUERRE.
Tuere was once a day—but old Time

From Tweed to the Orcades was her domain,

Her heavenly relations there fixed her reign.

A lambkin in peace, but a lion in war,
The pride of her kindred the heroine grew:
[swore,
Her grandsire, old Odin, triumphantly
"Who e'er shall provoke thee thine encounter shall rue!"
With tillage or pasture at times she would sport,
[rustling corn;
To feed her fair flocks by her green
But chiefly the woods were her favourite resort,
[and the horn.
Her darling amusement the hounds
Long quiet she reign'd; till thitherward steers [stream,
A flight of bold eagles from Adria's
Repeated, successive, for many long years,
They darken'd the air, and they plunder'd the land:
Their pounces were murder, and terror their cry, [beside;
They'd conquer'd and ruin'd a world
She took to her hills, and her arrows let fly—[died.
The daring invaders they fled or they
The fell harpy-raven took wing from the north,
The scourge of the seas, and the dread of the shore!
The wild Scandinavian boar issued forth
[in gore;
To wanton in carnage, and wallow
O'er countries and kingdoms their fury prevai'd,
[could repel;
No arts could appease them, no arms
But brave Caledonia in vain they assailed, [cartie tell.
As Largs well can witness, and Lon-
The Cameleon—savage disturb'd her repos,

With tumult, disquiet, rebellion and
Provoked beyond bearing, at last she arose,

And robb'd him at once of his hopes
The Anglian lion, the terror of France,
Oft prowling, ensanguined the Tweed's silver flood:

But, taught by the bright Caledonian
He learn'd to fear in his own native wood.
Thus bold, independent, unconquer'd, and free,

THE FAREWELL.
Tune—"It was a' for our rightfu' king."

It was a' for our rightfu' king
We left fair Scotland's strand;
It was a' for our rightfu' king
We e'er saw Irish land, my dear,
We e'er saw Irish land.

Now a' is done that men can do,
And a' is done in vain;
My love and native land farewell,
For I maun cross the main, my dear,
For I maun cross the main.

He turn'd him right and round about,
Upon the Irish shore:
And gae his bridle-reins a shake,
With adieu for evermore, my dear,
With adieu for evermore.

The sodger frae the wars returns,
The sailor frae the main;
But I hae parted frae my love,
Never to meet again, my dear,
Never to meet again.

Tune—"Cauld is the e'enin' blast.'

Cauld is the e'enin' blast
O' Boreas o'er the pool;
And dawin' it is dreary
When birks are bare at Yule.

Oh, cauld blaws the e'enin' blast
When bitter bites the frost,
And in the mirk and dreary drift
The hills and glens are lost.
Ne'er sae murky blew the night
That drifted o'er the hill,
But bonny Peg-a-Ramsay

HEE BALOU!
Tune—"The Highland Balou."

Concerning this song, Cromek says:—"The time when the moss-troopers and cattle-drivers on the Borders began their nightly depredations was the first Michaelmas moon. Cattle-stealing formerly was a mere foraging expedition; and it has been remarked that many of the best families in the north can trace their descent from the daring sons of the mountains. The produce
(by way of dowry to a laird's daughter) of a Michaelmas moon is proverbial; and by the aid of Lochiel's lanthorn (the moon) these exploits were the most desirable things imaginable. In the 'Hee Balou' we see one of those heroes in the cradle.'

AMONG THE TREES, WHERE HUMMING BEES.

Tune—"The king of France, he rode a race."

Among the trees, where humming bees
At buds and flowers were hinging,
And Caledon drew out her drone,
And to her pipe was singing. O;
'Twas piobroch, sang, strathspey, or reels,
She dirld them aff fu' clearly, O,
When there cam a yell o' foreign squeels,

He fired a fiddler in the north
That dang them tapsalteerie, O.

CASSILLIS' BANKS.

Tune—Unknown.

Now bank and brae are clathed in green,
And scatter'd cowslips sweetly spring;
By Girvan's fairy-haunted stream
'The birdies flit on wanton wing,
To Cassillis' banks, when e'enin' fa's,
There, wi' my Mary, let me flee,
There catch her ilka glance of love,
The bonny blink o' Mary's ce!

The chield wha boasts o' world's walth

But Mary, she is a' mine ain—
Ah! Fortune canna gie me mair!
Then let me range by Cassillis' banks,
Wi' her, the lassie dear to me,
And catch her ilka glance o' love,

BANNOCKS O' BARLEY.

Tune—"The Killogie."

Bannocks o' bear-meal,
Bannocks o' barley;
Here's to the Highlandman's

Wha in a brulzie,
Will first cry a parley?
Never the lads wi'
The bannocks o' barley!

Bannocks o' bear-meal,
Bannocks o' barley;
Here's to the Highlandman's
Bannocks o' barley!
Wha, in his wae-days,
Were loyal to Charlie?
Wha but the lads wi'
The bannocks o' barley?

SAE FAR AWA'.

Tune—"Dalkeith Maiden Bridge."

Oh, sad and heavy should I part,
But for her sake sae far awa';

2 Prosper. 3 Plunder. 1 Bear. 2 Country talk.
1 Topsy-turvey. 2 Ears. 3 Weary. 4 Band. 5 Pick.
6 Ghost. 1 Broil.
Unknowing what my way may thwart,
My native land, sae far awa'.
Thou that of a' things Maker art,
That form'd this fair sae far awa',
Gie body strength, then I'll ne'er start
At this, my way, sae far awa'.

How true is love to pure desert,
So love to her sae far awa'.
And noch't can heal my bosom's smart
While, oh! she is sae far awa'.
None other love, none other dart,
I feel but hers, sae far awa';
But fairer never touch'd a heart
Than hers, the fair, sae far awa'.

HER FLOWING LOCKS.

Tune—Unknown.

Her flowing locks, the raven's wing,
Adown her neck and bosom hing;
How sweet unto that breast to cling,
And round that neck entwine her!

Her lips are roses wat wi' dew,
Oh what a feast her bonny mou'!
Her cheeks a mair celestial hue,
A crimson still diviner.

THE HIGHLAND LADIE.

Tune—"If thou'll play me fair play."

The bonniest lad that e'er I saw,
Bonny laddie, Highland laddie,
Wore a plaid, and was fu' braw,
Bonny Highland laddie.

On his head a bonnet blue,
Bonny laddie, Highland laddie;
His royal heart was firm and true,
Bonny Highland laddie.

Trumpets sound, and cannons roar,
Bonny lassie, Lowland lassie;
And a' the hills wi' echoes roar,
Bonny Lowland lassie.

Glory, honour, now invite,
Bonny lassie, Lowland lassie,
For freedom and my king to fight,
Bonny Lowland lassie.

The sun a backward course shall take,
Bonnie laddie, Highland laddie,
Ere aught thy manly courage shake,
Bonny Highland laddie.

Go! for yourself procure renown,
Bonny laddie, Highland laddie;
And for your lawful king his crown,
Bonny Highland Laddie.

THE LASS THAT MADE THE BED TO ME.

Tune—"The lass that made the bed to me."

The poet, in his notes to the Museum, says regarding this song:—"The bonny lass that made the bed to me was composed on an amour of Charles II., when skulking in the north about Aberdeen, in the time of the usurpation. He formed une petite affaire with a daughter of the house of Port Letham, who was the lass that made the bed to him."

When Januar' wind was blowing cauld,
As to the north I took my way,
The mirksome! night did me enfauld,
I knew na where to lodge till day.

By my good luck a maid I met,
Just in the middle o' my care;
And kindly she did me invite
To walk into a chamber fair.

I bow'd fu' low unto this maid,
And thank'd her for her courtesie;
I bow'd fu' low unto this maid,
And bade her make a bed for me.

She made the bed baith large and wide,
Wi' twa white hands she spread it down,
She put the cup to her rosy lips,
And drank, "Young man, now sleep ye soun'."

She snatch'd the candle in her hand,
And frae my chamber went wi' speed;
But I call'd her quickly back again,
To lay some mair below my head.

A cod she laid below my head,
And serv'd me wi' due respect;
And, to salute her wi' a kiss,
I put my arms about her neck.

"Hand off your hands, young man," she says.
"And dinna sae uncivil be:
Gif ye hae ony love for me,
Oh, wrang na my virginitie!"
Her hair was like the links o' gowd,
Her teeth were like the ivorie;
Her cheeks like lillies dipt in wine,
The lass that made the bed to me.

Her bosom was the driven snae,
Twa drifted heaps sae fair to see;
Her limbs the polish'd marble stane,
The lass that made the bed to me.

I kiss'd her ovre and ovre again,
And aye she wist na what to say;
I laid her between me and the wa'-
The lassie thought na lang till day.

Upon the morrow, when we rose,
I thank'd her for her courttesie;
But aye she blush'd, and aye she sigh'd,
And said, "Alas! ye've ruin'd me."

I clasp'd her waist, and kiss'd her syne,
While the tear stood twinkling in her ee;
I said, "My lassie, dinna cry,
For ye aye shall mak the bed to me."

She took her mither's Holland sheets,
And made them a' in sarks to me.
Blithe and merry may she be,
The lass that made the bed to me.

The bonny lass made the bed to me,
The braw lass made the bed to me;
I'll ne'er forget, till the day I die,
The lass that made the bed to me!

THE LASS OF ECCLEFECHAN.
TUNE—"Jacky Latin."

Gat ye me, oh, gat ye me,
Oh, gat ye me wi' naething?
Rock and reel, and spinnin' wheel,
A mickle quarter basin.

Bye attour,1 my gutter2 has
'A heigh house and a laigh ane,
A' forbye my bonny sel,
The toss of Ecclefechan.

Oh, haud your tongue now, Luckie Laing,
Oh, haud your tongue and jauner;3
I held the gate till you I met,
Syne I began to wander;

I tint4 my whistle and my sang,
I tint my peace and pleasure;
But your green graff5 now, Luckie Laing,
Wad airt6 me to my treasure.

THE COOPER O' CUDDIE
TUNE—"Bob at the Bowster."

The cooper o' Cuddie cam here awa';
He ca'd the girs'7 out owre us a'—
And our guidwife has gotten a ca'—
That anger'd the silly guidman, O.

We'll hide the cooper behind the door,
Behind the door, behind the door,
We'll hide the cooper behind the door,
[O.
And cover him under a mawn,2

He sought them out, he sought them in,
Wi' Deil hae her! and, Deil hae him!
But the body he was sae doited3 and blin',
He wistna where he was gau'n, O.

They cooper'd at e'en, they cooper'd at morn,
Till our guidman has gotten the scorn.
On ilka brow she's planted a horn,
And swears that there they shall stan', O.

THE HIGHLAND WIDOW'S LAMENT.

Oh! I am come to the low countrie
Och-on, och-on, och-rie!
Without a penny in my purse
To buy a meal to me.

It wasna sae in the Highland hills,
Och-on, och-on, och-rie!
Nae woman in the country wide
Sae happy was as me.

For then I had a score o' kye,
Och-on, och-on, och-rie!
Feeding on yon hills so high,
And giving milk to me.

---

1 Besides. 2 Grandsire. 3 Complaining. 4 Lost. 5 Grave. 6 Direct.
1 Hoops. 2 Basket. 3 Stupid.
And there I had threescore o' yowes,
Och-on, och-on, och-rie!
Skipping on yon bonny knowes,
And casting woo' to me.
I was the happiest of a' the clan,
Sair, sair may I repine;
For Donald was the bravest man,
And Donald he was mine.
Till Charlie Stuart cam at last,
Sae far to set us free;
My Donald's arm was wanted then
For Scotland and for me.
Their waefu' fate what need I tell?
Right to the wrang did yield:
My Donald and his country fell
Upon Culloden field.
Och-on, O Donald, oh!
Och-on, och-on, och-rie!
Nae woman in the world wide
Sae wretched now as me.

THERE WAS A BONNY LASS.

There was a bonny lass,
And a bonny, bonny lass,
And she lo'ed her bonny laddie dear;
Till war's loud alarms
Tore her laddie frae her arms,
Wi' mony a sigh and a tear.

Over sea, over shore,
Where the cannons loudly roar,
He still was a stranger to fear;
And nocht could him quail,
Or his bosom assail,
But the bonny lass he lo'ed sae dear.

OH WAT YE WHAT MY MINNIE DID?

Oh, wat ye what my minnie did,
My minnie did, my minnie did;
Oh, wat ye what my minnie did,
On Tuesday 'teen to me, jo?
She laid me in a saft bed,
A saft bed, a saft bed.
She laid me in a saft bed,
And bade guid e'en to me, jo.

And wat ye what the parson did,
The parson did, the parson did,
And wat ye what the parson did,
A' for a penny fee, jo?
He loosed on me a lang man,
A mickle man, a strang man,
He loosed on me a lang man,
That might hae worried me, jo.

And I was but a young thing,
A young thing, a young thing,
And I was but a young thing,
Wi' nane to pity me, jo.
I wat the kirk was in the wyte, 1
In the wyte, in the wyte,
To pit a young thing in a fright,
And loose a man on me, jo.

——

OH, GUID ALE COMES.

CHORUS.

Oh, guid ale comes, and guid ale goes,
Guid ale gars' me sell my hose,
Sell my hose, and pawn my shoon,
Guid ale keeps my heart aboon.
I had sax' owsen in a pleugh,
They drew a' weel enough;
I sell'd them a' just ane by ane;
Guid ale keeps my heart aboon;
Guid ale hands me hae and busy,
Gars me moop 2 wi' the servart hizzie;
Stand i' the stool when I hae done;
Guid ale keeps my heart aboon.

COMING THROUGH THE BRAES O' CUPAR.

DONALD Brodie met a lass
Coming o'er the braes o' Cupar;
Donald, wi' his Highland hand,
Riffed ilka charm about her.

CHORUS.

Coming o'er the braes o' Cupar,
Coming o' er the braes o' Cupar,
Highland Donald met a lass,
And row'd his Highland plaid about her.

1 Blame.
2 Romp.
3 Wench.
GUID E'EN TO YOU, KIMMER.

Tune—"We're a' noddin."

GUID e'en to you, kimmer, And how do ye do?
Hiccup, quo' kimmer, The better that I'm fou.
[ din,
We're a' noddin, nid, nid, nod-
We're a' noddin at our house at hame.

Kate sits i' the neuk, Suppin' hen broo;
Deil tak Kate, An she be na noddin too!

How's a' wi' you, kimmer, And how do ye fare?
A plint o' the best o', And twa pints mair.

How's a' wi' you, kimmer, And how do ye thrive?
How mony bairns hae ye? Quo' kimmer, I hae five.

Are they a' Johnny's? Eh! atweel, na:
'Twa o' them were gotten \\
When Johnny was awa'.

Cats like milk, And dogs like broo,
Lads like lasses weil, And lasses lads too.
[ din,
We're a' noddin, nid, nid, nod-
We're a' noddin at our house at hame.

MEG O' THE MILL.

Tune—"Jackie Hume's Lament."

This second version of "Meg o' the Mill," (p. 252) prepared by the poet for the Museum, was founded on an old ditty, which he altered and amended.

Oh, ken ye what Meg o' the Mill has gotten, And ken ye what Meg o' the Mill has A braw new naig' wi' the tail o' a rottan, And that's what Meg o' the Mill has

Oh, ken ye what Meg o' the Mill lo'es dearly? And ken ye what Meg o' the Mill lo'es
A dram o' guid strunt in a morning early, And that's what Meg o' the Mill lo'es

Oh, ken ye how Meg o' the Mill was married, And ken ye how Meg o' the Mill was
The priest he was oxter'd, the clerk he was carried, And that's how Meg o' the Mill was

Oh, ken ye how Meg o' the Mill was bedded, And ken ye how Meg o' the Mill was
The groom gat sae fou, he fell twa-fauld beside it, And that's how Meg o' the Mill was YOUNG JAMIE PRIDE OF A' THE PLAIN.

Tune—"The Carlin o' the Glen."

Young Jamie, pride of a' the plain, Sae gallant and sae gay a swain;
Through a' our lasses he did rove, And reign'd resistless king of love:
But now, wi' sighs and starting tears, He strays among the woods and briers;
Or in the glens and rocky caves, His sad complaining dowie raves:

"I wha sae late did range and rove, And changed with every moon my love, I little thought the time was near Repentance I should buy sae dear:

1 Head. 2 Run. 3 Sure.
1 Lass. 2 Corner. 3 Broth.
1 A riding-horse. 2 Whisky. 3 Drunk.
1 Sadly.
The slighted maids my torments see,
And laugh at a' the pangs I dree;
While she, my cruel, scornfu' fair,
Forbids me e'er to see her mair!

COMING THROUGH THE RYE.
Tune—"Coming through the rye."

Coming through the rye, poor body,
She draiglet a' her petticoatie,
Coming through the rye.

O Jenny's a' wat, poor body,
Jenny's seldom dry;
She draiglet a' her petticoatie,
Coming through the rye.

Gin a body meet a body
Coming through the rye;
Gin a body kiss a body—
Need a body cry?

Gin a body meet a body
Coming through the glen;
Gin a body kiss a body—
Need the world ken?

THE CARLES OF DYSART.
Tune—"Hey, ca' through."

Up wi' the carles o' Dysart
And the lads o' Buckhaven,
And the kimmers o' Largo,
And the lasses o' Leven.

Hey, ca' through, ca' through,
For we hae mickle ado;
Hey, ca' through, ca' through,
For we hae mickle ado.

We hae tales to tell,
And we hae songs to sing;
We hae pennies to spend,
And we hae pints to bring.

We'll live a' our days,
And them that come behin',
Let them do the like,
And spend the gear they win.

IS THERE, FOR HONEST POVERTY.

Tune—"For a' that and a' that."

Of the following song—one of the most striking and characteristic effusions of his Muse—he says, evidently in a strain of affected depreciation:—"A great critic on songs says that love and wine are the exclusive themes for song-writing. The following is on neither subject, and is consequently no song; but will be allowed, I think, to be two or three pretty good prose thoughts inverted into rhyme."

Is there, for honest poverty,
That hangs his head, and a' that?
The coward slave, we pass him by,
We dare be poor for a' that!

For a' that, and a' that;
Our toils obscure, and a' that;
The rank is but the guinea-stamp,
The man's the gowd for a' that.

What though on namely fare we dine,
Wear hadden gray, and a' that;
Gie fools their silks, and knives their wine,
A man's a man for a' that!

For a' that, and a' that,
Their tinsel show, and a' that;
The honest man, though e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men for a' that!

Ye see yon birkie,* ca'd a lord,
Wha struts, and stares, and a' that;
Though hundreds worship at his word,
He's but a coof for a' that:

For a' that, and a' that,
His riband, star, and a' that;
The man of independent mind,
He looks and laughs at a' that!

A king can mak a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, and a' that;
But an honest man's aboon his might,
Gud faith he maunna fa' that!

For a' that, and a' that,
Their dignities, and a' that,
The pith o' sense, and pride o' worth,
Are higher ranks than a' that.

1 Fool.  2 "He maunna fa' that"—he must not try that.

* Primarily, the word signifies a lively, mettlesome young fellow; but here the poet's meaning would be better rendered by the words—a proud, affected person.

1 Men.  2 Women.  3 Push.
Then let us pray that come it may—
As come it will for a' that—
That sense and worth, o'er a' the earth,
May bear the gree, and a' that:
For a' that, and a' that,
It's comin' yet for a' that,
That man to man, the warld o'er,
Shall brothers be for a' that.

O LASSIE, ART THOU SLEEPING YET?

Tune—"Let me in this ae night."
O LASSIE, art thou sleeping yet,
Or art thou waking, I would wit?
For love has bound me hand and foot,
And I would fain be in, jo.
Oh, let me in this ae night,
This ae, ae, ae night,
For pity's sake this ae night,
Oh, rise and let me in, jo!
Thou hearst the winter wind and weet,
Nae star blinks through the driving sleet:
Tak pity on my weary feet,
And shield me frae the rain, jo.
Th' bitter blast that round me blows,
Unheeded howls, unheeded fa's:
The cauldness o' thy heart's the cause
Of a' my grief and pain, jo.

HER ANSWER.
Oh, tell na me o' wind and rain,
Upbraid na me wi' cauld disdain!
Gae back the gate ye cam again,
I winna let ye in, jo.
I tell you now this ae night,
This ae, ae, ae night;
And ance for a', this ae night,
I winna let you in, jo.
The snellest, blast at milkest hours,
That round the pathless wanderer pours,
Is nocht to what poor she endures
That's trusted faithless man, jo.
The sweetest flower that deck'd the mead,
Now trodden like the vilest weed;

1 Sharpest.

Let simple maid the lesson read,
The weird may be her ain, jo.
The bird that charm'd his summer day
Is now the cruel fowler's prey;
Let witless, trusting woman say
How aft her fate's the same, jo.

THE HERON ELECTION BALLADS.

BALLAD I.

Whom will you send to London town,
To Parliament, and a' that?
Or wha in a' the country round
The best deserves to fa' that?
For a' that, and a' that,
Through Galloway and a' that;
Where is the laird or belted knight
That best deserves to fa' that?
Wha sees Kerroughtree's open yet,\(^1\)
And wha is't never saw that?
Wha ever wi' Kerroughtree met,
And has a doubt of a' that?
For a' that, and a' that,
Here's Heron yet for a' that!
The independent patriot,
The honest man, and a' that.

Though wit and worth in either sex,
St. Mary's Isle can shaw that;
Wi' duces and lords let Selkirk mix,
And weel does Selkirk fa' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
Here's Heron yet for a' that!
The independent commoner
Shall be the man for a' that.

But why should we to nobles jouk?\(^2\)
And it's against the law that;
For why, a' lord may be a gouk\(^3\)
Wi' ribbon, star, and a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
Here's Heron yet for a' that!
A lord may be a lousy loun
Wi' ribbon, star, and a' that.

A beardless boy comes o'er the hills
Wi' uncle's purse and a' that;
But we'll hae ane frae 'mang oursels,
A man we ken, and a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,

1 Gate.  2 Bend.  3 Fool.
Here's Heron yet for a' that!
For we're not to be bought and sold
Like naigs, and nowt,\(^4\) and a' that.

Then let us drink the Stewarty,
Kerroughtree's laird, and a' that,
Our representative to be,
For weel he's worthy a' that.
For a' that, and a' that,
Here's Heron yet for a' that!
A House of Commons such as he,
They would be blest that saw that.

BALLAD II.

Tune—"\(^\text{\textit{Fy}}\) let us a' to the bridal."

\(^\text{\textit{Fy}},\) let us a' to Kirkcudbright,
For there will be bickering there;
For Murray's light horse are to muster,
And oh, how the heroes will swear!

And there will be Murray,\(^1\) commander,
And Gordon,\(^2\) the battle to win;
Like brothers they'll stand by each other,
Sae knit in alliance and kin.

And there will be black-nebbit Johnnie,\(^3\)
The tongue o' the trump to them a';
An he gets na hell for his haddin'
The devil gets na justice ava';

And there will be Kempletoun's birkie,\(^4\)
A boy na sae black at the bane,
But, as for his fine nabob fortune,
We'll e'en let the subject alone.

And there will be Wigton's new sheriff,\(^5\)
Dame Justice fu' brawlie has sped,
She's gotten the heart of a Bushby,
But, Lord ! what's become o' the head?

---

4 Cattle.

\(^1\) Murray of Broughton.
\(^2\) Gordon of Balmaghie.
\(^3\) Mr. John Bushby, a sharp-witted lawyer, for whom the poet had a little aversion.
\(^4\) William Bushby of Kempletoun, brother of the above, who had made a fortune in India, but which was popularly thought to have originated in some questionable transactions connected with the ruinous affair of the Ayr Bank before he went abroad.
\(^5\) Mr. Bushby Maitland, son of John, and recently appointed Sheriff of Wigtonshire.

And there will be Cardoness,\(^6\) Esquire,
Sae mighty in Cardoness' eyes,
A wight that will weather damnation,
For the devil the prey will despise.

And there will be Kenmure,\(^7\) sae generous!
Whose honour is proof to the storm;
To save them from stark reprobation,
He lent them his name to the firm.

But we winna mention Redcastle,\(^8\)
The body, e'en let him escape!
He'd venture the gallows for siller,
An 'twere na the cost o' the rape.

And where is our king's lord-lieutenant,
Sae famed for his grateful return?
The billie is getting his questions,
To say in St. Stephen's the morn.

And there will be Douglasses\(^9\) doughty,
New-christening towns far and near;
Abjuring their democrat doings,
By kissing the — of a peer.

And there will be lads o' the gospel,
Muirhead,\(^10\) wha's as good as he's true;
And there will be Buittle's apostle,\(^11\)
Wha's mair o' the black than the blue.

And there will be folk frae St. Mary's,
A house o' great merit and note,
The devil a' but honours them highly,—
The devil a' will gie them his vote!

And there will be wealthy young Richard,\(^12\)
[neck; Dame Fortune should hing by the
For prodigal, thriftless, bestowing,
His merit had won him respect.

And there will be rich brother nabobs,
Though nabobs, yet men of the first,\(^13\)

\(^12\) Richard Oswald of Auchincruive.
\(^13\) The Messrs. Hannay.
And there will be Collieston's whiskers, And Quintin, o' lads not the warst. And there will be stamp-office Johnnie, Tak tent how ye purchase a dram; And there will be gay Cassencarrice, And there will be gleg Colonel Tam; And there will be trusty Kerrough-tree, Whase honour was ever his law, if the virtues were pack'd in a parcel, His worth might be sample for a'. And strong and respectfu's his backin', The maist o' the lairds wi' him stand, Nae gipsy-like nominal barons, Whase property's paper, but lands. And can we forget the auld Major, Wha'll ne'er be forgot in the Greys, Our flattery we'll keep for some ither, Him only it's justice to praise. And there will be maiden Kilkerran, And also Barkskimming's guid knight, Wha luckily roars in the right. And there, frae the Niddisdale border, Will mingle the Maxwells in droves; Teugh Johnnie, stanch Geordie, and Wallace, That grieves for the fishes and loaves. And there will be Logan M'Dowall, Sculduddery and he will be there; And also the wild Scot o' Galloway, Sodgerring, gunpowder Blair.

Then hey the chaste interest o' Broughton, And hey for the blessings 'twill It may send Balmaghie to the Commons, In Sodom 'twould make him a king; And hey for the sanctified Murray, Our land wha wi' chapels has stored; He founder'd his horse amang harlots, But gied the auld naig to the Lord.

JOHN BUSHBY'S LAMENTATION.

BALLAD III.
'TWAS in the seventeen hundred year O' Christ, and ninety-five, That year I was the wae'st man O' ony man alive.

In March, the three-and-twentieth day, The sun raise clear and bright; But oh, I was a waefu' man Ere to-fa' o' the night.

Yerl Galloway lang did rule this land Wi' equal right and fame, And thereto was his kinsman join'd, The Murray's noble name!

Yerl Galloway lang did rule the land, Made me the judge o' strife; But now Yerl Galloway's sceptre's broke, And eke my hangman's knife.

'Twas by the banks o' bonny Dee, Beside Kirkcudbright towers The Stewart and the Murray there Did muster a' their powers.

The Murray, on the auld gray yand, Wi' winged spurs did, ride, That auld gray yand, yea, Niddsdale rade, He staw upon Nidside.

And there had been the yerl himsel, Oh, there had been nae play; But Garlies was to London gane, And sae the kye might stray.

14 Mr. Copland of Collieston.
15 Quintin M'Adam of Craigengillan.
16 Mr. John Syme, distributor of stamps, Dumfries.
17 Colonel Goldie of Goldclea.
18 Mr. Heron of Kerroughtree, the Whig candidate.
19 Major Heron, brother of the above.
20 Sir Adam Ferguson of Kilkerran.
21 Sir William Miller of Barkskimming, afterwards a judge, with the title of Lord Glenlee.
22 Mr. Birtwhistle of Kirkcudbright.
23 Mr. Maxwell of Terrauty.
24 George Maxwell of Carruchan.
25 Mr. Wellwood Maxwell.
26 Captain M'Dowall of Logan.
27 Mr. Blair of Dunsky.
28 Mr. Murray of Broughton, who had abandoned his wife, and eloped with a lady of rank.
And there was Balmaghie, I ween,
In the front rank he wad shine,
But Balmaghie had better been Drinking Madeira wine.

Frae the Glenkens came to our aid
A chief o' doughty deed;
In case that worth should wanted be,
O' Kennure we had need.

And there, sae grave, Squire Cardoness
Look'd on till a' was done;
Sae in the tower o' Cardoness,
A howlet sits at noon.

And there led I the Bushbys a';
My gamesome Billy Will,
And my son Maitland, wise as brave,
My footsteps follow'd still.

The Douglas and the Heron's name,
We set nought to their score:
The Douglas and the Heron's name
Had felt our weight before.

But Douglases o' weight had we,
A pair o' trusty lairds,
For building cot-houses sae famed,
And christening kail-yards.

And by our banners march'd Muirhead,
And Buittle wasna slack,
Whose haly priesthood nane can stain,
For wha can dye the black?

THE DUMFRIES VOLUNTEERS

Tune—"Push about the jorum."

Burns having joined the Dumfries Volunteers when they were formed early in 1795, signalled that patriotic event by the composition of the following ballad, which afterwards became very popular throughout the district.

Does haughty Gaul invasion threat?
Then let the louns beware, sir;
There's wooden walls upon our seas,
And volunteers on shore, sir:
The Nith shall rin to Corsincon,
The Criffel sink in Solway.
Ere we permit a foreign foe
On British ground to rally!
We'll ne'er permit a foreign foe
On British ground to rally.

OH, WAT YE WHA'S IN YON TOWN?

Tune—"I'll aye ca' in by yon town."

Now haply down yon gay green shaw
She wanders by yon spreading tree;
How blest ye flowers that round her blaw,
Ye catch the glances o' her ee!

CHORUS.

Oh, wat ye wha's in yon town,
Ye see the e'enin' sun upon?
The fairest dame's in yon town,
That e'enin' sun is shining on.

How blest ye birds that round her sing,
And welcome in the blooming year!
And doubly welcome be the spring,
The season to my Lucy dear.

The sun blinks blithe on yon town,
And on yon bonny braes of Ayr;
But my delight in yon town,
And my dearest bliss is Lucy fair.

SAY, was thy little mate unkund,
And heard thee as the careless wind?
Oh, nocht but love and sorrow join'd,
Sic woe could wakhen.

Thou tells o' never-ending care,
O' speechless grief and dark despair:
For pity's sake, sweet bird, nae mair!
Or my poor heart is broken!

ON CHLORIS BEING ILL.

TUNE—“Aye wakin', O.”

CAN I cease to care?
Can I cease to languish,
While my soul's delight
Is on the couch of anguish?

Every hope is fled,
Every fear is terror;
Slumber even I dread,
Every dream is horror.

Forlorn, my love, no comfort near.

TUNE—“Let me in this ae night.”

FORLORN, my love, no comfort near,
Far, far from thee, I wander here;
Far, far from thee, the fate severe
At which I most repine, love.

Oh, wert thou, love, but near me;
But near, near, near me;
How kindly thou woldst cheer me,
And mingle sighs with mine, love!

Address to the Woodlark.

TUNE—“Where'll bonny Ann lie?” or,
“Loch-Eroch Side.”

OH, stay, sweet warbling woodlark,
Stay,
Nor quit for me the trembling spray;
A hapless lover courts thy lay,
Thy soothing, fond complaining.

Again, again that tender part,
That I may catch thy melting art;
For surely that wad touch her heart
Wha kills me wi' disdaining.

Around me scowls a wintry sky,
That blasts each bud of hope and joy;
And shelter, shade, nor home have I,
Save in those arms of thine, love.

Cold, alter'd Friendship's cruel part,
To poison Fortune's ruthless dart—

Let me not break thy faithful heart,
And say that fate is mine, love.

But dreary though the moments fleet,
Oh, let me think we yet shall meet!
That only ray of solace sweet
Can on thy Chloris shine, love.

FRAGMENT—CHLORIS.
Tune—"Caledonian Hunt's Delight."

Why, why tell thy lover,
Bliss he never must enjoy!
Why, why undeceive him,
And give all his hopes the lie?

Oh why, while Fancy, raptured, slumbers,
Chloris, Chloris all the theme;
Why, why wouldst thou cruel,
Wake thy lover from his dream?

MARK YONDER POMP.
Tune—"Deil tak the Wars."

Mark yonder pomp of costly fashion,
Round the wealthy, titled bride;
But when compared with real passion,
Poor is all that princely pride.
What are the showy treasures?
What are the noisy pleasures?
The gay gaudy glare of vanity and art:
The polish'd jewel's blaze
May draw the wondering gaze,
And courtly grandeur bright
The fancy may delight.
[heart.
But never, never can come near the

But did you see my dearest Chloris
In simplicity's array,
Lovely as yonder sweet opening flower
Shrinking from the gaze of day;
Oh then, the heart alarming,
And all resistless charming,
In Love's delightful fetters she chains
The willing soul!
Ambition would disown
The world's imperial crown,
Even Avarice would deny
His worshipp'd deity,
And feel through every vein Love's raptures roll.

OH, BONNY WAS YON ROSY BRIER.

Oh, bonny was yon rosy brier, [man;
That blooms sae far frae haunt o'
And bonny she, and ah, how dear!
It shaded frae the c'elin' sun.

Yon rosebuds in the morning dew;
How pure amang the leaves sae green;
But purer was the lover's vow [treen.
They witness'd in their shade yes-

All in its rude and prickly bower,
That crimson rose, how sweet and fair!
But love is far a sweeter flower
Amid life's thorny path o' care.

The pathless wild and wimpling burn,
Wi' Chloris in my arms, be mine;
And I the world, nor wish, nor scorn,
Its joys and griefs alike resign.

CALEDONIA.
Tune—"Humours of Glen."

"The heroine of this song," says Cunningham, "was Mrs. Burns, who so charmed the poet by singing it with taste and feeling, that he declared it to be one of his luckiest lyrics."

Their groves o' sweet myrtle let Foreign lands reckon,
Where bright-beaming summers
Exalt their perfume; [breckan,]
Far dearer to me yon lone glen o' green
Wi' the burn stealing under the lang yellow broom:

Far dearer to me are yon humble broom
Bowers, [lowly unseen;
Where the blue-bell and gowan lurk
For there, lightly tripping amang the Wild flowers, [my Jean.
A-listening the linnet, ait wanders

Though rich is the breeze in their gay sunny valleys, [waw;
And cauld Caledonia's blast on the
Their sweet-scented woodlands that skirt the proud palace,
What are they?—The haunt o' the Tyrant and slave!

* Fern.
The slave's spicy forests, and gold-bubbling fountains, [dain; The brave Caledonian views wi' dis-He wanders as free as the winds of his mountains, Save Love's willing fetters— the chains o' his Jean.

TWAS NA HER BONNY BLUE EE.

TUNE—" Laddie, lie near me."

TWAS na her bonny blue ee was my ruin; [undoing: Fair though she be, that was ne'er my "Twas the dear smile when naebody did mind us, "Twas the bewitching, sweet, stown glance o' kindness.

Sair do I fear that to hope is denied me, Sair do I fear that despair maun abide me! But though fell Fortune should fate us Queen shall she be in my bosom forever.

Mary, I'm thine wi' a passion sincerest, And thou hast plighted me love o' the dearest! [alter—And thou'rt the angel that never can Sooner the sun in his motion would falter.

HOW CRUEL ARE THE PARENTS!

ALTERED FROM AN OLD ENGLISH SONG.

TUNE—" John Anderson, my Jo."

How cruel are the parents Who riches only prize, And to the wealthy booby Poor woman sacrifice!

Meanwhile the hapless daughter Has but a choice of strife— To shun a tyrant father's hate, Become a wretched wife.

The ravening hawk pursuing, The trembling dove thus flies, To shun impelling ruin A while her pinion tries; Till of escape despairing, No shelter or retreat, She trusts the ruthless falconer, And drops beneath his feet!

LAST MAY A BRAW WOOER.

TUNE—"The Lothian Lassie."

LAST May a braw wooer cam down the lang glen, [me; And sair wi' his love he did deave I said there was naething I hated like men, [lieve me, The deuce gae wi'm, to believe, be, The deuce gae wi'm, to believe me!

He spak o' the darts in my bonny black een, And vow'd for my love he was dying, I said he might die when he liked for Jean, [lying, The Lord forgie me for lying, for The Lord forgie me for lying!

A weel-stock'd mailen—himsel for the laird— [proffers: And marriage aff-hand, were his I never loot on that I kenn'd it, or cared, [waurn offers, But thought I might hae waurn offers, But thought I might hae waurn offers.

But what wad ye think? in a fortnight or less— [her! The deil tak his taste to gae near He up the lang loan to my black cousin Bess, Guess ye how, the jad! I could bear her, could bear her, [her. Guess ye how, the jad! I could bear

But a' the neist week, as I fretted wi' care, I gaed to the tryst o' Dalgarnock, And wha but my fine fickle lover was there! [warlock, I glower'd as I'd seen a warlock, a I glower'd as I'd seen a warlock.

But owre my left shouter I gae him a blink, Lest neebors might say I was saucy; My wooer he caper'd as he'd been in drink, [dear lassie, And vow'd I was his dear lassie, And vow'd I was his dear lassie.

Or else I wad kill him wi' sorrow;
Sae e'en to preserve the poor body his life,
I think I maun wed him to morrow,
I think I maun wed him to morrow.

THIS IS NO MY AIN LASSIE.

Tune—"This is no my aine house.'
I see a form, I see a face,
Ye weel may wi' the fairest place;
It wants to me the witching grace,
The kind love that's in her ee.
Oh, this is no my aine lassie,
Fair though the lassie be;
Oh, weel ken I aine lassie,
Kind love is in her ee.
She's bonny, blooming, straight, and tall,
And lang has had my heart in thrall;
And aye it charms my very saul,
The kind love that's in her ee.
A thief sae pawkies is my Jean,
To steal a blink, by a' unseen;
But gleg as light are lovers' e'en.
When kind love is in the ee.
It may escape the courtly sparks,
It may escape the learned clerks;
But weel the watching lover marks
The kind love that's in her ee.

NOW SPRING HAS CLAD THE GROVE IN GREEN.

A SCOTTISH SONG.

Now spring has clad the grove in green,
And strew'd the lea wi' flowers:
The furrow'd, waving corn is seen
Rejoice in fostering showers;
While ilka thing in nature join
Their sorrows to forego.
Oh, why thus all alone are mine
The weary steps of woe?

The trout within yon wimpling burn
Glides swift, a silver dart,
And, safe beneath the shady thorn,
Defies the angler's art:
My life was ance that careless stream,
That wanton trout was I;
But love, wi' unrelenting team,
Has scorched my fountains dry.

The little floweret's peaceful lot,
In yonder cliff that grows,
Which, save the linnet's flight, I wot,
Nae ruder visit knows.
Was mine; till love has o' er me past,
And blighted a' my bloom,
And now, beneath the withering blast,
My youth and joy consume.

The waken'd laverock, warbling springs,
And climbs the early sky,
Winnowing blithe her dewy wings
In morning's rosy eye;
As little reckt I sorrow's power,
Until the flowery snare
O' witching love, in luckless hour,
Made me the thrall o' care.

Oh, had my fate been Greenland snows,
Or Afric's burning zone,
Wi' man and nature leagued my foes,
So Peggy ne'er I'd known!
The wretch whase doom is, "Hope nae mair,"
What tongue his woes can tell!
Within whase bosom, save despair,
Nae kinder spirits dwell.'

THE DEAN OF FACULTY.

A BALLAD.

Tune—"The Dragon of Wantley.'
Dire was the hate at old Harlaw,
That Scot to Scot did carry;
And dire the discord Langside saw
For beauteous, hapless Mary:
But Scot with Scot ne'er met so hot,
Or were more in fury seen, sir,
Than 'twixt Hal* and Bob† for the famous job—
Who should be Faculty's Dean, sir.

* The Hon. Henry Erskine.
† Robert Dundas, Esq., of Arniston.
This Hal for genius, wit, and lore,
Among the first was number'd;
But pious Bob, 'mid learning's store,
Commandment tenth remember'd.
Yet simple Bob the victory got,
And won his heart's desire; [pot,
Which shows that Heaven can boil the
Though the devil—in the fire.

Squire Hal, besides, had in this case
 Pretentions rather brassy,
For talents to deserve a place
 Are qualifications saucy;
So their worship's of the Faculty,
Quite sick of merit's rudeness,
Chose one who should owe it all, d'ye see,
 To their gratis grace and goodness.

As once on Pisgah purged was the sight
 Of a son of Circumcision,
So may be, on this Pisgah height,
Bob's purblind, mental vision:
Nay, Bobby's mouth may be open'd yet
Till for eloquence you hail him,
And swear he has the Angel met
That met the Ass of Balaam.

In your heretic sins may ye live and die,
 Ye heretic eight-and-thirty!
But accept, ye sublime Majority,
 My congratulations heartly.
With your Honours and a certain King,
 In your servants this is striking—
The more incapacity they bring,
The more they're to your liking.

HEY FOR A LASS WI' A TOCHER.

Tune—"Balinamona Ora."

Aw' wi' your witchcraft o' beauty's alarms,
[your arms; The slender bit beauty you grasp in
Oh, gie me the lass that has acres o' charms,
[farms. Oh, gie me the lass wi' the weel-stockit

Then hey for a lass wi' a tocher,
Then hey for a lass wi' a tocher; Then hey for a lass wi' a tocher,
The nice yellow guineas for me.

Your beauty's a flower in the morning that blows,
And withers the faster the faster it

But the rapturous charm o' the bonny green knowes,
[white yowes. Ilk spring they're new deckit wi' bonny

And e'en when this beauty your bosom has blest;

But the sweet yellow darlings wi' Geordie imprist, [they're carest.
The langer ye hae them the maik

JESSY.

Tune—"Here's a health to them that's awa."
The heroine of this song was Miss Jessy Lewis, a kind-hearted, amiable young creature. Her tender and assiduous attentions to the poet during his last illness, it is well known, greatly soothed his fretted spirit and eased his shattered frame.

Here's a health to ane I lo'e dear! Here's a health to ane I lo'e dear! Thou art sweet as the smile when fond lovers meet, And soft as their parting tear—Jessy! Although thou mann never be mine, Although even hope is denied; 'Tis sweeter for thee despairing Than aught in the world beside—Jessy!

I mourn through the gay, gaudy day, As, hopeless, I muse on thy charm; But welcome the dream o' sweet slumber, [Jessy! For then I am lockt in thy arms—

I guess by the dear angel smile, I guess by the love-rolling ee; But why urge the tender confession, 'Gainst Fortune's fell cruel decrees! —Jessy!

Here's a health to ane I lo'e dear! Here's a health to ane I lo'e dear! Thou art sweet as the smile when fond lovers meet, And soft as their parting tear—Jessy.

OH, WERT THOU IN THE CAULD BLAST.

Tune—"The Lass o' Livingstone."

This fine song is another tribute of the poet's Muse to his ministering angel, Miss Jessy succeeded in beating his opponents, but not till death had placed the poor poet beyond the reach of all earthly joy or sorrow.

FAIREST MAID ON DEVON BANKS.

Tune—"Rothenmurche."

In this song—composed during the last months of his life, when prostrate with illness and oppressed with poverty—his mind wandered to the banks of the Devon, where he had spent some happy days, when in the full flush of fame, in the company of the lovely Charlotte Hamilton.

KATHERINE JAFFRAY

There lived a lass in yonder dale,
And down in yonder glen, O!
And Katherine Jaffray was her name,
Weel known to many men, O!

Out came the Lord of Lauderdale,
Out frae the south countrie, O!
All for to court this pretty maid,
Her bridegroom for to be, O!

He's tell'd her father and mother bath,
As I hear sundry say, O!
But he hasna tell'd the lass hersel,
Till on her wedding day, O!

Then came the Laird o' Lochinton,
Out frae the English Border,
All for to court this pretty maid,
All mounted in good order.

ROBIN SHURE IN HAIRST.

CHORUS.

Robin shure in hairst,
I shure wi' him;
Fient a heuk2 had I,
Yet I stack by him.

I gaed up to Dunse,
To warp a wab o' plaiden;
At his daddie's yet,3
Wha met me but Robin?

Was na Robin bauld,
Though I was a cotter;

Play'd me sic a trick,
And me the ells dochter?4

Robin promised me

SWEETEST MAY.

Sweetest May, let love inspire thee,
Take a heart which he desires thee;
As thy constant slave regard it;
For its faith and truth reward it.

Proof o' shot to birth or money,
Not the wealthy, but the bonny;
Not high-born, but noble-minded,
In love's silken band can bind it!

WHEN I THINK ON THE HAPPY DAYS.

When I think on the happy days
I spent wi' you, my dearie;
And now what lands between us lie,
How can I be but eerie!

How slow ye move, ye heavy hours,

OH, WHAT IS SHE THAT LOVES ME?

Tune—"Morag."

Oh, what is she that loves me,
And has my heart a-keeping?
Oh, sweet is she that loves me,
As dews o' simmer weeping,
In tears the rosebuds weeping!

CHORUS.

Oh, that's the lassie o' my heart,
My lassie ever dearer;
Oh, that's the queen of womankind,
And ne'er a a'ne to peer her.

If thou shalt meet a lassie,
In grace and beauty charming,
That e'en thy chosen lassie,
Kewedwhile thy breast se' warmin',
Had ne'er sic powers alarming;

If thou hadst heard her talking,
And thy attentions plighted,
That ilka body talking,
But her by thee is slighted,
And thou art all delighted;

If thou hadst met this fair one;
When frae her thou hast parted,

DAMON AND SYLVIA.

Tune—"The ither morn, as I forlorn."

Yon wandering rill that marks the hill,
And glances o'er the brae, sir,
Slides by a bower, where mony a flower
Sheds fragrance on the day, sir.

There Damon lay, with Sylvia gay,
To love they thought nae crime, sir;
The wild-birds sang, the echoes rang,
While Damon's heart beat time, sir.

SHELAH O'NEIL.

When first I began for to sigh and to woo her,
Of many fine things I did say a great
But, above all the rest, that which pleased her the best
Was, Oh, will you marry me, Shelah O'Neil?
My point I soon carried, for straight we were married.
Then the weight of my burden I soon 'gan to feel,—
For she scolded, she fisted, oh, then I enlisted,
Left Ireland, and whisky, and Shelah O'Neil.

Then, tired and dull-hearted, oh, then I deserted,
And fled into regions far distant from home;
To Frederick's army, where none e'er could harm me,
Save Shelah herself, in the shape of a bomb.
I fought every battle, where cannons did rattle,
Felt sharp shot, alas! and the sharp-pointed steel;
But in all my wars round, thank my stars, I ne'er found
Aught so sharp as the tongue of cursed Shelah O'Neil.

And the cradle wants a cod,
And I'll no gang to my bed
Until I get a nod.

Father, quo' she, Mither, quo' she,
Do what you can;
I'll no gang to my bed
Till I get a man.

I hae as guid a craft rig
As made o' yird and stane;
And waly fa' the ley-crap,
For I maun till'd again.

REMARKS ON SCOTTISH SONGS

AND BALLADS.

ANCIENT AND MODERN;

WITH ANECDOTES OF THEIR AUTHORS.

BY

ROBERT BURNS.

"There needs na be so great a phrase,
Wi' dringing dull Italian lays,
I wadna gie our ain Strathspeys
For half a hundred score o' 'em;
They're douff and dowie, at the best,
Douff and dowie, douff and dowie;
They're douff and dowie a' the best,
Wi' a' their variorum:
They're douff and dowie at the best,
Their allegros, and at the rest,
They cannot please a Scottish taste,
Compared wi' Tullochgorum."

Rev. John Skinner.

"The following Remarks on Scottish Song," says Cunningham, "exist in the handwriting of Burns, in an interleaved copy of the first four volumes of Johnson's Musical Museum, which the poet presented to Captain Riddel, of Friar's Carse. On the death of Mrs. Riddel, these precious volumes passed into the hands of her niece, Eliza Bayley, of Manchester, who kindly permitted Mr. Cromek to transcribe and publish them in his volume of the Reliques of Burns."

THE HIGHLAND QUEEN.

The Highland Queen, music and poetry, was composed by Mr. M'Vicar, purser of the Solebay man-of-war.—This I had from Dr. Blacklock.

The Highland King, intended as a parody on the former, was the production of a young lady, the friend of Charles Wilson, of Edinburgh, who edited a collection of songs, entitled "Cecilia," which appeared in 1779.

The following are specimens of these songs:

THE HIGHLAND QUEEN.

How blest that youth whom gentle fate
Has destined for so fair a mate!
Has all these wond'ring gifts in store,
And each returning day brings more;
No youth so happy can be seen.
Possessing thee, my Highland Queen.

THE HIGHLAND KING.

Jamie, the pride of a' the green,
Is just my age, e'en gay fifteen:
When first I saw him, 'twas the day
That ushers in the sprightly May:
Then first I felt love's powerful sting:
And sigh'd for my dear Highland King.
THE HIGHLAND QUEEN.

No sordid wish, nor trifling joy,
Her settled calm of mind destroy;
Strict honour tills her spotless soul,
And adds a lustre to the whole:
A matchless shape, a graceful line,
All centre in my Highland Queen.

THE HIGHLAND KING.

Would once the dearest boy but say
'Tis you I love, come, come away
Unto the Kirk, my love, let's hie—
Oh me! in rapture I comply
And I should then have cause to sing
The praises of my Highland King.

BESS THE GAWKIE.*

This song shows that the Scottish Muses did not all leave us when we lost Ramsay and Oswald;† as I have good reason to believe that the verses and music are both posterior to the days of these two gentlemen. It is a beautiful song, and in the genuine Scots taste. We have few pastoral compositions, I mean the pastoral of nature, that are equal to this.

Blithe young Bess to Jean did say,
Will ye gang to yon sunny brae,
Where flocks do feed, and herds do stray,
And sport awhile wi' Jamie?
Ah, na, lass, I'll no gang there,
Nor about Jamie tak nac care,
Nor about Jamie tak nac care,
For he's ta'en up wi' Maggy!

For hark, and I will tell you, lass,
Did I not see your Jamie pass,
Wi' meikle gladness in his face,
Out o'er the muir to Maggy?
I wot he gae her mony a kiss,
And Maggy took them ne'er amiss.
'Tween ilka smack, pleased her with this,
That Bess was but a gawkie.

But whist!—nae mair of this we'll speak,
For yonder Jamie does us meet.
Instead of Meg he kiss'd sae sweet,
I wot he likes the gawkie.
Oh, dear Bess, I hardly knew,
When I came by, your gown's sae new,
I think you've got it wet wi' dew,
Quoth she, that's like a gawkie.

The lasses fast frae him they flew,
And left poor Jamie sair to rue
That ever Maggy's face he knew,
Or yet ca'd Bess a gawkie.
As they went o'er the muir they sang,
The hills and dales with echoes rang;
The hills and dales with echoes rang,
Gang o'er the muir to Maggy.

O, OPEN THE DOOR, LORD GREGORY

It is somewhat singular that in Lanark, Renfrew, Ayr, Wigton, Kirkcudbright, and Dumfries shires, there is scarcely an English song or tune which, from the title, &c., can be guessed to belong to, or be the production of, these counties. This, I conjecture, is one of these very few; as the ballad, which is a long one, is called, both by tradition and in printed collections, "The Lass of Lochroyan," which I take to be Lochroyan in Galloway.

Oh, open the door, Lord Gregory,
Oh, open and let me in;
The wind blows through my yellow hair,
The dew draps o'er my chin.
If you are the lass that I loved once,
As I trow you are not she,
Come gie me some of the tokens
That pass'd 'tween you and me.

Ah, wae be to you, Gregory!
An ill death may you die;
You will not be the death of one,
But you'll be the death of three.
Oh, don't you mind, Lord Gregory?
'Twas down at yonder burn side
We changed the ring off our fingers,
And I put mine on thine.

THE BANKS OF THE TWEED.

This song is one of the many attempts that English composers have made to imitate the Scottish manner, and which I shall, in these strictures, beg leave to distinguish by the appellation of Anglo-Scottish productions. The music is pretty good, but the verses are just above contempt.

For to visit my ewes and to see my lambs play,
By the banks of the Tweed and the groves I did stray,
I sigh'd,
But my Jenny, dear Jenny, how oft have I
And have vow'd endless love if you would be my bride.

* The Rev. James Muirhead, minister of Urr, in Galloway, and whose name occurs in the Heron Ballads, and other of the poet's satirical pieces, was the author of this song.
† He was a London music-seller, and published a collection of Scottish tunes, entitled, "The Caledonian's Pocket Companion."
'To the altar of Hymen, my fair one, repair,
Where a knot of affection shall tie the fond pair,
[will we lead,
To the pipe's sprightly notes the gay dance
And will bless the dear grove by the banks of the Tweed.

THE BEDS OF SWEET ROSES.

This song, as far as I know, for the first time appears here in print. —
When I was a boy, it was a very popular song in Ayrshire. I remember to have heard those fanatics, the Buchanites, sing some of their nonsensical rhymes, which they dignify with the name of hymns, to this air.

As I was walking one morning in May, [gay;
The little birds were singing delightful and
The little birds were singing delightful and gay; [play,
Where I and my true love did often sport and
Down among the beds of sweet roses, [play,
Where I and my true love did often sport and
Down among the beds of sweet roses.

My daddy and my mamma I oft have heard them say, [and play;
That I was a naughty boy, and did often sport
But I never liked in all my life a maiden that was shy,
Down among the beds of sweet roses.

ROSLIN CASTLE.

These beautiful verses were the production of a Richard Hewit, a young man that Dr. Blacklock (to whom I am indebted for the anecdote) kept for some years as an amanuensis.* I do not know who is the author of the second song to the same tune. Tytler, in his amusing history of Scottish music, gives the air to Oswald; but in Oswald's own collection of Scots tunes, when he affixes an asterisk to those he himself composed, he does not make the least claim to the tune.

'Twas in that season of the year,
When all things gay and sweet appear,
That Colin, with the morning ray,
Arose and sung his rural lay,
Of Nanny's charms the shepherd sang,
The hills and dales with Nanny rung;
While Roslin Castle heard the swain,
And echoed back the cheerful strain.

* This gentleman subsequently became Secretary to Lord Milton, (then Lord Justice-Clerk,) but the fatiguing nature of his duties in that position hurt his health, and he died in 1794.

Awake, sweet Muse! the breathing spring
With rapture warms; awake and sing!
Awake and join the vocal throng
Who hail the morning with a song;
To Nanny raise the cheerful lay,
Oh, bid her haste and come away;
In sweetest smiles herself adorn,
And add new graces to the morn!

Oh, hark, my love! on every spray
Each feather'd warbler tunes his lay;
'Tis beauty fires the ravish'd throng,
And love inspires the melting song;
Then let my raptured notes arise,
For beauty starts from Nanny's eyes;
And love my rising bosom warms,
And fills my soul with sweet alarms.

SECOND VERSION.

From Roslin Castle's echoing walls,
Resound my shepherd's ardent calls;
My Colin bids me come away,
And love demands I should obey.
His melting strain, and tuneful lay,
So much the charms of love display,
I yield—for longer can refrain,
To own my love, and bless my swain.

No longer can my heart conceal
The painful-pleasing flame I feel:
My soul retorts the am'rous strain;
And echoes back in love again. [grove
Where lurks my songster? from what Does Colin pour his notes of love?
Oh, bring me to the happy bower,
Where mutual love may bliss secure!

Ye vocal hills, that catch the song,
Repeating as it flies along,
To Colin's ears my strain convey,
And say, I haste to come away,
Ye zephyrs soft, that fan the gale,
Waft to my love the soothing tale;
In whispers all my soul express,
And tell I haste his arms to bless!

Oh! come, my love! thy Colin's lay
With rapture calls, oh, come away!
Come while the muse this wreath shall Ferm twine
Around that modest brow of thine:
Oh! hither haste, and with thee bring
That beauty blooming like the spring;
Those graces that divinely shine,
And charm this ravish'd breast of mine!

SAW YE JOHNNIE CUMMIN?

QUO' SHE.

This song, for genuine humour in the verses, and lively originality in the air, is unparalleled. I take it to be very old.

Saw ye Johnnie cummin? quo' she,
Saw ye Johnnie cummin,
Oh, saw ye Jo'hn'nie cummin, quo'she;
Saw ye Johnnie cummin,
Wi' his blue bonnet on his head,
And his doggie runnin', quo' she;
And his doggie runnin'?

Fee him, father, fee him, quo' she;
Fee him, father, fee him
For he is a gallant lad,
And a weel doun';
And a' the wark about the house
Gaes wi' me when I see him, quo' she:
Wi' me when I see him.

What will I do wi' him, hussy?
What will I do wi' him?
He's ne'er a Sark upon his back,
And I hae nane to gie him.
I hae twa sacks into my kist,
And ane o' them I'll gie him,
And for a mark o' mair fee,
Dinna stand wi' him, quo' she;
Dinna stand wi' him.

For weel do I lo'e him, quo' she:
Weel do I lo'e him,
Oh, fee him, father, fee him, quo' she;
Fee him, father, fee him,
He'll band the pleugh, thrash t' the barn,
And he wi' me at e'en, quo' she,
Lae wi' me at e'en.

CLOUT THE CALDRON.

A TRADITION is mentioned in the Bee, that the second Bishop Chisholm, of Dunblane, used to say that, if he were going to be hanged, nothing would soothe his mind so much by the way as to hear "Clout the Caldron" played.

I have met with another tradition, that the old song to this tune,
Hae ye ony pots or pans,
Or ony broken chanlers,
was composed on one of the Kenmure family in the cavalier times, and alluded to an amour he had, while under hiding, in the disguise of an itinerant tinker. The air is also known by the name of

"The Blacksmith and his Apron," which, from the rhythm, seems to have been a line of some old song to the tune

Hae ye ony pots or pans,
Or ony broken chanlers?
For I'm a tinker to my trade,
And newly come frae Flanders,
As scant o' siller as o' grace,
Disbanded, we've a bad run;
Gang tell the lady o' the place,
I'm come to clout her caldron.

Madam, if ye hac wark for me,
I'll do't to your contentment,
And dinna care a single fle.

For ony man's resentment:
For, lady fair, though I appear
To every ane a tinker,
Yet to yourself I'm bold to tell
I am a gentle junier.

Love, Jupiter into a swan
Turn'd for his lovely Leda;
He like a bull o'er meadows ran,
To carry off Europa.
Then may not I, as well as he,
To cheat your Argus blinker,
And win your love, like mighty Jove,
Thus hide me in a tinker?

Sir, ye appear a cunning man,
But this fine plot ye'll fall in,
For there is neither pot nor pan
Of mine ye'll drive a nail in.
Then bind your budget on your back,
And nails up in your apron,
For I've a tinker under tack
That's used to clout my caldron.

SAW YE NAE MY PEGGY?

This charming song is much older,
and indeed superior to Ramsay's verses,
"The Toast," as he calls them.
There is another set of the words, much older still, and which I take to be the original one, but though it has a very great deal of merit, it is not quite ladies' reading.

The original words, for they can scarcely be called verses, seem to be as follows; a song familiar from the cradle to every Scottish ear:—

Saw ye my Maggie,
Saw ye my Maggie,
Saw ye my Maggie
Linkin o'er the lea?

High kilted was she,
High kilted was she,
High kilted was she,
Her coat a-bown her knee.

What mark has your Maggie,
What mark has your Maggie,
What mark has your Maggie,
That ane may ken her be? (by.)

* The following verse was added by the Ettrick Shepherd:—

Maggie's a lovely woman,
She proves true to no man,
She proves true to no man,
And has proven false to me.
Though it by no means follows that the silliest verses to an air must, for that reason, be the original song; yet I take this ballad, of which I have quoted part, to be the old verses. The two songs in Ramsay, one of them evidently his own, are never to be met with in the fireside circle of our peasantry; while that which I take to be the old song, is in every shepherd’s mouth. Ramsay, I suppose, had thought the old verses unworthy of a place in his collection.

Saw ye nae my Peggy,
Saw ye nae my Peggy,
Saw ye nae my Peggy,
Coming o’er the lea?
Sure a finer creature
Ne’er was form’d by nature,
So complete each feature,
So divine is she.

Oh! how Peggy charms me!
Every look still warms me;
Every thought alarms me;
Lest she love nae me.
Peggy doth discover
Nought but charms all over;
Nature bids me love her,
That’s a law to me.

Who would leave a lover,
To become a rover?
No, I’ll ne’er give over,
Till I happy be!
For since love inspires me,
As her beauty fires me,
And her absence tires me,
Nought can please but she.

When I hope to gain her,
Fate seems to detain her,
Could I but obtain her,
Happy would I be!
I’ll lie down before her,
Bless, sigh, and adore her,
With faint look implore her
Till she pity me!

THE FLOWERS OF EDINBURGH.

This song is one of the many evocations of Scots Jacobitism. The title “Flowers of Edinburgh” has no manner of connection with the present verses; so I suspect there has been an older set of words, of which the title is all that remains.

By the by, it is singular enough that the Scottish Muses were all Jacobites. I have paid more attention to every description of Scots songs than per-
My laddie is gane far away o'er the plain,
While in sorrow behind I am forced to remain;
Though blue bells and violets the hedges adorn,
Though trees are in blossom and sweet blows the thorn,
No pleasure they give me, in vain they look
There's nothing can please me now Jockey's away,
Forlorn I sit singing, and this is my strain,
"Haste, haste, my dear Jockey, to me back again."

When lads and their lasses are on the green met,
They dance and they sing, and they laugh and Contented and happy, with hearts full of glee,
I can't, without envy, their merriment see.
Those pleasures offend me, my shepherd's not there!
No pleasure I relish that Jockey don't share;
It makes me to sigh, I from tears scarce refrain,
I wish my dear Jockey return'd back again.

FYE, GAE RUB HER O'ER WI' STRAE.

It is self-evident that the first four lines of this song are part of a song more ancient than Ramsay's beautiful verses which are annexed to them. As music is the language of nature, and poetry, particularly songs, is always less or more localised (if I may be allowed the verb) by some of the modifications of time and place, this is the reason why so many of our Scots airs have outlived their original and perhaps many subsequent sets of verses, except a single name or phrase, or sometimes one or two lines, simply to distinguish the tunes by.

To this day, among people who know nothing of Ramsay's verses, the following is the song, and all the song that ever I heard:

- Gin ye meet a bonny lassie,
- Gie her a kiss and let her gae;
- But gin ye meet a dirty hizzie,
- Fye, gae rub her o'er wi' strae.

- Fye, gae rub her, rub her, rub her,
- Fye, gae rub her o'er wi' strae.
- And gin ye meet a dirty hizzie,
- Fye, gae rub her o'er wi' strae.

"Ramsay's spirited imitation," says Cromek, "of the 'Vides ut alte sedi nive candiditum,' of Horace, is considered as one of the happiest efforts of the author's genius."—For an elegant critique on the poem, and a comparision of its merits with those of the original, the reader is referred to Lord Woodhouselee's "Remarks on the Writings of Ramsay."

- Look up to Pentland's towering tap,
- Buried beneath great wreaths of snow,
- O'er ilka cleugh, ilk scar, and slap,
- As high as ony Roman wa'.

- Driving their baws frae whins or teec,
- There are nae gowfers to be seen;
- Nor douser lowk wyasing a-je.
- The byass-bouls on Tamson's Green.

- Then fling on coals, and rip the ribs,
- And beek the house baith but and ben;
- That mutchin stowp it lauds but dries,
- Then let's get in the tappit hen.

- Good claret best keeps out the canid,
- And drives away the winter soon;
- It makes a man baith gash and bauld,
- And heaves his soul beyond the moon.

- Let next day come as it thinks fit,
- The present minute's only ours,
- On pleasure let's employ our wit,
- And laugh at Fortune's sickle powers.

- Be sure ye dinna quit the grip
- Of ilka joy when ye are young,
- Before auld age your vitals nip,
- And lay ye twa-fald o'er a rung.

- Now to her heaving bosom cling,
- And sweetly taste for a kiss,
- Frae her fair finger whoop a ring,
- As token of a future bliss.

- These benisons, I'm very sure,
- Are of the gods' indulgent grant:
- Then surly carles, whist, forbear
- To plague us wi' your whining cant.

- Sweet youth's a blithe and heartsome time;
- Then, lads and lasses, while 'tis May,
- Gae pu' the gowan in its prime,
- Before it wither and decay.

- Watch the saft minutes of delyte,
- When Jenny speaks beneath her breath,
- And kisses, laying a' the wyte
- On you, if she kept on skaieth.

- "Haith, ye're ill-bred," she'll smiling say;
- "Ye'll worry me, ye greedy rook."
- Syne frae yer arms she'll rin away,
- And hide hersel in some dark nook.

- Her laugh will lead you to the place
- Where lies the happiness you want,
- And plainly tells you, to your face,
- Nineteen nay-says are half a grant.

The song of "Fye, gae rub her o'er wi' strae" is composed of the first four lines mentioned by Burns, and the seven concluding verses of Ramsay's spirited and elegant Scottish version of Horace's ninth Ode, given above.
THE LASS OF LIVINGSTON.

The old song, in three eight-line stanzas, is well known, and has merit as to wit and humour; but it is rather unfit for insertion.—It begins:

"The bonny loss o' Livingston,
Her name ye ken, her name ye ken,
And she has written in her contract,
To lie her lane, to lie her lane," &c., &c.

The modern version by Allan Ramsay is as follows:

Pain'd with her slighting Jamie's love,
Bell dropt a tear, Bell dropt a tear;
The gods descended from above,
Well pleased to hear, well pleased to hear.

They heard the praises of the youth [tongue,
From her own tongue, from her own
Who now converted was to truth,
And thus she sung, and thus she sung:

Bless'd days, when our ingenuous sex,
More frank and kind, more frank and kind,
Did not their loved adorers vex,
But spoke their mind, but spoke their mind.

Repenting now, she promised fair,
Would he return, would he return,
She ne'er again would give him care,
Or cause to mourn, or cause to mourn

Why loved I the deserving swain,[shame,
Yet still thought shame, yet still thought
When he my yielding heart did gain,
To own my flame, to own my flame

Why took I pleasure to torment,
And seem too coy, and seem too coy,
Which makes me now, alas! I lament
My slighted joy, my slighted joy.

Ye fair, while beauty's in its spring,
Own your desire, own your desire,
While love's young power, with his soft wing,
Fans up the fire, fans up the fire;

Oh, do not with a silly pride,
Or low design, or low design,
Refuse to be a happy bride,
But answer plain, but answer plain.

Thus the fair mourner 'wail'd her crime,
With flowing eyes, with flowing eyes;
Glad Jamie heard her all the time
With sweet surprise, with sweet surprise.

Some god had led him to the grove,
His mind unchanged, his mind unchanged,
Flew to her arms, and cried, my love,
'I am revenged, I am revenged.'

THE LAST TIME I CAME O'ER THE MOOR.

Ramsay found the first line of this song, which had been preserved as the title of the charming air, and then composed the rest of the verses to suit that line. This has always a finer effect than composing English words, or words with an idea foreign to the spirit of the old title. Where old titles of songs convey any idea at all, it will generally be found to be quite in the spirit of the air.

"There are," says Allan Cunningham, "some fine verses in this song, though some fastidious critics pronounce them over warm."

The last time I came o'er the moor,
I left my love behind me;
Ye powers, what pain do I endure,
When soft ideas mind me.

Soon as the ruddy morn display'd,
The beaming day ensuing,
I met betimes my lovely maid
In fit retreats for wooling.

Beneath the cooling shade we lay,
Gazing and chastely sporting;
We kiss'd and promised time away,
Till night spread her black curtain.

I pitied all beneath the skies,
Even kings, when she was nigh me;
In rapture I beheld her eyes,
Which could but ill deny me.

Should I be call'd where cannons roar,
Where mortal steel may wound me;
Or cast upon some foreign shore,
Where danger may surround me;

Yet hopes again to see my love,
And feast on glowing kisses,
Shall make my cares at distance move,
In prospect of such blisses.

In all my soul there's not one place
To let a rival enter;
Since she excels in every grace,
In love, in tender sweet desire;

Sooner the seas shall cease to flow,
Till their waves the Alps shall cover,
On Greenland ice shall roses grow,
Before I cease to love her.

The next time I go o'er the moor,
She shall a lover find me;
And that my faith is firm and pure,
Though I left her behind me;

Then Hymen's sacred bonds shall chain,
My heart to her fair bosom;—
There, while my being does remain,
My love more fresh shall blossom.

JOHNNIE'S GRAY BREEKS.

Though this has certainly every evidence of being a Scottish air, yet there is a well-known tune and song in the North of Ireland, called "The Weaver and his Shuttle, O," which, though sung much quicker, is every note the very tune.
Ye shepherds so gay, who make love to ensnare,
And cheat with false vows the too credulous
In search of true pleasure how vainly you roam!
To hold it for life, you must find it at home.

THE LASS OF PATIE’S MILL.

In Sinclair’s Statistical Account of Scotland, this song is localised (a verb I must use for want of another to express my idea) somewhere in the north of Scotland, and is likewise claimed by Ayrshire. The following anecdote I had from the present Sir William Cunningham of Robertland, who had it from John, the last Earl of Loudon. The then Earl of Loudon, and father to Earl John before mentioned, had Ramsay at Loudon, and one day walking together by the banks of Irvine water, near New Mills, at a place called Patie’s Mill, they were struck with the appearance of a beautiful country girl. His lordship observed that she would be a fine theme for a song. Allan lagged behind in returning to Loudon Castle, and at dinner produced this identical song.

The lass of Patie’s mill,
So bonny, blithe, and gay,
In spite of all my skill,
Hath stole my heart away.

When wading of the hay,
Bare-headed on the green,
Love midst her locks did play,
And wanton’d in her een.

Her arms white, round, and smooth,
Breasts rising in their dawn,
To age it would give youth,
To press them with his hand:

Through all my spirits ran
An ecstasy of bliss,
When I such sweetness found,
Wreapt in a balmy kiss.

Without the help of art,
Like flowers which grace the wild
She did her sweets impart,
Whene’er she spoke or smiled.

Her looks they were so mild,
Free from affected pride,
She me to love beguiled:
I wish’d her for my bride.

Oh, had I all that wealth
Hopetoun’s high mountains fill,
Insured long life and health,
And pleasure at my will.

THE HAPPY MARRIAGE.*

ANOTHER, but very pretty, Anglo-Scottish piece.

How blest has my time been, what joyous have I known,
Since wedlock’s soft bondage made Jessy my own:
So joyful my heart is, so easy my chain,
That freedom is tasteless, and roving a pain.

Through walks grown wild with woodbines, as often we stray,
Around us our boys and girls frolic and play;
How pleasing their sport is! the wanton ones see,
And borrow their looks from my Jessy and me.

To try her sweet temper, oft times am I seen,
In revels all day with the nymphs on the green;
Though painful my absence, my doubts she beguiles,
And smiles. And meets me at night with complaisance.

What though on her cheeks the rose loses its hue,
Her wit and her humour bloom all the year.
Time still, as he flies, adds increase to her youth,
And gives to her mind what he steals from

* This song was composed by Edward Moore, author of the well-known tragedy of The Gamester, and other works.
I'd promise and fulfil,
That none but bonny she,
The lass o' Patie's Mill,
Should share the same wi' me.

THE TURNIMSPIKE.

There is a stanza of this excellent song for local humour omitted in this set where I have placed the asterisks.

They tak te horse then by te head,
And tere tey mak her stan', man;
Me telt tem, me hae seen te day
Tey no hald sic comman', man.

A Highlander laments, in a half-serious and half-comic way, the privations which the act of parliament anent kilts has made him endure, and the miseries which turnpike roads and toll-bars have brought upon his country:

Hersell pè Highland shentleman,
Pe auld as Pothwell Prig, man;
And mony alterations seen
Amang te Lawlind Whig, man.

First when her to the Lawlands came,
Nainsell was driving cows, man;
There was nae laws about him's nerse,
About the preeks or tews, man.

Nainsell did wear the philabeg,
The plaid prick't on her shoulder;
The guid claymore hung pe her pelt,
De pistol charged wi' poudar.

But for whereas these cursed preeks
Wherewith her nerse be lockit,
Oh hon' that e'er she saw the day!
For a' her houghs be prokit.

Every ting in de Highlands now
Pe turn'd to alteration;
The sodger dwell at our door-sheek,
And tat's te great vexation.

Scotland be turn't a Ningland now,
And laws pring on de cadger,
Nainsell wad durk him for his deeds,
But oh! she fear te sodger.

Another law come after that,
Me never saw te like, man;
They mak a lang road on te crund,
And ca' him Turnimspike, man.

And wow! she pe a pouny road,
Like louden corn-rigs, man;
Where twa carts may gang on her,
And no peak ither's legs, man.

They sharge a penny for ilka horse,
In troth she'll no be sheepar,
For naught put gaen upo' the ground,
And they gie me a paper.

Nae doubts, himsel maun tra her purse,
And pay them what hims like, man;
I'll see a shudgement on his toor;
That filthy Turnimspike, man.

But I'll awa' to te Highland hills,
Where teil a ane dare turn her,
And no come near your Turnimspike,
Unless it pe to purn her.

HIGHLAND LADDIE.

As this was a favourite theme with our later Scottish muses, there are several airs and songs of that name. That which I take to be the oldest is to be found in the Musical Museum, beginning "I hae been at Crookieden." One reason for my thinking so is that Oswald has it in his collection by the name of "The auld Highland Laddie." It is also known by the name of "Jinglan Johnnie," which is a well-known song of four or five stanzas, and seems to be an earlier song than Jacobite times. As a proof of this, it is little known to the peasantry by the name of "Highland Laddie," while everybody knows "Jinglan Johnnie." The song begins

Jinglan John, the meikle man,
He met wi' a lass was blithe and bonny.

Another "Highland Laddie" is also in the Museum, vol. v., which I take to be Ramsay's original, as he has borrowed the chorus—"Oh, my bonny Highland lad," &c. It consists of three stanzas, besides the chorus, and has humour in its composition; it is an excellent, but somewhat licentious song. It begins

As I cam o'er Cairney-Mount,
And down amang the blooming heather
Kindly stood the milking-shiel,
To shelter frae the stormy weather.

Oh, my bonny Highland lad,
My winsome, weil-fard Highland laddie;
Wha wad mind the wind and rain,
Sae weel row'd in his tartan plaidie?

Now Phoebus blinkit on the bent,
But he wan my heart's consent
To be his ain at the nest meeting.

Oh, my bonny Highland lad,
My winsome, weil-fard Highland laddie;
Wha wad mind the wind and rain,
Sae weel row'd in his tartan plaidie?
This air and the common "Highland Laddie" seem only to be different sets. Another "Highland Laddie," also in the Museum, vol. v., is the tune of several Jacobite fragments. One of these old songs to it only exists, as far as I know, in these four lines:—

Where hae ye been a' day,
Bonny laddie, Highland laddie?
Down the back o' Bell's brae,
Courtin' Maggie, courtin' Maggie."

Another of this name is Dr. Arne's beautiful air called the new "Highland Laddie."

THE GENTLE SWAIN.

To sing such a beautiful air to such execrable verses is downright prostitution of common sense! The Scots verses indeed are tolerable.

The Scottish version, written by Mr. Mayne, commences thus:—

Jeanie's heart was frank and free,
And wooers she had many yet,
Her song was aye, Of a' I see,
Commend me to my Johnny yet.
For air and late he has sic a gate
To make a body cheery, that I wish to be, before I die,
His ain kind dearie yet.

HE STOLE MY TENDER HEART AWAY.

This is an Anglo-Scottish production, but by no means a bad one.

The following is a specimen:—

The fields were green, the hills were gay,
And birds were singing on each spray,
When Colin met me in the grove,
And told me tender tales of love,
Was ever swain so blithe as he,
So kind, so faithful and so free?
In spite of all my friends could say,
Young Colin stole my heart away.

FAIREST OF THE FAIR.

It is too barefaced to take Dr. Percy's charming song, and, by means of transposing a few English words into Scots, to offer to pass it for a Scots song. — I was not acquainted with the editor until the first volume was nearly finished, else, had I known in time, I would have prevented such an impudent absurdity.

The following is a complete copy of Percy's beautiful lines:—

O Nancy, wilt thou go with me,
Nor sigh to leave the flaunting town?
Can silent glens have charms for thee,
The lowly cot and rustic gown?
No longer drest in silken sheen,
No longer deck'd with jewels rare,
Say, canst thou quit each courly scene,
Where thou wert fairest of the fair?

O Nancy, when thou'rt far away,
Wilt thou not cast a wish behind?
Say, canst thou face the parching ray,
Nor shrink before the wintry wind?
Oh, can that soft and gentle mien
Extremes of hardship learn to bear;
Nor, sad, regret each courly scene,
Where thou wert fairest of the fair?

O Nancy! canst thou love so true,
Through perils keen with me to go,
Or when thy swain mishap shall rue,
To share with him the pang of woe?
Say, should disease or pain befail,
Wilt thou assume the nurse's care,
Nor wasteful those gay scenes recall,
Where thou wert fairest of the fair?

And when at last thy love shall die,
Wilt thou receive his parting breath?
Wilt thou repress each struggling sigh,
And cheer with smiles the bed of death?
And wilt thou o'er his breathless clay
Strew flowers and drop the tender tear,
Nor then regret those scenes so gay
Where thou wert fairest of the fair?

"This," writes Burns, "is perhaps the most beautiful ballad in the English language."

THE BLAITHRIE O'T.

The following is a set of this song, which was the earliest song I remember to have got by heart. When a child, an old woman sung it to me, and I picked it up, every word at first hearing.

O Willy, well I mind, I lent you my hand
To sing you a song which you did me command;
But my memory's so bad, I had almost forgot
That you call'd it the gear and the blaithrie o't.

I'll not sing about confusion, delusion nor pride,
I'll sing about a laddie was for a virtuous bride;
For virtue is an ornament that time will never rot,
And preferable to gear and the blaithrie o't.
 Though my lassie hae nae scarlets nor silks to put on, [throne; We envy not the greatest that sits upon the I wad rather hae my lassie, though she cam in her smock, [o’t. Than a princess wi’ the gear and the blaitlieh

Though we hae nae horses nor menzie* at command; [our hand; We will toil on our foot, and we’ll work wi’ And when weary with rest, we’ll find it sweet in any spot, [o’t. And we’ll value not the gear and the blaitlieh

If we hae ony babies, we’ll count them as lent; [sink, let them swim; Hae we less, hae we mair, we will aye be con For they say they hae mair pleasure that wins but a groat [o’t. Than the miser wi’ his gear and the blaitlieh

I’ll not meddling wi’ the affairs o’ the kirk or the queen; [sink, let them swim; They’re nae matters for a sang, will let them On your kirk I’ll ne’er encroach, but I’ll hold it still remote, Sae tak this for the gear and the blaitlieh o’t.

MAY EVE OR KATE OF ABERDEEN.

Kate of Aberdeen” is, I believe, the work of poor Cunningham the player; of whom the following anecdote, though told before, deserves a recital. A fat dignitary of the church coming past Cunningham one Sunday, as the poor poet was busy plying a fishing-rod in some stream near Durham, his native county, his reverence reprimanded Cunningham very severely for such an occupation on such a day. The poor poet, with that inoffensive gentleness of manners which was his peculiar characteristic, replied, that he hoped God and his reverence would forgive his seeming profanity of that sacred day, “as he had no dinner to eat but what lay at the bottom of that pool!” This, Mr. Woods, the player, who knew Cunningham well, and esteemed him much, assured me was true.

The silver moon’s enamour’d beam
Steals softly through the night,
To wanton with the winding stream,
And kiss reflected light.

* Menzie—Retinue, followers. afterwards married to a Mr. John Ritchie.

I have seen a song, calling itself the original Tweed-side, and said to have been composed by a Lord Yester. It consisted of two stanzas, of which I still recollect the first—

*When Maggy and I was acquaint,
  I carried my noodle fu' high;
Nae linnet, nae thrush, nae green plain,
Nor gowdspink, sae happy as I;
But I saw her sae fair, and I lo'ed:
  I woo'd, but I cam nae great speed;
So now I maun wander abroad,
  And lay my banes far frae the Tweed.†

The following is Crawford's song, which is still popular:—

What beauties doth Flora disclose!
  How sweet are her smiles upon Tweed!
Yet Mary's, still sweeter than those,
  Both nature and fancy exceed,
Nor daisy, nor sweet blushing rose,
  Nor all the gay flowers of the field,
Nor Tweed, gliding gently through those,
  Such beauty and pleasure do yield.

The warblers are heard in the grove,
The linnet, the lark, and the thrush,
The blackbird and sweet cooing dove
  With music enchant every bush.
Come, let us go forth to the mead,
  Let us see how the primroses spring,
We'll lodge in some village on Tweed,
  And love while the feather'd folks sing.

How does my love pass the long day?
Does Mary not tend a few sheep?
Do they never carelessly stray?
While happily she lies asleep?

fashionable world by the nick-name of Cadie Scott, I believe, because she went to a masked ball in such a disguise. I remember her, an old lady, distinguished for elegant manners and high spirit, though struggling under the disadvantages of a narrow income, as her father's estate, being entailed on heirs male, went to another branch of the Harden family, then called the High Chester family. I have heard a hundred times, from those who lived at the period, that Tweed-side, and the song called Mary Scott, the Flower of Yarrow, were both written upon this much-admired lady, and could add much proof on the subject, if space permit.†

† The following is the other stanza:—
To Maggy my love I did tell,
  Saut tears did my passion express;
Alas! for I lo'ed her o'er well,
  And the women lo'e sic a man less.
Her heart it was frozen and cauld,
  Her pride had my ruin decreed;
Therefore I will wander abroad,
  And lay my banes far frae the Tweed.

Tweed's murmurs should lull her to rest,
Kind nature indulging my bliss,
To ease the soft pains of my breast,
I'd steal an ambrosial kiss.

'Tis she does the virgin excel,
No beauty with her may compare:
Love's graces around her do dwell,
She's fairest, where thousands are fair,
Say, charmer, where do thy flock stray?
Oh! tell me at noon where they feed;
  Is it on the sweet wending Tay,
Or pleasanter banks of the Tweed?

THE POSIE.

It appears evident to me that Oswald composed his "Roslin Castle" on the modulation of this air.†—In the second part of Oswald's, in the three first bars, he has either hit on a wonderful similarity to, or else he has entirely borrowed, the three first bars of the old air; and the close of both tunes is almost exactly the same. The old verses to which it was sung, when I took down the notes from a country girl's voice, had no great merit.—The following is a specimen:—

There was a pretty may,† and a milkin' she went,
Wi' her red rosy cheeks and her coal black hair;
And she has met a young man a comin' o' er the bent.
  With a double and adieu to thee, fair may.

Oh, where are ye goin', my ain pretty may,
Wi' thy red rosy cheeks and thy coal black hair?
Unto the yowes a milkin', kind sir, she says,
  With a double and adieu to thee, fair may.

What if I gang alang wi' thee, my ain pretty may,
  [hair?]
Wi' thy red rosy cheeks and thy coal black hair
Wad I be aught the warse o' that, kind sir, she says.
  With a double and adieu to thee, fair may.

MARY'S DREAM.

The Mary here alluded to is generally supposed to be Miss Mary M'Ghie, daughter to the Laird of Airds, in Galloway. The poet was a Mr. John † Maid.

* This is a mistake—Oswald was not the composer of Roslin Castle.
Lowe,† who likewise wrote another beautiful song, called Pompey’s Ghost.—I have seen a poetic epistle from him in North America, where he now is, or lately was, to a lady in Scotland.—By the strain of the verses, it appeared that they allude to some love affair.

The moon had climbed the highest hill
Which rises o’er the source of Dee,
And from the eastern summit shed
Her silver light on tower and tree,
When Mary laid her down to sleeps,
And her thoughts on Sandy far at sea;
When, soft and low, a voice she heard,
“Mary, weep no more for me!”

She from her pillow gently raised
Her head to ask who there might be;
She saw young Sandy shivering stand,
With visage pale and hollow ce:
O Mary dear! cold is my clay,
It lies beneath a stormy sea;
Far, far from thee I sleep in death.—
So, Mary, weep no more for me!

Three stormy nights and stormy days
We toss’d upon the raging main,
And long we strove our bark to save,
But all our striving was in vain.
Even then, when horror chill’d my blood,
My heart was fill’d with love for thee;
The storm is past, and I at rest,
So, Mary, weep no more for me!

O maiden dear, thyself prepare,
We soon shall meet upon that shore
Where love is free from doubt and care,
And thou and I shall part no more.
Loud crow’d the cock, the shadow fled,
No more of Sandy could she see;
But soft the passing spirit said,
“Sweet Mary, weep no more for me!”

THE MAID THAT TENDS THE GOATS.

BY MR. DUDGEON.

This Dudgeon is a respectable farmer’s son in Berwickshire.

† He was a native of Kenmore in Galloway, and was employed as a tutor in the family of M’Ghie of Airds, about 1770, when the incident recorded in the song occurred. Miss Mary M’Ghie, a daughter of his employer’s, having been betrothed to a young gentleman of the name of Miller, who was at this time unfortunately lost at sea, Lowe commemorated the melancholy event in the above beautiful song. He afterwards emigrated to the United States, where he made an unfortunate marriage, the grief occasioned by which drove him into dissipated habits, that brought him to an early grave.

Up amang yon cliffy rocks,
Sweetly rings the rising echo,
To the maid that tends the goats,
Liting o’er her native notes.
Hark, she sings, Young Sandie’s kind,
And he’s promised aye to loe me,
Here’s a brooch, I ne’er shall tine,
Till he’s fairly married to me.

Drive away, ye drone Time,
And bring about our bridal day.

Sandy herds a flock o’ sheep,
Aften does he blow the whistle,
In a strain sae vastly sweet,
Lam’ies listening dare na blett;
He’s as fleet’s the mountain roe,
Hardy as the Highland heather,
Wading through the winter snow,
Keeping aye his flock together;
But wi’ plaid and bare houghs
He braves the bleakest northern blast.

Brawly he can dance and sing,
Canty glees, or Highland cronach;
Nane can ever match his fling,
At a reel, or round a ring:
Wightly can he wield a rung,
In a brawl he’s aye the baughter;
A’ his praise can ne’er be sung
By the longest winded sangster.
Sangs that sing o’ Sandy,
Seem short, though they were e’er sae lang.

I WISH MY LOVE WERE IN A MIRE.

I NEVER heard more of the words of this old song than the title.

The old song began with these characteristic words:—

I wish my love were in a mire,
That I might pu’ her out again.

The verses in the Museum are merely a translation from Sappho by Ambrose Hillips:—

Blest as the immortal gods is he,
The youth who fondly sits by thee,
And hears and sees thee all the while,
So softly speak and sweetly smile.

’Twas this bereaved my soul of rest,
And raised such tumults in my breast,
For while I gazed, in transport toss’d,
My breath was gone, my voice was lost.

My bosom glow’d, the subtle flame
Ran quick through all my vital frame;
O’er my dim eyes a darkness hung,
My ears with hollow murmurs rung.

In dewy damps my limbs were chill’d,
My blood with gentle horrors thrill’d;
My t eeple pulse forgot to play:
I fainted—sunk—and died away.
ALLAN WATER.

This Allan Water, which the composer of the music has honoured with the name of the air, I have been told is Allan Water in Strathallan.

What numbers shall the muse repeat,
What verse be found to praise my Annie;
On her ten thousand graces wait,
Each swain admires and owns she's bonny.
Since first she strode the happy plain,
She set each youthful heart on fire;
Each nymph does to her swain complain,
That Annie kindles new desire.

This lovely, darling, dearest care,
This new delight, this charming Annie,
Like summer's dawn she's fresh and fair,
When Flora's fragrant breezes fan ye.
All day the am'rous youths convene,
Joyous they sport and play before her;
All night, when she no more is seen,
In joyful dreams they still adore her.

Among the crowd Amyntor came,
He look'd, he lov'd, he bow'd to Annie;
His rising sights express his flame.
His words were few, his wishes many.
With smiles the lovely maid replied,
Kind shepherd, why should I deceive ye?
Alas! your love must be denied,
This destined breast can never relieve ye.

Young Damon came with Cupid's art,
His wiles, his smiles, his charms beguiling;
He stole away my virgin heart;
Cease, poor Amyntor! cease bewailing.
Some brighter beauty you may find;
On yonder plain the nymphs are many;
Then choose some heart that's unconfined,
And leave to Damon his own Annie.

THERE'S NAE LUCK ABOUT THE HOUSE.*

This is one of the most beautiful songs in the Scots, or any other, language.—The two lines,

And will I see his face again?
And will I hear him speak?

as well as the two preceding ones, are unequalled almost by anything I ever heard or read; and the lines,

The present moment is our ain,
The neist we never saw,

are worthy of the first poet. It is long posterior to Ramsay's days. About the year 1771, or 1772, it came first on the streets as a ballad; and I suppose the composition of the song was not more anterior to that period.

There's nae luck about the house,
There's nae luck at a';
There's little pleasure in the house
When our guidman's awa'.

And are you sure the news is true?
And do you say he's weel?
Is this a time to speak of wark?
Ye jades, lay by your wheel!
Is this a time to spin a thread,
When Colin's at the door?
Reach me my cloak, I'll to the quay
And see him come ashore.

And gie to me my bigonet,
My bishop's satin gown;
For I maun tell the baillie's wife
That Colin's in the town.
My turken slippers maun gae on,
My stockings pearly blue;
'Tis a' to please my guidman,
For he's bairth leal and true.

Rise, lass, and make a clean firesid
Put on the muckle pot;
Gie little Kate her button gown,
And Jock his Sunday coat;
And mak their shoon as black as slaes
Their hose as white as snae;
'Tis a' to please my guidman,
For he's been lang awa'.

There's twa fat hens upo the coop,
Been fed this month and mair;
Mak haste and throw their necks about,
That Colin weel may fare;
And mak the table neat and trim;
Let every thing be braw;
For who kens how my Colin fared
When he was far awa'.

Sae true his heart, sae smooth his speech,
His breath like caller air,
His very foot hath music in't,
As he comes up the stair.
And shall I see his face again?
And shall I hear him speak?
I'm downright giddy wi' the thought,
In truth I'm like to greet.

If Colin's weel, and weel content,
I hae nae mair to crave;
And gin I live to mak him sae,
I'm blest aboon the lave.
And shall I see his face again? &c.

TARRY WOO.

This is a very pretty song; but I fancy that the following first half-stanza, as

* William Julius Mickle, a native of Langholm, on the Borders, and well known as the translator of Camoens' immortal poem, "The Lusiad," was the author of this song. He was born in 1734, and died in 1798.
well as the tune itself, is much older than the rest of the words.

Oh, tarry woo is ill to spin,
Card it weel o'er ye begin;
Card it weel and draw it sma',
Tarry woo's the best of a'.

GRAMACHREE.

The song of Gramachree was composed by Mr. Poe, a counsellor at law in Dublin. This anecdote I had from a gentleman who knew the lady, the "Molly," who is the subject of the song, and to whom Mr. Poe sent the first manuscript of these most beautiful verses. I do not remember any single line that has more true pathos than

How can she break the honest heart that wears her in its core:

But as the song is Irish, it had nothing to do in this collection.

As down on Banna's banks I stray'd,
One evening in May,
The little birds in blitheest notes
Made vocal every spray.
They sang their little notes of love;
They sang them o'er and o'er,
Ah! gramachree, mo challie nougè,
Mo Molly Astore.

The daisy pied, and all the sweets
The dawn of nature yields;
The primrose pale, the violet blue,
Lay scatter'd o'er the fields;
Each fragrance in the bosom lies
Of her whom I adore,
Ah! gramachree, mo challie nougè,
Mo Molly Astore.

I laid me down upon a bank,
Bewailing my sad fate,
That doom'd me thus the slave of love,
And cruel Molly's hate.
How can she break the honest heart
That wears her in its core!
Ah! gramachree, mo challie nougè,
Mo Molly Astore.

You said you loved me, Molly dear;
Ah! why did I believe?
Yes, who could think such tender words
Were meant but to deceive?
That love was all I ask'd on earth,
Nay, heaven could give no more,
Ah! gramachree, mo challie nougè,
Mo Molly Astore.

Oh! had I all the flocks that graze,
On yonder yellow hill;
Or low'd for me the num'rous herds,
That you green pastures fill;

With her I love I'd gladly share
My kine and fleecy store,
Ah! grammachree, mo challie nougè,
Mo Molly Astore.

Two turtle doves above my head,
Sat courting on a bough;
I envy'd them their happiness,
To see them bill and coo.
Such fondness once for me she show'd,
But now, alas! 'tis o'er;
Ah! grammachree, mo challie nougè,
Mo Molly Astore.

Then fare thee well, my Molly dear,
'Tis in my heart I shall remain;
Whilst life remains in Strep'phon's heart,
'Twill beat for thee alone.
Though thou art false, may Heaven on thee
Its choicest blessings pour!
Ah! grammachree, mo challie nougè,
Mo Mollie Astore.

THE COLLIER’S BONNY LASSIE.

The first half stanza is much older than the days of Ramsay.—The old words began thus:—

The collier has a dochter, and, oh, she's wonder bonny;
A laird he was that sought her, rich baith in She wad nae hae a laird, nor wad she be a lady;
But she wad hae a collier, the colour o' her

The verses in the Museum are very pretty; but Allan Ramsay's songs have always nature to recommend them:—

The Collier has a daughter.
And oh, she's wonder bonny!
A laird he was that sought her,
Rich baith in land and money.
The tutors watch'd the motion
Of this young honest lover,
But love is like the ocean,
Wha can its deeps discover?

He had the heart to please ye,
And was by a' respected,
His airs sat round him easy,
Gentle, but unaffected.
The Collier's bonny lassie,
Fair as the new-blown lily,
Aye sweet and never saucy,
Secured the heart of Willie.

He loved beyond expression,
The charms that were about her,
And panted for possession.
His life was dull without her.
After mature resolving,
Close to his breast he held her
In safest flames dissolving,
He tenderly thus tell'd her—

"My bonny Collier's daughter
Let naething discomposè ye;
'Tis no your scanty tocher
Shall ever gar me lose ye."
For I have gear in plenty,
And love says 'tis my duty
To wear what Heaven has sent me,
Upon your wit and beauty"

MY AIN KIND DEARIE, O.

The old words of this song are omitted here, though much more beautiful than those inserted; which were mostly composed by poor Ferguson, in one of his merry humours. The old words began thus:—

I'll rowe thee o'er the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O.
I'll rowe thee o'er the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O,
Although the night were ne'er sae wat,
And I were ne'er sae weary, O,
I'll rowe thee o'er the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O.

The following are Ferguson's verses.—

Nae herds wi' kent and collie there
Shall ever come to fear ye, O,
But laverocks whistling in the air,
Shall woo, like me, their dearie, O!

While others herd their lambs and ewes,
And toil for world's gear, my jo,
Upon the lee my pleasure grows,
Wi' you, my kind dearie, O!

Will ye gang o'er the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O?
And cuddle there, sae kindly wi' me,
My kind dearie, O!

At thorny dike, and birkin tree,
We'll daff, and ne'er be weary, O!
They'll sing ill e'en frae you and me,
My ain kind dearie, O!

MARY SCOTT, THE FLOWER OF YARROW.

Mr. Robertson, in his statistical account of the parish of Selkirk, says, that Mary Scott, the Flower of Yarrow, was descended from the Dryhope, and married into the Harden family. Her daughter was married to a predecessor of the present Sir Francis Elliot of Stobbs, and of the late Lord Heathfield.

There is a circumstance in their contract of marriage that merits attention, and it strongly marks the predatory spirit of the times. The father-in-law agrees to keep his daughter for some time after the marriage; for which the son-in-law binds himself to give him the profits of the first Michaelmas moon.*

Allan Ramsay's version is as follows:—

Happy's the love which meets return,
When in soft flame souls equal burn;
But words are wanting to discover
The torments of a hapless lover.
Ye registers of heaven, relate,
If looking o'er the rolls of fate,
Did you there see me mark'd to marrow;
Mary Scott, the flower of Yarrow.

Ah, no! her form's too heavenly fair,
Her love the gods alone must share;
While mortals with despair explore her,
And at a distance due adore her.
O lovely maid! my doubts beguile,
Revive and bless me with a smile.
Alas, if not, you'll soon debar
A sighing swain on the banks of Yarrow.

Be hush'd, ye fears! I'll not despair,
My Mary's tender as she's fair;
Then I'll go tell her all mine anguish,
She is too good to let me languish;
With success crown'd, I'll not envy
The folks who dwell above the sky;
When Mary Scott's become my marrow,
We'll make a paradise of Yarrow.

DOWN THE BURN, DAVIE.

I HAVE been informed that the tune of "Down the Burn, Davie," was the composition of David Maigh, keeper of the blood slough-hounds, belonging to the Laird of Riddell, in Tweeddale.

When trees did bud, and fields were green,
And broom bloom'd fair to see;
When Mary was complete fifteen,
And love laugh'd in her eye;
Blithe Davie's blinks her heart did move,
To speak her mind thus free,
"Gang down the burn, Davie, love,
And I shall follow thee."

Now Davie did each lad surpass
That dwalt on yon burn side,
And Mary was the bonniest lass,
Just meet to be a bride;
Her cheeks were rosy, red and white,
Her een were bonny blue;
Her looks were like Aurora bright,
Her lips like dropping dew.

* The time when the moss-troopers and cattle-reavers on the Borders began of yore their nightly depredations.
As down the burn they took their way,
What tender tales they said!
His cheek to hers he ait did lay,
And with her bosom play'd;
Till baith at length impatient grown
To be mair fully blest,
In yonder yale they lean'd them down—
Love only saw the rest.

What pass'd I guess was harmless play,
And naething sure unmeet:
For ganging hame, I heard them say,
They liked a walk sae sweet;
And that they aften should return
Sic pleasure to renew,
Quoth Mary, "Love, I like the burn,
And aye shall follow you."

BLINK O'ER THE BURN, SWEET BETTY.

The old words, all that I remember, are,—

Blink over the burn, sweet Betty,
It is a cauld winter night;
It rains, it hails, it thunders,
The moon she gies nae light:
It's a' for the sake o' sweet Betty
That ever I tint my way;
Sweet, let me lie beyond thee
Until it be break o' day.

Oh, Betty will bake my bread,
And Betty will brew my ale,
And Betty will be my love,
When I come over the dale;
Blink over the burn, sweet Betty,
Blink over the burn to me,
And while I hae life, dear lassie,
My ain sweet Betty thou's be.

THE BLITHESOME BRIDAL.*

I find the "Blithesome Bridal" in James Watson's collection of Scots Poems printed at Edinburgh, in 1706. This collection, the publisher says, is the first of its nature which has been published in our own native Scots dialect—it is now extremely scarce.

The entire song is much too long for quotation; but the following verses, describing the guests who were to be present and the dishes to be provided for them, will convey a very fair idea of its merit:—

Comp. fye, let us a' to the wedding,
For there will be liting there,

For Jock will be married to Maggie,
The lass wi' the gowden hair.
And there will be lang kail and castocks,
And bannocks o' barley-meal;
And there will be guid saut herring,
To relish a cog o' guid ale.

And there will be Sandy the sutor,
And Will wi' the meikel mou;
And there will be Tam the blatter,
With Andrew the tinkler, I tow;
And there will be bow-legg'd ROBIE,
With thumbsless Katie's gudeman;
And there will be blue-cheek'd Dobbie,
And Laurie, the laird of the land.

And there will be sow-libber Patie,
And pookie-faced Wat o' the mill;
Powcowdie and drammock and crowdie,
And caller nowt feet on a plate;
And there will be Alister Sibbie,
Wha in wi' black Bessie did mool,
With snivelling Lillie and Tibbie,
The lass that stands a'ft on the stool.

And there will be fadges and brochan,
Wi' routh o' gude gabbocks o' skate;
Powcowdie and drammock and crowdie,
And caller nowt feet on a plate;
And there will be partans and buckies,
And whittings and speldings anew;
With singed sheep heads and a haggis,
And scadlips to sup till ye spew.

And there will be lapper'd milk kebuck,
And sowens, and carles, and laps;
Wi' swats and well-scraped paunches,
And brandy in stoups and in caps;
And there will be meal-kail and porridge;
Wi' skark to sup till ye rive,
And roasis to roast on a brander,
Of flewks that were taken alive.

Scrap haddocks, wilks, dulse, and tangle,
And a mill o' guid sneeshin to prie,
When weary wi' eating and drinking.
We'll rise up and dance till we die:
Then fye let's a' to the bridal,
For there will be liting there,
For Jock 'll be married to Maggie,
The lass wi' the gowden hair.

JOHN HAY'S BONNY LASSIE.

JOHN HAY's "Bonny Lassie" was the daughter of John Hay, Earl or Marquis of Tweeddale, and the late Countess Dowager of Roxburgh. She died at Broomlands, near Kelso, some time between the years 1720 and 1740.

She's fresh as the spring, and sweet as Aurora,
When birds mount and sing, bidding day a good morrow;
The sword o' the mead, enamel'd wi'daisies,
Look with'er'd and dead when twin'd o' her graces.
But if she appear where verdures invite her,
The fountains run clear, and flowers smell the sweeter;
'Tis heaven to be by when her wit is a-flowing,
Her smiles and bright een set my spirits a-glowing.

THE BONNY BRUCKET LASSIE.

The first two lines of this song are all of it that is old. The rest of the song, as well as those songs in the Museum marked T., are the works of an obscure, tippling, but extraordinary body of the name of Tytler, commonly known by the name of Balloon Tytler, from his having projected a balloon: a mortal, who, though, he drudges about Edinburgh as a common printer, with leaky shoes, a sky-lighted hat, and knee-buckles as unlike as George-by-the-grace-of-God, and Solomon-the-son-of-Davie; yet that same unknown drunken mortal is author and compiler of three-fourths of Elliot's pompous Encyclopedia Britannica, which he composed at half-a-guinea a week!

The bonny brucket lassie,
She's blue beneath the c'en;
She was the fairest lassie
That danced on the green:
A lad he lov'd her dearly,
She did his love return;
But he his vows has broken,
And left her for to mourn.

"My shape," says she, "was handsome,
My face was fair and clean;
But now I'm bonny brucket,
And blue beneath the c'en:
My eyes were bright and sparkling,
Before that they turn'd blue;
But now they're dull with weeping,
And a', my love, for you.

"Oh, could I live in darkness,
Or hide me in the sea,
Since my love is unfaithful,
And has forsaken me,
No other love I suffer'd
Within my breast to dwell;
In nought have I offended,
But loving him too well."

Her lover heard her mourning,
As by he chanced to pass;
And press'd unto his bosom
The lovely brucket lass.
"My dear," said he, "cease grieving;
Since that your love is true,
My bonny brucket lass,
I'll faithful prove to you."

SAE MERRY AS WE TWÁ HÆ BEEN.

This song is beautiful,—The chorus in particular is truly pathetic. I never could learn anything of its author.

CHORUS.

Sae merry as we twá hæ been,
Sae merry as we twá hæ been;
My heart it is like for to break,
When I think on the days we hæ seen.

A lass that was laden with care
Sat heavily under a thorn;
I listen'd a while for to hear,
When thus she began for to mourn:
Whene'er my dear shepherd was there,
The birds did melodiously sing,
And cold nipping winter did wear
A face that resembled the spring.

Our flocks feeding close by his side,
He gently pressing my hand,
I view'd the wide world in its pride,
And laugh'd at the pomp of command.
"My dear," he would oft to me say,
"What makes you hard-hearted to me?
Oh! why do you thus turn away
From him who is dying for thee?"

But now he is far from my sight,
Perhaps a deceiver may prove,
Which makes me lament day and night,
That ever I granted my love.
At eve, when the rest of the folk
Were merrily seated to spin,
I set myself under an oak,
And heavily sigh'd for him.

THE BANKS OF FORTH.

This air is Oswald's.

"Here's another—'tis no a Scots tune, but it passes for ane—Oswald made it himsel. I reckon. He has cheated mony a ane, but he canna cheat Wandering Willie."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

The following is the song as given in the Museum:

Ye sylvan powers that rule the plain,
Where sweetly wending Fortha glides,
Conduct me to those banks again,
Since there my charming Mary bides.

Those banks that breathe their vernal sweets
Where every smiling beauty meets;
Where Mary's charms adorn the plain,
And cheer the heart of every swain.

Oft in the thick embowering groves,
Where birds their music chirp aloud,
Alternately we sang our loves,
And Fortha's fair meanders view'd.
The meadows wore a general smile,
Love was our banquet all the while;
The lovely prospect charm'd the eye,
To where the ocean met the sky.

Once on the grassy bank reclined
Where Forth ran by in murmurs deep,
It was my happy chance to find
The charming Mary lull'd asleep;

My heart then leap'd with inward bliss,
I softly stoop'd, and stole a kiss;
She waked, she blush'd, and gently blamed,
"Why, Damon! are you not ashamed?"

Ye sylvan powers, ye rural gods,
To whom we swains our cares impart,
Restore me to those blest abodes,
And case, oh! case my love-sick heart!

Those happy days again restore,
When Mary and I shall part no more;
When she shall fill these longing arms,
And crown my bliss with all her charms.

THE BUSH ABOON TRAQUIAIR.

This is another beautiful song of Mr. Crawford's composition. In the neighbourhood of Traquair, tradition still shows the old "Bush," which, when I saw it in the year 1787, was composed of eight or nine ragged birches. The Earl of Traquair has planted a clump of trees near by, which he calls "The new Bush."

Hear me, ye nymphs, and every swain,
I'll tell how Peggy grieves me;
Though thus I languish and complain,
Alas! she ne'er believes me.

My vows and sighs, like silent air,
Unheeded never move her;
The bonny bush aboon Traquair,
Was where I first did love her.

That day she smiled and made me glad,
No maid seem'd ever kinder;
I thought myself the luckiest lad,
So sweetly there to find her.
I tried to soothe my amorous flame
In words that I thought tender;
If more there pass'd, I'm not to blame,
I meant not to offend her.

Yet now she scornful flees the plain,
The fields we then frequented;
If e'er we meet, she shows disdain,
She looks as ne'er acquainted.
The bonny bush bloom'd fair in May,
Its sweets I'll aye remember;
But now her frowns make it decay;
It fades as in December.

Ye rural powers, who hear my strains,
Why thus should Peggy grieve me?
Oh! make her partner in my pains;
Then let her smiles relieve me.
If not, my love will turn despair,
My passion no more tender;
I'll leave the bush aboon Traquair,
To lonely wilds I'll wander.

CROMLET'S LILT.

The following interesting account of this plaintive dirge was communicated to Mr. Riddel by Alexander Fraser Tytler, Esq., of Woodhouselee:—

"In the latter end of the 16th century, the Chisholms were proprietors of the estate of Cromleck, (now possessed by the Drummonds.) The eldest son of that family was very much attached to the daughter of Stirling of Ardoch, commonly known by the name of Fair Helen of Ardoch.

"At that time the opportunities of meeting between the sexes were more rare, consequently more sought after than now; and the Scottish ladies, far from priding themselves on extensive literature, were thought sufficiently book-learned if they could make out the Scriptures in their mother tongue. Writing was entirely out of the line of female education. At that period the most of our young men of family sought a fortune or found a grave in France. Cromleck, when he went abroad to war, was obliged to leave the management of his correspondence with his mistress to a lay-brother of the monastery of Dunblane in the immediate neighbourhood of Cromleck, and near Ardoch. This man unfortunately, was deeply sensible of Helen's charms. Heartfully prepossessed her with stories to the disadvantage of Cromleck; and, by misinterpreting, or keeping up the letters and messages intrusted to his care, he entirely irritated both. All connection was broken off betwixt them: Helen was inconsolable, and Cromleck has left behind him, in the ballad called 'Cromlet's Lilt,' a proof of the elegance of his genius, as well as the steadiness of his love."

"When the artful monk thought time had sufficiently softened Helen’s sorrow, he proposed himself as a lover. Helen was obdurate, but at last, overcome by the persuasions of her brother, with whom she lived, and who, having a family of thirty-one children, was probably very well pleased to get her off his hands—she submitted rather than consented to the ceremony, but there her compliance ended; and, when forcibly put into bed, she started quite frantic from it, screaming out, that after three gentle raps on the wainscoat, at the bed-head, she heard Cromleck’s voice, crying, ‘O Helen, Helen, mind me!’ Cromleck soon after coming home, the treachery of the confidant was discovered—her marriage annulled—and Helen became Lady Cromleck.”

MY DEARIE, IF THOU DIE.

_ANOTHER beautiful song of Crawford’s._

_Love never more shall give me pain,_
My fancy’s fix’d on thee,
_Nor ever maid my heart shall gain,_
My Peggy, if thou die.
_Thy beauty doth such pleasure give,_
_Thy love’s so true to me,_
_Without thee I can never live,_
_My dearie, if thou die._

If fate shall tear thee from my breast,
_How shall I lonely stray?_
_In dreary dreams the night I’ll waste, _
_In sighs, the silent day._
_I ne’er can so much virtue find,_
_Nor such perfection see;_
_Then I’ll renounce all woman-kind,_
_My Peggy, after thee._

No new-blown beauty fires my heart,
_With Cupid’s raving rage;_
_But thine, which can such sweets impart,_
_Must all the world engage._
_’Twas this that like the morning sun_
_Gave joy and life to me;_
_And when its destined day is done,_
_With Peggy let me die._

_Ye powers that smile on virtuous love,_
_In such pleasure share;_
_You who its faithful flames approve,_
_With pity view the fair;_
_Restore my Peggy’s wonted charms,_
_Those charms so dear to me!_
_Oh! never rob them from these arms!_
_I’m lost if Peggy die._

SHE ROSE AND LET ME IN.

_The old set of this song, which is still to be found in printed collections, is much prettier than this; but some—_ body, I believe it was Ramsay,* took it into his head to clear it of some seeming indelicacies and made it at once more chaste and more dull.

The Museum version is as follows:—

The night her silent sables wore
And gloomy were the skies,
Of glittering stars appear'd no more
Than those in Nelly's eyes.
When to her father's door I came,
Where I had often been,
I begg'd my fair, my lovely dame,
To rise and let me in.

But she, with accents all divine,
Did my fond suit reprove,
And while she chid my rash design,
She but inflamed my love.
Her beauty oft had pleased before,
While her bright eyes did roll:
But virtue only had the power
To charm my very soul.

Oh, who would cruelly deceive,
Or from such beauty part!
I loved her so, I could not leave
The charmer of my heart.
My eager fondness I obey'd,
Resolved she should be mine,
Till Hymen to my arms convey'd
My treasure so divine.

Now happy in my Nelly's love,
Transporting is my joy,
No greater blessing can I prove,
So blest a man am I.
For beauty may a while retain,
The conquer'd flattering mart,
But virtue only is the chain
Holds, never to depart.

WILL YE GO TO THE EWE-BUGHTS,1 MARION?

I am not sure if this old and charming air be of the South, as is commonly said, or of the North of Scotland. There is a song apparently as ancient as "Ewe-bughts, Marion," which sings to the same time, and is evidently of the North—it begins thus:—

1 Sheep-folds.

* "No, no: it was not Ramsay. The song still remains in his Tea-Table Miscellany, and the Orpheus Caledonius, and even in Herd's Collection, in its primitive state of indelicacy. The verses in the Museum were retouched by an able and masterly hand, who has thus presented us with a song at once chaste and elegant, without a single idea to crimine the cheek of modesty, or cause one pang to the innocent heart."—Stenhouse.

The Lord o' Gordon had three docthers,
Mary, Marget, and Jean,
They wad na stay at bonny Castle Gordon,
But awa' to Aberdeen.

The old ballad begins thus:—

Will ye go to the ewe-bughts, Marion,
And wear in the sheep my bonnie Marion,
But nae half sae sweet as thee.

O Marion's a bonny lass,
And the binte blink's in her ee;
And fain wad I marry Marion,
Gin Marion wad marry me.

LEWIE GORDON.

This air is a proof how one of our Scotch tunes comes to be composed out of another. I have one of the earliest copies of the song, and it has prefixed — "'Tune—' Tarry Woo'"—of which tune a different set has insensibly varied into a different air. —To a Scots critic, the pathos of the line,

"Though his back be at the wa',"

must be very striking. It needs not a Jacobite prejudice to be affected with this song.

The supposed author of "Lewie Gordon" was a Mr. Geddes, priest at Shenvall in the Ainzie.

Oh! send Lewie Gordon hame,
And the lad I maunna name;
Though his back be at the wa',
Here's to him that's far awa'!

Oh hon! my Highland man!
Oh, my bonny Highland man;
Weel would I my true-love ken,
Amang ten thousand Highland men.

Oh, to see his tartan trews,
Bonnet blue, and laigh-heel'd shoes;
Philabeg aboon his knee;
That's the lad that I'll gang wi!

Oh, hon! &c.

The princely youth that I do mean
Is fitted for to be king;
On his breast he wears a star,
You'd take him for the god of war.

Oh, hon! &c.

Oh, to see this princely one
Seated on a royal throne!
Disasters a' would disappear,
Then begins the Jubilee year!

Oh, hon! &c.

Lord Lewie Gordon, younger brother to the Duke of Gordon, commanded a detachment for the Young Chevalier in the affair of 1745-6, and acquitted himself with great gallantry and judgment. He died in 1754.
THE WAULKING O' THE FAULD.

There are two stanzas still sung to this tune, which I take to be the original song whence Ramsay composed his beautiful song of that name in the Gentle Shepherd. It begins

"Oh, will ye speak at our town,
As ye come frae the fauld," &c.

I regret that, as in many of our old songs, the delicacy of this old fragment is not equal to its wit and humour.

The following is Ramsay's version:—

My Peggie is a young thing,
Just enter'd in her teens;
Fair as the day, and sweet as May,
Fair as the day, and always gay,
My Peggie is a young thing,
And I'm not very auld;
Yet well I like to meet her at
The waulk'ing o' the fauld.

My Peggie speaks sae sweetly
When'er we meet alane;
I wish nae mair to lay my care,
I wish nae mair of a' that's rare.
My Peggie speaks sae sweetly,
'To a' the lave I'm cauld;
But she gars a' my spirits glow
At waulk'ing o' the fauld.

My Peggie smiles sae kindly
When'er I whisper love,
That I look down on a' the town,
That I look down upon a crown.
My Peggie smiles sae kindly,
It makes me blithe and baule;
And naething gies me sic delight
As waulk'ing o' the fauld.

My Peggie sings sae saftly
When on my pipe I play;
By a' the rest it is confess'd,
By a' the rest that she sings best:
My Peggie sings sae saftly,
And in her songs are tauld,
With innocence, the wale o' sense,
At waulk'ing o' the fauld.

OH ONO CHRIST.*

Dr. Blacklock informed me that this song was composed on the infamous massacre at Glencoe.

Oh! was not I a weary wight!
Maid, wife and widow in one night!
When in my soft and yielding arms, [harms,
Oh! when most I thought him free from

Even at the dead time of the night
They broke my bower, and slew my knight.
With anlock of his jet-black hair
I'll tie my heart for evermair;
Nae sly-tongued youth, nor flattering swain,
Shall e'er untie this knot again;
Thine still, dear youth, that heart shall be,
Nor pant for aught save heaven and thee.

I'LL NEVER LEAVE THEE.

This is another of Crawford's songs, but I do not think in his happiest manner. What an absurdity to join such names as Adonis and Mary together!

One day I heard Mary say,
How shall I leave thee;
Stay, dearest Adonis, stay,
Why wilt thou grieve me?

CORN-RIGS ARE BONNY.

All the old words that ever I could meet to this air were the following, which seem to have been an old chorus:—

Oh, corn-rigs and rye-rigs,
Oh, corn-rigs are bonny;
And, where'er you meet a bonny lass,
Preen up her cockernony.

BIDE YE YET.

There is a beautiful song to this tune, beginning,

"Alas! my son, you little know,"
which is the composition of Miss Jenny Graham, of Dumfries.

Alas! my son, you little know
The sorrows that from wedlock flow;
Farewell to every day of ease
When you have got a wife to please.

Sae bide ye yet, and bide ye yet,
Ye little ken what's to betide ye yet;
The half o' that will gane ye yet,
Gif a wayward wife obain ye yet.

Your hopes are high, your wisdom small,
Woe has not had you in its thrall;
The black cow on your foot ne'er trod,
Which gars you sing along the road.

Sae bide ye yet, &c.

Sometimes the rock, sometimes the reel,
Or some piece of the spinning-wheel,
She'll drive at you, my bonny chiel,
And send you headlong to the delf,

Sae bide ye yet, &c.

* A vitiated pronunciation of "Och in och reid"—a Gaelic exclamation expressive of deep sorrow and affliction.
Remarks on Scottish Song.

When I, like you, was young and free,
I valued not the proudest she;
Like you, my boast was bold and vain,
That men alone were born to reign.
Sae bide ye yet, &c.

Great Hercules, and Samson too,
Were stronger far than I or you;
Yet they were baffled by their dears,
And tell the distaff and the shears.
Sae bide ye yet, &c.

Stout gates of brass and well-built walls
Are proof ’gainst swords and cannon balls;
But nought is found, by sea or land,
That can a wayward wife withstand.
Sae bide ye yet, &c.

Here the remarks on the first volume of the Musical Museum conclude:
the second volume has the following preface from the pen of Burns:

"In the first volume of this work, two or three airs, not of Scots composition, have been inadvertently inserted; which, whatever excellence they may have, was improper, as the collection is solely to be the music of our own country. The songs contained in this volume, both music and poetry, are all of them the work of Scotsmen. Wherever the old words could be recovered, they had been preferred, both as suiting better the genius of the tunes, and to preserve the productions of those earlier sons of the Scottish muses, some of whose names deserved a better fate than has beenfallen them.—'Buried midst the wreck of things which were.' Of our more modern songs, the editor has inserted the author's names as far as he can ascertain them; and as that was neglected in the first volume, it is annexed here. If he have made any mistakes in this affair, which he possibly may, he will be very grateful at being set right.

'Ignoreance and prejudice may perhaps affect to sneer at the simplicity of the poetry or music of some of these poems; but their having been for ages the favourites of nature's judges—the common people—was to the editor a sufficient test of their merit.

"Edinburgh, March 1, 1773."

Tranent Muir.

"Tranent Muir" was composed by a Mr. Skirving, a very worthy, respectable farmer, near Haddington.*

I have heard the anecdote often, that Lieut. Smith, whom he mentions in the ninth stanza, came to Haddington after the publication of the song, and sent a challenge to Skirving to meet him at Haddington, and answer for the unworthy manner in which he had noticed him in his song. "Gang away back," said the honest farmer, "and tell Mr. Smith that I have nae leisure to come to Haddington; but tell him to come here, and I'll tak a look o' him, and if he think I'm fit to f'echt him, I'll fecht him; and if no, I'll do as he did—I'll rin awa!"

Stanza ninth, as well as tenth, to which the anecdote refers, shows that the anger of the lieutenant was anything but unreasonable.

Ann Major Bowle, that worthy soul,
Was brought down to the ground, man;
His horse being shot, it was his lot
For to get many a wound, man:
Lieutenant Smith of Irish birth,
Frac whom he called for aid, man,
Being full of dread, lap o'er his head,
And wadna be gainsay'd, man!

He made sic haste, sae spur'd his baist,
'Twas little there he saw, man;
To Berwick rade, and falsely said
The Scots were rebels a', man:
But let that end, for well 'tis kenn'd,
His use and wont to lie, man;
The league is naught, he never faught
When he had room to flee, man.

Polwart† on the Green.

The author of "Polwart on the Green" is Capt. John Drummond M'Gregor, of the family of Bochaldie.‡

At Polwart on the green,
If you'll meet me the morn,

* Mr. Skirving was tenant of East Garleton, about a mile and a half to the north of Haddington.
† "Polwart is a pleasant village situate near Denbe, in Berwickshire. In the middle of the village stand two venerable thorns, round which the Polwart maidens, when they became brides, danced with their partners on the day of the bridal."—Cunningham.
‡ The poet is in error here. The best authorities agree in ascribing the authorship of the song to Allan Ramsay.
Where lasses do conveen
To dance about the thorn,
A kindly welcome ye shall meet
Frac her wha likes to view
A lover and a lad complete—
The lad and lover you.

Let doryt dames say na
As lang as e’er they please,
Seem cauldther than the snaw,
While inwardly they breeze.
But I will frankly shaw my mind,
And yield my heart to thee;
Be ever to the captive kind
That langs na to be free.

At Polwurt on the green,
Amang the new-mown hay,
With songs and dancing keen
We’ll pass the heartsome day.
At night, if beds be o’er thrang laid,
And thou be twined of thine,
Thou shalt be welcome, my dear lad,
To take a part of mine.

STREPHON AND LYDIA.
The following account of this song
I had from Dr. Blacklock:—

The Strephon and Lydia mentioned in the song were perhaps the loveliest couple of their time. The gentleman was commonly known by the name of Beau Gibson. The lady was the “Gentle Jean,” celebrated somewhere in Hamilton of Bangour’s poems.—Having frequently met at public places, they had formed a reciprocal attachment, which their friends thought dangerous, as their resources were by no means adequate to their tastes and habits of life. To elude the bad consequences of such a connection, Strephon was sent abroad with a commission, and perished in Admiral Vernon’s expedition to Carthagena.
The author of the song was William Wallace, Esq., of Cairnhill, in Ayrshire.

All lonely on the sultry beach,
Expiring, Strephon lay;
No hand the cordial draught to reach,
Nor cheer the gloomy way;
Ill-fated youth! no parent nigh
To catch thy fleeting breath,
No bride to fix thy swimming eye.
Or smooth the face of death!

Far distant from the mournful scene
Thy Lydia ripes all the plain,
And all the spring, to please.

MY JO, JANET.

OF THE “MUSEUM.”

JOHNSON, the publisher, with a foolish delicacy, refused to insert the last stanza of this humorous ballad.

Oh, sweet sir, for your courtesie,
When ye come by the Bass then,
For the love ye bear to me,
Buy me a keeking-glass then.
Keek into the draw-well,
Janet, Janet;
And there ye’ll see your bonny sel’,
My jo, Janet.

Keeking in the draw-well clear,
What if I should fa’ in then;
Syne a’ my kin will say and swear
I drown’d mysel’ for sin, then.
Haud the better by the brae,
Janet, Janet!
Haud the better by the brae,
My jo, Janet.

Good sir, for your courtesie,
Coming through Aberdeen then,
For the love ye bear to me,
Buy me a pair of sheen then.
Clout the auld, the new are dear,
Janet, Janet;
A pair may gain ye half a year,
My jo, Janet.

But what, if dancing on the green,
And skipping like a mautin’,
If they should see my clouted sheen,
Of me they will be talkin’.
Dance aye laugh, and late at e’en,
Janet, Janet;
Syne a’ their fauts will no be seen,
My jo, Janet.

Kind sir, for your courtesie,
When ye gae to the cross then,
For the love ye bear to me,
Buy me a pacing horse then.
Pace upo’ your spinning-wheel,
Janet, Janet;
Pace upo’ your spinning-wheel,
My jo, Janet.

My spinning-wheel is auld and stiff,
The rock o’er winna stand, sir;
To keep the temper-pin in tiff
Employs right aft my hand, sir.
Mak the best o’ that ye can,
Janet, Janet;
But like it never wale a man,
My jo, Janet.
LOVE IS THE CAUSE OF MY MOURNING.

The words by a Mr. R. Scott, from the town or neighbourhood of Biggar.

The first stanza of this fine song is as follows:

By a murmuring stream a fair shepherdess lay,
Be so kind, O ye nymphs, I oft heard her say,
Tell Strephon I die, if he passes this way,
And love is the cause of my mourning.
False shepherds, that tell me of beauty and charms,
[warm]
Deceive me, for Strephon's cold heart never Yet bring me this Strephon, I'll die in his arms;
O Strephon! the cause of my mourning.
But first, said she, let me go
Down to the shades below,
Ere ye let Strephon know
That I have loved him so:
Then on my pale cheek no blushes will show
That love is the cause of my mourning.

FIFE, AND A' THE LANDS ABOUT IT.

This song is Dr. Blacklock's. He, as well as I, often gave Johnston verses, trifling enough, perhaps, but they served as a vehicle to the music.

Allan, by his grief excited,
Lar'd the victim of despair,
Thus deplored his passion slighted,
Thus address'd the scornful fair:
"Fife, and all the lands about it,
Undesiring, I can see;
Joy may crown my days without it,
Not, my charmer, without thee.
"Must I then forever languish,
Still complaining, still endure?
Can her form create an anguish
Which her soul disdains to cure?
Why, by hopeless passion fated,
Must I still those eyes admire,
Whilst unheeded, unregretted,
In her presence I expire?
"Would thy charms improve their power,
Timely think, relentless maid;
Beauty is a short-lived flower,
Destined but to bloom and fade!
Let that heaven, whose kind impression
All thy lovely features show,
Melt thy soul to soft compassion
For a suffering lover's woe."

WERENA MY HEART LIGHT I WAD DIE.

Lord Hailes, in the notes to his Collection of ancient Scots poems, says that this song was the composition of Lady Grisel Baillie, daughter of the first Earl of Marchmont, and wife of George Baillie of Jerviswood.

There was aye a may, and she lo'd na men,
She biggit her bonny bower down in yon glen;
But now she cries dool! and ah, well-a-day!
Come down the green gate, and come here away.

When bonny young Johnny came o'er the sea,
He said he saw naething sae lovely as me;
He hecht me baith rings and mony braw things;
And werena my heart light I wad die.

He had a wee titty that lo'd na me,
Because I was twice as bonny as she:
She raised such a pother 'twixt him and his mother,
That werena my heart light I wad die.

The day it was set, and the bridal to be,
The wife took a dwam, and laid down to die;
She main'd and she grain'd, out of dolour and pain,
Till he vow'd he never wad see me again.

His kin was for ane of a higher degree,
Said, What had he to do with the like of me?
Albeit I was bonny, I wasna for Johnny
And werena my heart light I wad die.

They said I had neither cow nor caff,
Nor dribbles of drink rings through the draff,
Nor pickles of meal rings through the mill-ee;
And werena my heart light I wad die.

His titty she was baith wily and slye,
She spied me as I came o'er thee lee;
And then she ran in, and made a loud din,
Believe your ain een, an ye trow na me.

His bonnet stood ance fu' round on his brow,
His auld ane looks ay e as well as some's new;
But now he lets' wear ony gate it will hing,
And casts himself dowie upon the corn-bing.

And now he goes drooping about the dykes,
And a' he dow do is to hund the tykes:
The live-lang night he ne'er steeks his ee,
And werena my heart light I wad die.

Were I young for thee, as I ane ha'e been,
We shoud ha'e been galloping down on ye green,
And linking it on the lily-white lee;
And wow gin I were but young for thee!

THE YOUNG MAN'S DREAM.

This song is the composition of Balloon Tytler, mentioned at p. 340.

One night I dream'd I lay most easy,
By a murmuring river side,
Where lovely banks were spread with daisies,
And the streams did smoothly glide;
While around me, and quite over,
Spreading branches were display'd,
All interwoven in due order,
Soon became a pleasant shade.

I saw my lass come in most charming,
With a look and air so sweet;
Every grace was most charming,
Every beauty most complete.

Cupid with his bow attended;
Lovely Venus too was there:
As his bow young Cupid bended,
Far away flew carking care.

On a bank of roses seated,
Charming my true-love sung;
While glad echo still repeated,
And the hills and valleys rung.

At the last, by sleep oppress'd,
On the bank my love did lie,
By young Cupid still caress'd,
While the graces round did fly.

The rose's red, the lily's blossom,
With her charms might not compare,
To view her cheeks and heaving bosom,
Down they droop'd as in despair.

On her sleeping I mounted;
Panting came to steal a kiss;
Cupid smiled at me approaching,
Seem'd to say, "There's nought amiss."

With eager wishes I drew nigher,
This fair maiden to embrace:
My breath grew quick, my pulse beat higher,
Gazing on her lovely face.

The nymph, awaking, quickly check'd me,
Starting up, with angry tone;
"Thus," says she, "do you respect me?
Leave me quick, and hence begone."

Cupid for me interposing
To my love did bow full low;
She from him her hands unloosing,
In contempt struck down his bow.

Angry Cupid from her flying,
Cried out, as he sought the skies,
"Haughty nymphs, their love denying,
Cupid ever shall despise."

As he spoke, old care came wandering,
With him stalk'd destructive Time;
Winter froze the streams meandering,
Nipt the roses in their prime.

Spectres then my love surrounded,
At their back march'd chilling Death.
Whilst she, frighted and confounded,
Felt their blasting, pois'nous breath:

As her charms were swift decaying,
And the furrows seized her cheek;
Forbear, ye fiends! I vainly crying,
Waked in the attempt to speak.

THE TEARS OF SCOTLAND.

Dr. Blacklock told me that Sinollett, who was at the bottom a great Jacobite, composed these beautiful and pathetic verses on the infamous deprivations of the Duke of Culloden after the battle of Culloden.

Mourn, hapless Caledonia, mourn,
Thy banish'd peace, thy laurels torn!
Thy sons for valour long renown'd,
Lie slaughter'd on their native ground;
Thy hospitable roofs no more
Invite the stranger to the door;
In smoky ruins sank they lie,
The monuments of cruelty.

The wretched owner sees, afar,
His all become the prey of war;
Bethinks him of his babes and wife,
Then smites his breast, and curses life.
Thy swains are famish'd on the rocks
Where once they fed their wanton flocks:
Thy ravish'd virgins shriek in vain;
Thy infants perish on the plain.

What boots it then, in every clime,
Through the wide-spreading waste of time?
Thy martial glory, crown'd with praise,
Still shine with undiminish'd blaze;
Thy towering spirit now is broke,
Thy neck is bended to the yoke:
What foreign arms could never quell
By civil rage and rancour fell.

The rural pipe and merry lay
No more shall cheer the happy day:
No social scenes of gay delight
Beguile the dreary winter night:
No strains, but those of sorrow, flow,
And nought be heard but sounds of woe:
While the pale phantoms of the slain
Glide nightly o'er the silent plain.

Oh! baneful cause—oh! fatal morn,
Accursed to ages yet unborn!
The sons against their father strode;
The parent shed his children's blood!
Yet, when the rage of battle ceased,
The victor's soul was not appeased;
The naked and forlorn must feel
Devouring flames and murdering steel.

The pious mother, doom'd to death,
Forsook, wanders o'er the heath,
The bleak wind whirls round her head.
Her helpless orphans cry for bread;
Bereft of shelter, food, and friend,
She views the shades of night descend;
And, stretch'd beneath the inclement skies,
Weeps o'er her tender babes, and dies.

Whilst the warm blood bedews my veins,
And unimpair'd remembrance reigns,
Resentment of my country's fate
Within my filial breast shall beat;
And, spite of her insulting foe,
My sympathising verse shall flow:
Mourn, hapless Caledonia, mourn
Thy banish'd peace, thy laurels torn!
THE POOR SHEPHERD'S MOURNFUL FATE.*

TUNE—" Galashiels."

The old title, "Sour Plums o' Galashiels," probably was the beginning of a song to this air, which is now lost.

The tune of Galashiels was composed about the beginning of the present century by the Laird of Galashiels' piper.

Ah! the poor shepherd's mournful fate,
When doom'd to love and languish,
To bear the scornful fair one's hate,
Nor dare disclose his anguish!

Yet eager looks and dying sighs
My secret soul discover;
While rapture trembling through mine eyes,
Reveals how much I love her.

The tender glance, the redd'ning cheek,
O'erspread with rising blushes,
A thousand various ways they speak,
A thousand various wishes.

For oh! that form so heavenly fair,
Those languid eyes so sweetly smiling,
That artless blush and modest air,
So fatally beguiling!

The every look and every grace
So charm when'ere I view thee,
Till death o'ertake me in the chase,
Still will my hopes pursue thee:

Then when my tedious hours are past,
Be this last blessing given,
Low at thy feet to breathe my last,
And die in sight of heaven.

MILL, MILL, O.

The original, or at least a song evidently prior to Ramsay's, is still extant.

It runs thus:—

As I cam down yon waterside,
And by yon shellin-hill, O,
There I spied a bonny, bonny lass,
And a lass that I loved right weel, O.

CHORUS.
The mill, mill, O, and the kill, kill, O,
And the coggin o' Peggy's wheel, O,
The sack and the sieve, and a' she did leave,
And danced the miller's reel, O.

WALY, WALY.

In the west country I have heard a different edition of the second stanza.

Instead of the four lines, beginning with, "When cockle-shells," &c., the other way ran thus:—

Oh, wherefore need I busk my head,
Or wherefore need I kame my hair,
Sin my fause luve has me forsook,
And says he'll never luve me mair.

Oh, waly, waly, up yon bank,
And waly, waly, down yon brae,
And waly by yon burn side,
Where I and my love were wont to gae
Oh, waly, waly, love is bonny
A little while, when it is new;
But when it's auld it waxeth cauld,
And fades away like morning dew.

When cockle shells turn siller bells,
And mussels grow on every tree,
When frost and snow shall warm us a',
Then shall my love prove true to me.

I leant my back unto an aik,
I thought it was a trustie tree;
But first it bow'd, and syne it brake,
And sae did my fause love to me.

Now Arther Seat shall be my bed,
The sheets shall ne'er be fill'd by me:
Saint Anton's well shall be my drink,
Since my true love's forsaken me.

O Mart'mas wind, whan wilt thou blaw,
And shake the green leaves aff the tree!
O gentle death, whan wilt thou cum,
And tak a life that wearies me?

'Tis not the frost that freezes fell,
Nor blawing snow's inclemencie!
'Tis not sic cauld that makes me cry,
But my love's heart grown cauld to me.

When we cam in by Glasgow town,
We were a comely sight to see;
My love was clad in velvet black,
And I mysel in cramasie.

But had I wist before I kiss,
That love had been sae ill to win,
I had lockt my heart in a case of gowd,
And pinn'd it wi' a siller pin.
Oh, oh! if my young babe were born,
And set upon the nurse's knee,
And I mysel were dead and gone;
For a maid again I'll never be.

DUNCAN GRAY.

Dr. Blacklock informed me that he had often heard the tradition that this air was composed by a carman in Glasgow.

DUMBARTON DRUMS.

This is the last of the West Highland airs; and from it, over the whole tract of country to the confines of Tweed-side, there is hardly a tune or song that one can say has taken its origin from any place or transaction in that part of Scotland.—The oldest Ayrshire reel is Stewarton Lasses, which was made by the father of the present Sir Walter Montgomery Cunningham, alias Lord Lysle, since which period there has indeed been local music in that country in great plenty.—Johnnie Faa is the only old song which I could ever trace as belonging to the extensive county of Ayr.

Dumbarton's drums beat bonny, O,
When they mind me of my dear Johnnie, O,
How happy am I,
When my soldier is by.
While he kisses and blesses his Annie, O,
'Tis a soldier alone can delight me, O.
For his graceful looks do unite me, O;
While guarded in his arms,
I'll fear no war's alarms,
Neither danger nor death shall e'er fright me,

My love is a handsome ladde, O,
Genteel, but ne'er foppish or gaudy, O;
Though commissions are dear,
Yet I'll buy him one this year.
For he shall serve no longer a caddie, O;
A soldier has honour and bravery, O,
Unacquainted with rogues and their knavery,
He minds no other thing,
But the ladies or the King,
For every other care is but slavery, O.

Then I'll be the captain's lad, O,
Farewell all my friends and my daddy, O;
I'll wait no more at home,
But I'll follow with the drum,
And whenc'er that beats I'll be ready, O,
Dumbarton drums sound bonny, O,
They are sprightly like my dear Johnnie, O;
How happy shall I be,
When on my soldier's knee,
And he kisses and blesses his Annie, O!

CAULD KAIL IN ABERDEEN.

This song is by the Duke of Gordon.
The old verses are,

There's cauld kail in Aberdeen.
And castocks in Strathbogie;
When ilka lad maun hae his lass,
There's Johnnie Smith has got a wife,
If she were mine, upon my life
I wad douk her in a boggie.

CHORUS.

My coggie, sirs, my coggie, sirs,
I cannae want my coggie:
I wadna gie my three-girt cap
For e'er a queen in Bogie.

"The 'Cauld Kail' of his Grace of Gordon," says Cunningham, "has long been a favourite in the north, and deservedly so, for it is full of life and manners. It is almost needless to say that kail is colewort, and much used in broth; that castocks are the stalks of a common cabbage; and that coggie is a wooden dish for holding porridge: it is also a drinking vessel."

There's cauld kail in Aberdeen,
And castocks in Strathbogie;
Gin I but hae a bonny lass,
Ye're welcome to your coggie;
And ye may sit up at the night,
And drink till it be braid day-light—
Gie me a lass bath clean and tight,
To dance the Reel o' Bogie.

In cotillions the French excel;
John Bull loves country-dances;
The Spaniards dance fandangos well;
Mynheer an allemande princes;
In foursome reels the Scots delight,
At threesome they dance wondrous light,
But twosome ding a' out o' sight,
Danced to the Reel o' Bogie.

Come, lads, and view your partners well,
Wale each a blithesome rogie;
I'll tak this lassie to mysel,
She looks sae keen and vogue!
Now, piper lad, bang up the spring:
The country fashion is the thing,
To prie their meous e'er we begin
To dance the Reel o' Bogie.

Now ilka lad has got a lass,
Save yon auld doited fogie;
And ta'en a fling upo' the grass,
As they do in Strathbogie;
But a' the lasses look sae fain,
We canna think ourselves to hain,
For they maun hae their come-again;
To dance the Reel o' Bogie.

Now a' the lads hae done their best,
Like true men o' Strathbogie;
We'll stop a while and tak a rest,
And tipple out a coggie.
Come now, my lads, and tak your glass,
And try ilk other to surpass,
In wishing health to every lass,
To dance the Reel o' Bogie.

FOR LACK OF GOLD.

The country girls in Ayrshire, instead of the line—

"She me forsook for a great duke," say,

"For Athole's duke she me forsook;"
which I take to be the original reading.
This song was written by the late Dr.
Austin,* physician at Edinburgh.—He had courted a lady, to whom he was shortly to have been married; but the Duke of Athole, having seen her, became so much in love with her, that he made proposals of marriage, which were accepted of, and she jilted the doctor.

For lack of gold she’s left me, oh!
And of all that’s dear bereft me, oh!
For Athole’s duke, she me forsook,
And to endless care has left me, oh!
A star and garter have more art
Than youth, a true and faithful heart,
For empty titles we must part,
And for glitt’ring show she’s left me, oh!

No cruel fair shall ever move
My injured heart again to love,
Through distant climates I must rove,
Since Jeanie she has left me, oh!
Ye powers above, I to your care
Resign my faithless lovely fair,
Your choicest blessings be her share,
Though she’s forever left me, oh!

HERE’S A HEALTH TO MY TRUE LOVE, &c.

This song is Dr. Blacklock’s. He told me that tradition gives the air to our James IV. of Scotland.

To me what are riches encumber’d with care!
To me what is pomp’s insignificant glare!
No minion of fortune, no pageant of state,
Shall ever induce me to envy his fate.

Their personal graces let fops idolize,
Whose life is but death in a splendid disguise;
But soon the pale tyrant his right shall resume,
And all their false lustre be hid in the tomb.

Let the meteor discovery attract the fond sage,
In fruitless researches for life to engage;
Content with my portion, the rest I forego,
Nor labour to gain disappointment and woe.

Contemptibly fond of contemptible self,
While misers their wishes concentrate in self;
Let the godlike delight of imparting be mine,
Enjoyment reflected is pleasure divine.

* "The doctor gave his woes an airing in song, and then married a very agreeable and beautiful lady, by whom he had a numerous family. Nor did Jean Drummond, of Meggach, break her heart when James, Duke of Athole, died; she dried her tears, and gave her hand to Lord Adam Gordon. The song is creditable to the author."—Cunningham.

Extensive dominion and absolute power,
May tickle ambition, perhaps for an hour;
But power in possession soon loses its charms,
While conscience remonstrates, and terror alarms.

With vigour, oh, teach me, kind Heaven, to sustain
Those ills which in life to be suffer’d remain;
And when ‘tis allow’d me the goal to descry,
For my species I lived, for myself let me die.

— HEY TUTTI TAITY

I HAVE met the tradition universally over Scotland, and particularly about Stirling, in the neighbourhood of the scene, that this air was Robert Bruce’s march at the Battle of Bannockburn.

— TAK YOUR AULD CLOAK ABOUT YE.

A PART of this old song, according to the English set of it, is quoted in Shakespeare.

In winter when the rain rain’d cauld,
And frost and snow’ on ilk a hill,
And Boreas, with his blasts sae bauld,
Was threat’ning a’ our kye to kill:

Then Bell my wife, wha loves na strie,
She said to me right hastily,
Get up Goodman, save Cromie’s life,
And tak your auld cloak about ye.

My Cromie is a useful cow,
And she is come of a good kyne;
Aft has she wet the bairns, mou’,
And I am laith that she should tyne.

Get up, Goodman, it is fu’ time,
The sun shines in the lift sae bic,
Sloth never made a gracious end,
Go tak your auld cloak about ye.

My cloak was ance a good gray cloak,
When it was fitting for my wear;
But now it’s scanty worth a groat,
For I have worn’t this thirty year.

Let’s spend the gear that we have won,
We little ken the day we’ll die;
Then I’ll be proud since I have sworn
To have a new cloak about me.

In days when our King Robert rang
His tress they cost but half a crown;
He said they were a groat o’er dear,
And call’d the tailor thief and loun.

He was the king that wore a crown,
And tho’ the man o’ ligh degree,
’Tis pride puts a’ the country down,
Sae tak thy auld cloak about thee.
YE GODS, WAS STREPHON'S PICTURE BLEST?*

TUNE—"Fourteenth of October."

The title of this air shows that it alludes to the famous King Crispian, the patron of the honourable corporation of shoemakers. St. Crispian's day falls on the 14th of October, old style, as the old proverb tells:

"On the fourteenth of October, Was ne'er a sober sober."

Ye gods, was Strephon's picture blest With the fair heaven of Chloe's breast? Move softer, thou fond flutt'ring heart, Oh, gently throb, too fierce thou art. Tell me, thou brightest of thy kind, For Strephon was the bliss design'd? For Strephon's sake, dear charming maid, Didst thou prefer his wand'ring shade?

And thou bless'd shade that sweetly art Lodged so near my Chloe's heart, For me the tender hour improve, And softly tell how dear I love. Ungrateful thing! it scorns to hear Its wretched master's ardent prayer, Ingrossing all that beauteous heaven That Chloe, lavish maid, has given.

I cannot blame thee: were I lord Of all the wealth these breasts afford; I'd be a miser too, nor give An alms to keep a god alive. Oh! smile not thus, my lovely fair, On these cold thoughts that lifeless are: Prize him whose bosom glows with fire With eager love and soft desire.

'Tis true thy charms, O powerful maid! To life can bring the silent shade; Thou canst surpass the painter's art, And real warmth and flames impart. But, oh! it ne'er can love like me, I ever loved, and loved but thee; Then, charmer, grant my fond request; Say, thou canst love, and make me blest.

Since robb'd of all that charm'd my view The blossom o' the Raspberry. The song is Dr. Blacklock's.

As the song is a long one, we can only give the first and last verses:

Since robb'd of all that charm'd my view Of all my soul e'er fancied fair, Ye smiling native scenes adieu, With each delightful object there! Oh! when my heart revolves the joys Which in your sweet recess I knew, The last dread shock, which life destroys, Is heaven compared with losing you!

Ah me! had Heaven and she proved kind, Then full of age, and free from care, How blest had I my life resigned, Where first I breathed this vital air: But since no flutt'ring hope remains, Let me my wretched lot pursue; Adieu! dear friends and native scenes! To all but grief and love, adieu!

YOUNG DAMON.

TUNE—"Highland Lamentation."

THIS air is by Oswald.*

Amidst a rosy bank of flowers Young Damon mourn'd his forlorn fate In sighs he spent his languid hours, And breathed his woes in lonely state; Gay joy no more shall ease his mind, No wanton sports can soothe his care. Since sweet Amanda proved unkind, And left him full of black despair.

His looks, that were as fresh as morn, Can now no longer smiles impart; His pensive soul on sadness borne, Is rack'd and torn by Cupid's dart; Turn, fair Amanda, cheer your swain, Unshroud him from this vale of woe; Range every charm to soothe the pain That in his tortured breast doth grow.

KIRK WAD LET ME BE.

TRADITION in the western parts of Scotland tells that this old song, of which there are still three stanzas extant, once saved a covenanted clergyman out of a scrape. It was a little prior to the Revolution—a period when being a Scots covenanter was being a felon—that one of their clergy, who was at that very time hunted by the merciless soldiery, fell in by accident with a party of the military. The soldiers were not exactly acquainted with the person of the reverend gentleman of whom they were in search; but from suspicious

*This song was composed by Hamilton of Bangour on hearing that a young lady of beauty and rank wore his picture in her bosom.

*The words are by Fergusson. circumstances, they fancied that they had got one of that cloth and opprobrious persuasion among them in the person of this stranger. "Mass John," to extract him himself, assumed a freedom of manners very unlike the gloomy strictness of his sect: and, among other convivial exhibitions, sung (and, some traditions say, composed on the spur of the occasion) "Kirk wad let me be," with such effect, that the soldiers swore he was a d—d honest fellow, and that it was impossible he could belong to those hellish conventicles; and so gave him his liberty.

The first stanza of this song, a little altered, is a favourite kind of dramatic interlude acted at country weddings in the south-west parts of the kingdom. A young fellow is dressed up like an old beggar; a peruke, commonly made of carded tow, represents hoary locks; an old bonnet; a ragged plaid, or surtout, bound with a straw rope for a girdle; a pair of old shoes, with straw ropes twisted round his ankles, as is done by shepherds in snowy weather: his face they disguise as like wretched old age as they can: in this plight he is brought into the wedding house, frequently to the astonishment of strangers, who are not in the secret, and begins to sing—

"Oh, I am a silly auld man,
My name it is auld Glenae,"* &c.

He is asked to drink, and by and by to dance, which, after some uncouth excuses, he is prevailed on to do, the fiddler playing the tune, which here is commonly called "Auld Glenae;" in short, he is all the time so plied with liquor that he is understood to get intoxicated, and, with all the ridiculous gesticulations of an old drunken beggar, he dances and staggers until he falls on the floor; yet still, in all his riot, nay, in his rolling and tumbling on the floor, with some or other drunken motion of his body, he beats time to the music, till at last he is supposed to be carried out dead drunk.

There are many versions of this Nithsdale song; one of the least objectionable is as follows:—

I am a silly puri man,
Gaun hirplin owre a tree;
For courting a lass in the dark
The kirk came haunting me.
If a' my rags were off,
And nought but hale clasps on,
Oh, I could please a young lass
As well as a richer man.

The parson he ca'd me a rogue,
The session and a' thegither,
The justice he cried, You dog,
Your knavery I'll consider:
Sae I drap down on my knee
And thus did humbly pray,
Oh, if ye'll let me gae free,
My hail confession ye'ese ha.

'Twas late on tysday at e'en,
When the moon was on the grass;
Oh, just for charity's sake,
I was kind to a beggar lass.
She had begg'd down Annan side,
Lochmaben and Hightae;
But deil an aumous she got,
Till she met wi' auld Glenae, &c.

JOHNNY FAA, OR THE GIPSY LADIE.

The people in Ayrshire begin this song—

"The gipsies cam to my Lord Cassilis's yett."

They have a great many more stanzas in this song than I ever yet saw in any printed copy. The castle is still remaining at Maybole where his lordship shut up his wayward spouse, and kept her for life.

The gipsies came to our lord's gate,
And wow but they sang sweetly;
They sang sae sweet, and sae complete,
That down came the fair lady.

When she came tripping down the stair,
And a' her maids before her,
As soon as they saw her weel-fard face,
They coost the glamour o'er her.

"Gar tak fra me this gay mantile,
And bring to me a plaidie;
For if kith and kin and a' had sworn,
I'll follow the gipsy laddie."

"Yestreen I lay in a weel-made bed,
And my good lord beside me;
This night I'll lie in a tenant's barn,
Whatever shall betide me."

Oh! I come to your bed, says Johnny Faa,
Oh! I come to your bed, my dearie:
For I vow and swear by the hilt of my sword
That your lord shall nae mair come near ye.
"I'll go to bed to my Johnny Faa,
And I'll go to bed to my dearsie;
For I vow and swear by what pass'd yestreen
That my lord shall na mair come near me."

"I'll mak a hap to my Johnny Faa,
And I'll mak a hap to my dearsie;
And he's get a' the coat gaes round,
And my lord shall na mair come near me."

And when our lord came hame at e'en,
And speir'd for his fair lady,
The tane she cried, and the other replied,
'She's awa' wi' the gipsy laddie.'

"Gae saddle to me the black, black steed,
Gae saddle and make him ready;
Before that I either eat or sleep
I'll gae seek my fair lady."

And we were fifteen well-made men,
Although we were nae bonny;
And we were a' put down for ane,
A fair, young, wanton lady.

TO DAUNTON ME.

The two following old stanzas to this tune have some merit,—

To daunt on me, to daunt on me,
Oh, ken ye what it is that 'ill daunt on me?—
There's eighty-eight and eighty-nine,
And that I hae borne sinsyne,
There's cuss and press, and Presbytrie,
I think it will do meikle for to daunt on me.

But to wanton me, to wanton me,
Oh, ken ye what it is that was wanton me?
To see guid corn upon the rigs,
And banishment amang the Whigs,
And right restored where right sud be.
I think it would do meikle for to wanton me.

ABSENCE.

A SONG in the manner of Shenstone.

The song and air are both by Dr. Blacklock.

The following are two stanzas of this strain:—

Ye harvests that wave in the breeze
As far as the view can extend;
Ye mountains umbrageous with trees,
Whose tops so majestic ascend;
Your landscape what joy to survey,
Were Melissia with me to admire!
Then the harvests would glitter how gay,
How majestic the mountains aspire!

Ye zephyrs that visit my fair,
Ye sunbeams around her that play,
Does her sympathy dwell on my care,
Does she number the hours of my stay?

First perish ambition and wealth,
First perish all else that is dear,
E'er one sigh should escape her by stealth,
E'er my absence should cost her one tear.

I HAD A HORSE, AND I HAD NAЕ MAIR.

This story is founded on fact. A John Hunter, ancestor of a very respectable farming family, who live in a place in the parish, I think, of Galston, called Bar-mill, was the luckless hero that "had a horse and had nae mair."—For some little youthful follies he found it necessary to make a retreat to the West Highlands, where "he fee'd himself to a Highland laird," for that is the expression of all the oral editions of the song I ever heard. The present Mr. Hunter, who told me the anecdote, is the great grandchild of our hero.

I HAD a horse, and I had nae mair,
I gat him frae my daddy,
My purse was light, and heart was sair,
But my wit it was fu' ready.
And sae I thought me on a time,
Outwittens of my daddy,
To fee mysel' to a lawland laird,
Wha had a bonny lady.

I wrote a letter, and thus began,—
"Madam, be not offended,
I'm o'er the lugs in luv wi' you,
And care not though ye kend it:
For I get little frae the laird,
And far less frae my daddy,
And I would blithely be the man
Would strive to please my lady."

She read my letter, and she laugh,
"Ye needna been sae bland, man;
You might hae come to me yoursels,
And tauld me o' your state, man;
You might hae come to me, yoursels,
Outwittens o' ony body,
And made John Gowkston of the laird,
And kiss'd his bonny lady."

Then she pat siller in my purse,
We drank wine in a cooggie;
She fee'd a man to rub my horse,
And wow but I was vogie!
But I gat ne'er sae sair a fleg,
Since I cam frae my daddy,
The laird came, rap, rap, to the yeet
When I was wi' his lady.

Then she pat me below a chair,
And happ'd me wi' a plaidie;
But I was like to swarm wi' fear,
And wished me wi' my daddy,
The laird went out, he saw nae me,
I went when I was ready;
I promised, but I ne'er gaed back
To kiss my bonny lady.
UP AND WARN A', WILLIE.

This edition of the song I got from Tom Neil, of factious fame, in Edinburgh. The expression "Up and warn a', Willie," alludes to the Crantara, or warning of a clan to arms. Not understanding this, the Low-landers in the west and south say, "Up and war them a'." &c.

AULD ROB MORRIS.

It is remark-worthy that the song of " Hooly and Fairly," in all the old Editions of it, is called "The Drunken Wife o' Galloway," which localises it to that country.

MOTHER.

There's Auld Rob Morris that wins in yon
glen; [auld men;
He's the king o' gude falls, and wale o'
Has fourscore o' black sheep, and fourscore too,
And auld Rob Morris is the man ye maun loo.

DOUGHTER.

Haud your tongue, mither, and let that abee,
For his eild and my eild can never agree;
They'll never agree, and that will be seen,
For he is fourscore, and I'm but fifteen,

MOTHER.

Haud you tongue, dochter, and lay by your pride; [bride;
For he's be the bridegroom, and ye's be the
He shall he by your side, and kiss ye too,
Auld Rob Morris is the man ye maun loo.

DOUGHTER.

Auld Rob M'orris, I ken him fu' weel,
His back sticks out like ony peat-creel;
He's out-shinn'd, in-kneed, and ringle-ced,too,
Auld Rob Morris is the man I'll ne'er loo.

MOTHER.

Though auld Rob Morris be an elderly man,
Yet his auld brass it will buy a new pan;
Then, dochter, ye shouldna be sae ill to shoo,
For auld Rob Morris is the man ye maun loo.

DOUGHTER.

But auld Rob Morris I never will hae,
His back is sae stuff, and his beard is grown
gray;
I had rather die than live wi' him a year,
Sae mar of Rob Morris I never will hear.

The "Drunken wife o' Galloway" is in another strain; the idea is original, and it cannot be denied that the author, whoever he was, has followed up the conception with great spirit. A few verses will prove this.

Oh! what had I ado for to marry, [canary;
My wife she drinks naething but sack and
I to her friends complain'd right early,
Oh! gin my wife wad drink hooly and fairly.

Hooly and fairly; hooly and fairly,
Oh! gin my wife wad drink hooly and fairly!

First she drank Crommie, and syne she drank
Garie,
Then she has drunken my bonny grey mearie,
That carried me through the dub and the lairie,
Oh! gin my wife wad drink hooly and fairly!

The very gray mittens that gaced on my han's,
To her ain neibour wife she has laid them in pawns, [dearly,
Wij' my bane-headed staff that I loved sae
Oh! gin my wife wad drink hooly and fairly!

I never was given to wrangling nor strife,
Nor c'er did refuse her the comforts of life;
Ere it come to a war, I'm aye for a parley,
Oh! gin my wife wad drink hooly and fairly!

A pint wi' her cummers I wad her allow;
But when she sits down she fills her sel' fou';
And when she is fou' she's unco camstrairie,
Oh! gin my wife wad drink hooly and fairly!

An when she comes hame she lays on the lads,
And ca's a' the lasses baith limmers and jads;
And I my ain sell an auld cuckold carlie,
Oh! gin my wife wad drink hooly and fairly.

NANCY'S GHOST.

This song is by Dr. Blacklock.

Ah! hapless man, thy perjured vow
Was to thy Nancy's heart a grave!
The damps of death bedew'd my brow
Whilst thou the dying maid could save!

Thus spake the vision, and withdrew;
From Sandy's cheeks the crimson fled;
Guilt and Despair their arrows threw,
And now behold the traitor dead!

Remember, swains, my artless strains,
To plighted faith be ever true;
And let no injured maid complain
She finds false Sandy live in you!

TUNE YOUR FIDDLES, &c.

This song was composed by the Rev.
John Skinner, nonjuror clergyman at Lins hart, near Peterhead. He is likewise author of "Tullochgorum," "Ew'ie wi' the Crooked Horn," "John o' Badenyon," &c., and, what is of still more consequence, he is one of the worthiest of mankind. He is the author of an ecclesiastical history of Scotland. The air is by Mr. Marshall, butler to the Duke of Gordon—the first composer of strathspeys of the age. I have been told by somebody, who had it of Marshall himself, that he took the idea of his three most celebrated pieces, “The Marquis of Huntley’s Reel,” “His Farewell,” and “Miss Admiral Gordon’s Reel,” from the old air, “The German Lairdie.”

TUNE your fiddles, tune them sweetly,
Play the Marquis’ Reel discreetly;
Here we are a band completely
Fitted to be jolly.
Come, my boys, be bithe and gaucie,
Every youngster choose his lassie,
Dance wi’ life, and be not saucy,
Shy, nor melancholy.

Lay aside your sour grimaces,
Clouded brows, and drunmie faces;
Look about and see their graces,
How they smile delighted.
Now’s the season to be merry,
Hang the thoughts of Charon’s ferry,
Time enough to turn camisary,
When we’re old and dooted.

GIL MORICE.*

This plaintive ballad ought to have been called Child Morice, and not Gil Morice. In its present dress, it has gained immortal honour from Mr. Home’s taking from it the groundwork of his fine tragedy of “Douglas.” But I am of opinion that the present ballad is a modern composition,—perhaps not much above the age of the middle of the last century; at least I should be glad to see or hear of a copy of the present words prior to 1650. That it was taken from an old ballad, called “Child Maurice,” now lost, I am inclined to believe; but the present one may be classed with “Hardyknute,” “Kenneth,” “Duncan, the Laird of Woodhouselee,” “Lord Livingston,” “Binnorie,” “The Death of Monticith,” and many other modern productions, which have been swallowed by many readers as ancient fragments of old poems. This beautiful plaintive tune was composed by Mr. M’Gibbon, the selector of a collection of Scots tunes.

In addition to the observations on Gil Morice, I add that, of the songs which Captain Riddel mentions, “Kenneth” and “Duncan” are juvenile compositions of Mr. M’Kenzie, “The Man of Feeling.”—M’Kenzie’s father showed them in MS. to Dr. Blacklock as the productions of his son, from which the doctor rightly prognosticated that the young poet would make, in his more advanced years, a respectable figure in the world of letters.

This I had from Blacklock.

WHEN I UPON THY BOSOM LEAN.*

This song was the work of a very worthy facetious old fellow, John Lapraik, late of Dalfram, near Muirkirk, which little property he was obliged to sell in consequence of some connection as security for some persons concerned in that villanous bubble, the Ayr Bank. He has often told me that he composed this song one day when his wife had been fretting over their misfortunes.

When I upon thy bosom lean,
And fondly clasp thee a’ my ain,
I glory in the sacred ties
That made us a’ wha ance were twain:
A mutual flame inspires us baith,*
The tender look, the melting kiss:
Even years shall ne’er destroy our love,
But only give us change o’ bliss.

Hae I a wish? it’s a’ for thee;
I ken thy wish is me to please;
Our moments pass sae smooth away,
That numbers on us look and gaze.
Weel pleased they see our happy days,
Nor Envy’s sel’ find aught to blame;
And aye when weary cares arise,
Thy bosom still shall be my hame.

* This is the song “that some kind husband had addrest to some sweet wife,” alluded to in the “Epistle to J. Lapraik.”

There was ae sang amang the rest,
Aboon them a’ it pleased me best,
That some kind husband had address
To some sweet wife; [breast,
It thrilled the heart-strings through the
A’ to the life.
I'll lay me there, and take my rest,
And if that aught disturb my dear,
I'll bid her laugh her cares away,
And beg her not to drip a tear;
Hae I a joy? it's a' her ain:
United still her heart and mine;
They're like the woodbine round the tree,
That's twined till death shall them disjoin.

THE HIGHLAND CHARACTER;
OR, GARB OF OLD GAUL.

This tune was the composition of Gen. Reid, and called by him "The Highland, or 42d Regiment's March." The words are by Sir Harry Erskine.

In the garb of old Gaul, with the fire of old Rome,
From the heath-cover'd mountains of Scotia
Where the Romans endeavour'd our country to gain;
But our ancestors fought, and they fought not in vain.

No effeminate customs our sinews unbrace,
No luxurious tables enervate our race,
Our loud-sounding pipe bears the true martial strain,
So do we the old Scottish valour retain.

We're tall as the oak on the mount of the vale,
As swift as the roe which the hound cloth as
As the full moon in autumn our shields do ap
Minerva would dread to encounter our spear.

As a storm in the ocean when Boreas blows,
So are we enraged when we rush on our foes;
We sons of the mountains, tremendous as rocks,
Dash the force of our foes with our thunder-

LEADER-HAUGHS AND YARROW.

There is in several collections the old song of "Leader-Haughs and Yarrow." It seems to have been the work of one of our itinerant minstrels, as he calls himself, at the conclusion of his song, "Minstrel Burn."

When Phebus bright, the azure skies
With golden rays enlight'neth,
He makes all Nature's beauties rise,
Herbs, trees, and flowers he quickeneth,
Amongst all those he makes his choice,
And with delight goes thorow,
With radiant beams and silver streams
O'er Leader-Haughs and Yarrow.

When Aries the day and night
In equal length divideth,
Auld frosty Saturn takes his flight,
Nae langer he abideth;

Then Flora Queen, with mantle green,
Casts aff her former sorrow,
And vows to dwell with Ceres' sel,
In Leader-Haughs and Yarrow.

Pan playing on his aiten reed,
And shepherds him attending,
Do here resort their flock to feed,
The hills and haughs commending.
With cur and kent upon the bent,
Sing to the sun good-morrow,
And swear nae fields mair pleasure yields
Than Leader-Haughs and Yarrow.

A house there stands on Leaderside,*
Surmounting my describing,
With rooms nae rare, and windows fair,
Like Dedalus' contriving:
Men passing by, do aften cry,
In sooth it hath nae marrow;
It stands as sweet on Leaderside,
As Newark does on Yarrow.

A mile below wha lists to ride,
They'll hear the mavis singing;
Into St. Leonard's banks she'll bide,
Sweet birks her head o'erhinging;
The lintwhite loud and Progne proud,
With tuneful throats and narrow,
Into St. Leonard's banks they sing,
As sweetly as in Yarrow.

The lapwing lilteth o'er the lee,
With nimble wing she sporteth;
But rows she'll lice far frae the tree,
Where Philomel resorteth:
By break of day the lark can say,
I'll bid you a good-morrow,
I'll streak my wing, and, mounting, sing
O'er Leader-Haughs and Yarrow.

Park, Wanton-waws, and Wooden-cleugh,
The East and Western Mainses,
The wood of Lauder's fair enough,
The corn is good in Blainshes;
Whore aits are fine, and sold by kind,
That if ye search all thorow
Mearns, Buchan, Mar, nane better are
Than Leader-Haughs and Yarrow.

In Burnill Bog, and Whiteslade Shaws,
The fearful hare she haunteth;
Brigh-haugh and Braidwoodshiel she knows,
And Chapel-wood frequenteth;
Yet when she irks, to Raisdly birks
She rins and sighs for sorrow,
That she should leave sweet Leader-Haughs,
And cannot win to Yarrow.

What sweeter music wad ye hear
Than hounds and beagles crying?
The startled hare rins hard with fear,
Upon her speed relying:
But yet her strength it fails at length,
Nae beidding can she burrow,
In Sorrel's field, Cleckman, or Hag's,
And sighs to be in Yarrow.

* Thirlstane Castle, an ancient seat of the Earl of Lauderdale.
For Rockwood, Ringwood, Spoty, Shag,
With sight and scent pursue her,
Till, ah! her pith begins to flag,
Nae cunning can rescue her:
O'er dub and dyke, o'er seugh and syke,
She'll rin the fields all thorow,
'Till fail'd, she fa's in Leader-Haughns,
And bids farewell to Yarrow.

Sing Erslington and Cowdenknows,
Where Homes had ance commanding:
And Drygrange with the milk-white ewes,
'Twixt Tweed and Leader standing:
The birds that flee throw Reedpath trees,
And Gledswood banks ilk morrow,
May chant and sing—Sweet Leader-Haughns,
And bonny howans of Yarrow.

But Minstrel Burn cannot assuage
His grief while life endureth,
To see the changes of this age,
That fleeting time procureth:
For mony a place stands in hard case,
Where bithe fowk kend nae sorrow,
With Homes that dwell on Leaderside,
And Scots that dwell on Yarrow.

THIS IS NO MY AIN HOUSE.

The first half stanza is old, the rest is Ramsay's. The old words are—

Oh, this is no my ain house,
My ain house, my ain house;
This is no my ain house,
I ken by the biggin o’.

Bread and cheese are my door-cheeks,
My door-cheeks, my door-cheeks;
Bread and cheese are my door-cheeks,
And pancakes the riggin o’.

This is no my ain wean,
My ain wean, my ain wean,
This is no my ain wean,
I ken by the greetie o’.

I'll tak the curchie aff my head;
Aff my head, aff my head;
I’ll take the curchie aff my head,
And rowt about the feetie o’.

The tune is an old Highland air, called "Shuan truish willighan."

LADDIE, LIE NEAR ME.

This song is by Dr. Blacklock.

Hark, the loud tempest shakes the earth to its centre;
How mad were the task on a journey to ven-
How dismal's my prospect, of life I am weary,
Oh, listen, my love, I beseech thee to hear me,
Hear me, hear me, in tenderness hear me;
All the lang winter night, laddie lie near me.

Nights though protracted, though piercing the weather,
Yet summer was endless when we were to-
Now since thy absence I feel most severely,
Joy is extinguished and being is dreary;
Dreary, dreary, painful and dreary;
All the long winter night laddie lie near

THE GABERLUNZIE MAN.*

The Gaberlunzie Man is supposed to commemorate an intrigue of James V. Mr. Callander of Craigforth published, some years ago, an edition of "Christ's Kirk on the Green," and the "Gaberlunzie Man," with notes critical and historical. James V. is said to have been fond of Gosford, in Aberlady parish; and that it was suspected by his contemporaries that, in his frequent excursions to that part of the country, he had other purposes in view besides golfing and archery. Three favourite ladies—Sandilands, Weir, and Oliphant (one of them resided at Gosford, and the others in the neighborhood)—were occasionally visited by their royal and gallant admirer, which gave rise to the following satirical advice to his Majesty, from Sir David Lindsay, of the Mount, Lord Lyon.

Sow not yere seed on Sandilands,
Spend not yere strength in Weir
And ride not on yere Oliphants,
For gawing o’ yere gear.

The pawky auld carle came o’er the lea,
Wi’ many good c’ens and days to me,
Saying Guidwife, for your courtesie,
Will ye lodge a silly poor man?
The night was cauld, the carle was wat,
And down ayont the ingle he sat;
My daughter’s shoulders he ’gan to clap,
And cadgily ranted and sang.

Oh, wow! quo’ he, were I as free
As first when I saw this countrie,
How blithe and merry wad I be!
And I wad never think lang.
He grew canty, and she grew fain;
But little did her auld minny ken
What thir slee twa toghither were sayin’;
When wooing they were sae thrang.

And oh, quo’ he, and ye were as black
As e’er the crown of my daddy’s hat,
’Tis I wad lay thee on my back,
And awa’ wi’ me thou should gang.

*A wallet-man, or tinker, who appears to have been formerly a Jack-of-all-trades.
†Sir David was Lion King-at-Arms under James V.
And oh, quo' she, an I were as white
As e'er the snow lay on the dike,
I'd cleed me braw, and lady like
And awa' with thee I'd gang.

Between the twa was made a plot:
They raise a'ee before the cock,
And willily they shot the lock,
And fast to the bent are they gane.

Up in the morn the auld wife raise,
And at her leisure put on her claise;
Syne to the servant's bed she goes,
To speer for the silly poor man.

She gae to the bed where the beggar lay,
The strae was cauld, he was away!
She clapt her hand, cried _dulefu'_ day!
For some of our gear will be gane.

Some ran to cofler, and some to kist,
But nought was stown that could be mist,
She danced her lane, cried, _Praise be blest_!
I have lodged a leal poor man.

Since naething's awa', as we can learn,
The kinn's to kinn, and milk to earn, [bairn, Gae but the house, lass, and wauken my And bid her come quickly ben.
The servant gae where the daughter lay,
The sheets were cauld, she was away,
And fast to her guid wife did say,
She's aff with the Gaberlunzie man.

Oh, fy! gar ride, and fy! gar rin,
And haste ye find these traitors again!
For she's be burnt, and he's be slain.
The weariful Gaberlunzie man!
Some rake upo' horse, some ran a-foot.
The wife was wud, and out o' her wit,
She could na gang, nor yet could she sit,
But aye did curse and did ban.

Meantime far hind out o'er the lea,
Fu' snug in a glen where none could see,
The twa, with kindly sport and glee,
Cut frae a new cheese a whang.
The priving was good, it pleased them baith;
To loe' for aye he gae her his aith;
Quo' she, to leave thee I will be laith,
My winsome Gaberlunzie man.

Oh, kenn'd my minnie I were wi' you,
'll-fardly wad she crook her mou,
Sic a poor man she'd never trow,
After the Gaberlunzie man,
My dear, quo' he, ye're o'er young,
And hae nae learned the beggar's tongue,
To follow me frae town to town,
And carry the Gaberlunzie on.

_Ni' cauk and keel I'll win your bread,
And spindles and whorles for them who need,
Whilk is a gentle trade indeed,
To carry the Gaberlunzie on._
_I'll bow my leg, and crook my knee,
And draw a black clout o'er my ee;
A cripple, or blind, they will ca' me,
While we shall be merry and sing._

THE BLACK EAGLE.

This song is by Dr. Fordyce, whose merits as a prose writer are well known.

_Hark!_ wonder eagle lonely wails;
His faithful bosom grief assails;
Last night I heard him in my dream,
When death and woe were all the theme.
Like that poor bird I make my moan,
I grieve for dearest Delia gone;
With him to gloomy rocks I fly,
He mourns for love, and so do I.

'Twas mighty love that tamed his breast,
'Tis tender grief that breaks his rest;
He droops his wings, he hangs his head,
Since she he fondly loved was dead.
With Delia's breath my joy expired,
'Twas Delia's smiles my fancy fired;
Like that poor bird, I pine, and prove
Nought can supply the place of love.

Dark as his feathers was the fate
That robbed him of his darling mate,
Dimm'd is the lustre of his eye,
That wont to gaze the sun-bright sky.
To him is now forever lost
The heartfelt bliss he once could boast;
Thy sorrows, hapless bird, display
An image of my soul's dismay.

JOHNNIE COPE.

This satirical song was composed to commemorate General Cope's defeat at Prestonpans in 1745, when he marched against the Clans.

The air was the tune of an old song of which I have heard some verses, but now only remember the title, which was,

"Will ye go to the coals in the morning?"

Cope sent a challenge frae Dunbar—
Charlie, meet me, and ye daur,
And I'll learn you the art of war,
If you'll meet me i' the morning.

CHORUS.

Hey, Johnnie Cope, are ye waking yet?
Or are your drums a-beating yet?
If ye were waking I would wait
To gang to the coals i' the morning.

When Charlie looked the letter upon,
He drew his sword the scabbard from,
Come follow me, my merry, merry men,
To meet Johnnie Cope i' the morning.

Now, Johnnie Cope, be as good as your word
And try our fate wi' fire and sword,
And dinna tak wing like a frighten'd bird,
That's chased frae its nest i' the morning.

When Johnnie Cope he heard of this,
He thought it wadna be amiss
To hae a horse in readiness
To flee awa' i' the morning.

_Fy, Johnnie, now get up and rin,_
The Highland bagpipes make a din,
It's best to sleep in a hale skin,
For 'twill be a bluidy morning.

Yon's no the tuck o' England's drum,
But it's the war-pipes deathly strum:
And poues the claymore and the gun—
It will be a bluidy morning.

When Johnnie Cope to Dunbar came,
They spie'd at him, "Where's a' your men?"
"The deil confound me gin I ken,
For I left them a' i' the mornin."

Now, Johnnie, truth ye was na blate,
To come wi' the news o' your ain defeat,
And leave your men in sic a strat,
Sae early i' the mornin.

Ah! faith, quo' Johnnie, I got a fleg,
With their claymores and philabeg:
If I face them again, deil break my leg,
Sae I wish you a good mornin.

Hey, Johnnie Cope, are ye waking yet?
Or are your drums a-beating yet?
If ye were waking I would wait
To gang to the coals i' the mornin.

CEASE, CEASE, MY DEAR FRIEND,
TO EXPLORE.

The song is by Dr. Blacklock; I believe, but I am not quite certain, that the air is his too.

CEASE, cease my dear friend to explore
From whence and how piercing my smart;
Let the charms of the nymph I adore
Excuse and interpret my heart.
Then how much I admire ye shall prove,
When like me ye are taught to admire,
And imagine how boundless my love,
When you number the charms that inspire.

Than sunshine more dear to my sight,
To my life more essential than air,
To my soul she is perfect delight,
To my sense all that's pleasing and fair.
The swains who her beauty behold,
With transport applaud every charm,
And swear that the breast must be cold
Which a beam so intense cannot warm.

Does my boldness offend my dear maid?
Is my fondness loquacious and free?
Are my visits too frequently paid?
Or my converse unworthy of thee?
Yet when grief was too big for my breast,
And labour'd in sighs to complain,
Its struggles I oft have suppresst,
And silence imposed on my pain.

Ah, Strephon, how vain thy desire,
Thy numbers and music how vain,
While merit and fortune conspire
The smiles of the nymph to obtain.

Yet cease to upbraid the soft choice,
Though it ne'er should determine for thee;
If my heart in her joy may rejoice,
Unhappy thou never canst be.

AULD ROBIN GRAY.

This air was formerly called "The Bridegroom Greets when the Sun Gangs Down." The words are by Lady Ann Lindsay, of the Baclareas family.

When the sheep are in the fauld, and a' the kye at hame,
And a' the weary warld to sleep are gane:
The waes of my heart fa' in showers frae my ee,
When my guidman sleeps sound by me.

Young Jamie lo'ed me weel, and he sought me for his bride,
But saving a crown he had naething else to do;
To make that crown a pound, my Jamie gae to sea,
And the crown and the pound were bairth for me.

He hadna been gane a year and a day,
When my father brak his arm, and my Jamie at the sea,
My mither she fell sick, and our cow was stown away;
And auld Robin Gray came a courting to me.

My father couldna work, and my mither couldna spin,
I taid day and night, but their bread I could-
Auld Rob maintain'd them baith, and wi' tears in his ee,
Said, "Jenny, for their sakes, oh, marry me."

My heart it said nac, for I look'd for Jamie back,
A wrack;
But the wind it blew high, and the ship it was The ship it was a wrack, why dinna Jenny And why do I live to say, Wae's me?

My father argued sair, though my mither dinna speak,
She lookit in my face till my heart was like to fae they gied him my hand, though my heart was in the sea,
And auld Robin Gray is a guid man to me.

I hadna been a wife a week but only four,
When, sitting sae mernoilfully at the door,
I saw my Jamie's wraith, for I couldna think it he,
Till he said, "I'm come back for to marry

Oh, sair did we greet, and mickle did we say,
We took but ac kiss, and we tore ourselves away:
I wish I were dead but I'm no like to die,
And why do I live to say, Wae's me!

I gang like a glaist, and I carena to spin,
I darena think on Jamie, for that wad be a But I'll do my best a guid wife t' be,
For auld Robin Gray is kind unto me.
DONALD AND FLORA.*

This is one of those fine Gaelic tunes preserved from time immemorial in the Hebrides; they seem to be the groundwork of many of our finest Scots pastoral tunes. The words of this song were written to commemorate the unfortunate expedition of General Burgoyne in America, in 1777.

When merry hearts were gay,
Careless of aught but play,
Poor Flora slipst away,
Sad'ning to Mora;†

Loose flow'd her coal black hair,
Quick heaved her bosom bare,
As thus to the troubled air
She vented her sorrow:

"Loud howls the northern blast,
Bleak is the dreary waste;
Haste thee, O Donald, haste,
\[Sigh'd to thy Flora!\]

Twice twelve long months are o'er,
Since, on a foreign shore,
You promised to fight no more,
But meet me in Mora.

"Where now is Donald dear?"
Maids cry with taunting sneer;
"Say is he still sincere
To his loved Flora?"

Parents upbraid my moan,
Each heart is turned to stone;
Ah! Flora, thou'rt now alone,
Friendless in Mora!

"Come, then, oh come away!
Donald, no longer stay,—
Where can my rover stray
From his loved Flora?
Ah! sure he ne'er can be False to his vows and me—
Oh, Heaven! is not yonder he Bounding o'er Mora?"

"Never, ah! wretched fair!
(Sigh'd the sad messenger.)
Never shall Donald mair
Meet his loved Flora!
Cold, cold beyond the main,
Donald, thy love lies slain:
He sent me to soothe thy pain,
Weeping in Mora.

* "This fine ballad," says Cunningham, "is the composition of Hector Macneil, Esq., author of the celebrated poem, 'Will and Jean,' and other popular works. Hector Macneil was looked up to as Scotland's hope in song when Burns died; his poems flew over the north like wildfire, and half a dozen editions were bought up in a year. The Donald of the song was Captain Stewart, who fell at the battle of Saratoga, and Flora was a young lady of Athole, to whom he was betrothed."

† A small valley in Athole, so named by the two lovers.

"Well fought our gallant men,
Headed by brave Burgoyne,
Our heroes were thrice led on
To British glory.
But, ah! though our foes did flee,
Sad was the loss to thee,
While every fresh victory
Drown'd us in sorrow.

"Here, take this trusty blade,
(Donald expiring said)
Give it to thy dear maid,
Weeping in Mora.
Tell her, O Allan! tell,
Donald thus bravely fell,
And that in his last farewell
He thought on his Flora.'"

Mute stood the trembling fair,
Speechless with wild despair,
Then, striking her bosom bare,
Sigh'd out, "Poor Flora!"
O Donald! oh, well a day!
Was all the fond heart could say;
At length the sound died away
Peebly, in Mora.

THE CAPTIVE RIBBAND.

This air is called "Robie donna Gorach."

Dear Myra, the captive ribband's mine,
'Twas all my faithful love could gain;
And would you ask me to resign
The sole reward that crowns my pain?

Go, bid the hero who has run
Through fields of death to gather fame.
Go, bid him lay his laurels down,
And all his well-earn'd praise disclaim.

The ribband shall its freedom lose,
Lose all the bliss it had with you,
And share the fate I would impose
On thee, wert thou my captive too.

It shall upon my bosom live,
Or clasp me in a close embrace;
And at its fortune if you grieve,
Retrive its doom and take its place.

THE BRIDAL O'T.

This song is the work of a Mr. Alexander Ross, late schoolmaster at Loch lee, and author of a beautiful Scots poem called "The Fortunate Shepherdess."

They say that Jockey'll speed well o't,
They say that Jockey'll speed weel o't
For he grows braver ilda day—
I hope we'll hae a bridal o't:
For yernight, nae farder gane,
The backhouse at the aite wa' o't,
He there wi' Meg was midden seen—
I hope we'll hae a bridal o't,
An we had but a bridal o' t,
An we had but a bridal o' t,
We'd leave the rest unto guid luck,
Although there should betide ill o' t;
For bridal days are merry times,
And young folks like the comin' o' t,
And scribblers they bang up their rhymes,
And pipers hae the humming o' t.

The lasses like a bridal o' t,
The lasses like a bridal o' t,
Their braws maun be in rank and file,
Although that they should guide ill o' t:
The bottom o' the kist is then
Turn'd up unto the inmost o' t,
The end that held the kecks sae clean,
is now become the teemest o' t.

The bangster at the threshing o' t,
The bangster at the threshing o' t,
Afore it comes is fidgin fain,
And ilka day's a clashing o' t:
He'll sell his jerkin for a groat,
His linder for anither o' t,
And e'er he want to clear his shot,
His sark'll pay the tither o' t.

The pipers and the fiddlers o' t,
The pipers and the fiddlers o' t,
Can smell a bridal unco far,
And like to be the meddlers o' t;
Fan* thick and threefold they convene,
Ilk ane envies the tither o' t,
And wishes nane but him alone
May ever see anither o' t.

Fan they hae done wi' eating o' t,
Fan they hae done wi' eating o' t,
For dancing they gae to the green,
And aiblins to the beating o' t;
He dances best that dances fast,
And loups at ilka reesing o' t,
And claps his hands frae hough to hough,
And furls about the feezings o' t.

TODLEN HAME.

This is perhaps the first bottle song that ever was composed. The author's name is unknown.

When I've a saxpence under my thumb,
Then I'll get credit in ilka town;
But aye when I'm poor they bid me gae by;
Oh, poverty parts good company.
Todlen hame, todlen hame,
Couna my love come todlen hame?

Fair fa' the goodwife, and send her good sale,
She gies us white bannocks to drink her ale,
Syne if her tippery chance to be sma';
We'll tak a good scour o' t, and ca' awa'.
Todlen hame, todlen hame,
As round as a neep come todlen hame.

---

Fan, when—the dialect of Angus.

My kimmer and I lay down to sleep,
And twa pint-stoups at our bed-feet; [dry,
And aye when we waken'd, we drank them
What think ye of my wee kimmer and I?
Todlen but, and todlen ben,
Sae round as my love comes todlen hame.

Leeze me on liquor, my todlen dow,
Ye're aye sae good humour'd when weeting your mou;
When sober sae sour, ye'll fight wi' a fleec,
That 'tis a blithe sight to the barns and me,
When todlen hame, todlen hame, [hame
When round as a neep ye come todlen.

THE SHEPHERD'S PREFERENCE.

This song is Dr. Blacklock's.—I don't know how it came by the name; but the oldest appellation of the air was, “Whistle and I'll come to you, my lad.”

It has little affinity to the tune commonly known by that name.

In May, when the daisies appear on the green,
And flowers in the field and the forest are seen; [sprung,
Where lilies bloom'd bonny, and hawthorns up
A pensive young shepherd oft whistled and sung; [flowers,
But neither the shades nor the sweets of the
Nor the blackbirds that warbled in blossoming bower's,
Could brighten his eye or his ear entertain,
For love was his pleasure, and love was his pain.

The shepherd thus sung, while his flocks all around [sound;
Drew nearer and nearer, and sigh'd to the Around, as in chains, lay the beasts of the
With pity disarm'd and with music subdued.
Young Jessy is fair as the spring's early flower, [bower;
And Mary sings sweet as the bird in her
But Peggy is fairer and sweeter than they,
With looks like the morning, with smiles like the day.

JOHN O' BADENYON.

This excellent song is the composition of my worthy friend, old Skinner, at Linshart.

When first I cam to be a man,
Of twenty years or so,
I thought myself a handsome youth,
And fain the world would know:
In best attire I steeped abroad,
With spirits brisk and gay,
And here and there, and everywhere,
Was like a morn in May.
Now in the days of youthful prime,
A mistress I must find,
For love, they say, gives one an air,
And even improves the mind;
On Phillis, fair above the rest,
Kind fortune fixed my eyes;
Her piercing beauty struck my heart,
And she became my choice:
To Cupid, then, with hearty prayer,
I offered many a vow;
I swore, and danced, and sung, and sigh’d, and
As other lovers do;
But, when at last I breathed my flame,
I found her cold as stone:
I left the jilt, and tuned my pipe
To John o’ Badenyon.

When love had thus my heart beguiled
With foolish hopes and vain;
To friendship’s port I steered my course,
And laugh’d at lover’s pain:
A friend I got by lucky chance,
’Twas something like divine
An honest friend’s a precious gift,
And such a gift was mine:
And now, whatever might betide,
A happy man was I,
In any strait I knew to whom
I freely might apply:
A strait soon came, my friend I tried;
He heard, and spurn’d my moan;
I hied me home, and pleased myself,
With John o’ Badenyon.

I thought I should be wiser next,
And would a patriot turn,
Began to dote on Johnny Wilkes,
And cry up Parson Horne.
Their manly spirit I admired,
And praised their noble zeal,
Who had with flaming tongue and pen
Maintain’d the public weal;
But ere a month or two had past,
I found myself betray’d,
’Twas self and party after all,
For all the stir they made;
At last I saw these factious knaves
Insult the very throne,
I cursed them, a, and tuned my pipe
To John o’ Badenyon.

And now, ye youngsters everywhere,
Who want to make a show,
Take heed in time, nor vainly hope,
For happiness below;
What you may fancy pleasure here
Is but an empty name,
For girls, and friends, and books, and so,
You’ll find them all the same.
Then be advised, and warning take,
From such a man as me,
I’m neither Pope, nor Cardinal,
Nor one of high degree:
You’ll find displeasure everywhere;
Then do as I have done,
E’en tune your pipe, and please yourself
With John o’ Badenyon.

A WAUKRIFE MINNIE.*

I PICKED up this old song and tune from a country girl in Nithsdale.—I never met with it elsewhere in Scotland:

Whare are you gaun, my bonny lass?
Whare are you gaun, my hinnie?
She answer’d me right saucilie—
An errand for my minnie.

Oh, whare live ye, my bonny lass?
Oh, whare live ye, my hinnie?
By you burn-side, gin ye maun ken,
In a wee house wi’ my minnie.

But I foor up the glen at e’en
To see my bonny lassie;
And lang before the gray morn cam
She wasna half sae saucie.

Oh, weary fa’ the waukrife cock,
And the foumart lay his crawlin!
He wauken’d the auld wife frae her sleep
A wee blink o’ the dawin.

An angry wife I wat she raise,
And o’er the bed she brought her,
And wi’ a mickle hazle rung
She made her a weel-pay’d dochter.

Oh, fare thee weel, my bonny lass!
Oh, fare thee weel, my hinnie!
Thou art a gay and a bonny lass,
But thou hast a waukrife minnie.

The editor thinks it respectful to the poet to preserve the verses he thus recovered.—R. B.

TULLOCHGORUM.

This FIRST of SONGS is the masterpiece of my old friend SKINNER. He was passing the day, at the town of Cullen. I think it was [he should have said Elon] in a friend’s house, whose name was Montgomery. Mrs. Montgomery observing, en passant, that the beautiful reel of Tullochgorum wanted words, she begged them of Mr. Skinner, who gratified her wishes, and the wishes of every lover of Scotch song, in this most excellent ballad.

* A watchful mother.
These particulars I had from the author's son, Bishop Skinner, at Aberdeen.

Come, gie's a sang, Montgomery cried, And lay your disputes all aside; What signifies't for folks to chide For what was done before them? Let Whig and Tory all agree, Whig and Tory, Whig and Tory, Whig and Tory all agree, To drop their Whig-mig-morum. Let Whig and Tory all agree To spend the night in mirth and glee, And cheerful sing along wi' me The Reel o' Tullochgorum.

Oh, Tullochgorum's my delight, It gars us a' in ane unite, And ony sumph that keeps up spite, In conscience I abhor him: For blithe and cheerie we'll be a', Blithe and cheerie, blithe and cheerie, Blithe and cheerie we'll be a' And make a happy quorum: For blithe and cheerie we'll be a', As long as we have breath to draw, And dance, till we be like to fa', The Reel o' Tullochgorum.

What needs there be sae great a raise Wi' dringing dull Italian lays? I wanda gie our ain Strathspeys For half a hunder score o' 'em. They're dowl and dowie at the best, Dowl and dowie, dowl and dowie, Dowl and dowie at the best, Wi' a' their variorum; They're dowl and dowie at the best, Their allegros and a' the rest; They cannna please a Scottish taste, Compared wi' Tullochgorum.

Let worldly worms their minds oppress Wi' fears o' want and double cess, And sullen sets themse'ls distress Wi' keeping up decorum; Shall we sae sour and sulky sit, Sour and sulky, sour and sulky, Sour and sulky shall we sit, Like old philosophorum? Shall we sae sour and sulky sit, Wi' neither sense, nor mirth, nor wit, Nor ever try to shake a fit To the Reel o' Tullochgorum?

May choicest blessings e'er attend Each honest, open-hearted friend, And calm and quiet be his end, And all that's good watch o'er him! May peace and plenty be his lot, Peace and plenty, peace and plenty, Peace and plenty be his lot, And daintis a great store o' 'em; May peace and plenty be his lot, Unstain'd by any vicious spot, And may he never want a great, That's fond o' Tullochgorum!

But for the sullen frampish fool That love's to be oppression's tool, May envy gnaw his rotten soul, And discontent devour him! May dool and sorrow be his chance Dool and sorrow, dool and sorrow, Dool and sorrow be his chance, And none say, Wae's me for him! May dool and sorrow be his chance, Wi' a' the ills that come trae France, Whae'er he be that will a dance The Reel o' Tullochgorum!

AULD LANG SYNE.

RAMSAY here, as is usual with him, has taken the idea of the song, and the first line, from the old fragment, which may be seen in the Museum, vol. v.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot, And never thought upon, The flames of love extinguish'd, And freely past and gone? Is thy kind heart now grown so cold, In that loving breast of thine, That thou canst never once reflect On auld lang syne!

If e'er I have a house, my dear, That truly is call'd mine, And can afford but country cheer, Or aught that's good therein; Though thou Wert rebel to the king, And beat with wind and rain, Assure thyself of welcome love, For auld lang syne.

THE EWIE WEEP THE CROOKED HORN.

ANOTHER excellent song of old Skinner's.

Oh, were I able to rehearse, My ewie's praise in proper verse, I'd sound it out as loud and fierce As ever piper's drone could blow. The ewie with the crookit horn Well deserved baith garse and corn; Sic a ewie ne'er was born Hereabout, nor far awa', Sic a' ewie ne'er was born Hereabout, nor far awa'.

I never needed tar nor keil To mark her upo' hip or heel, Her crookit horn did just as well To ken her by amo' them a'; She never threaten'd seab nor rot, But keepit aye her ain joc trot, Baith to the fauld and to the cot, Was never swer to lead nor ca'. Baith to the fauld and to the cot, Was never swer to lead nor ca'.
Cauld nor hunger never dang her,
Wind nor rain could never wrang her;
Ance she lay an ouk, and langer,
Out a'neath a wreath o' snaw;
When ither ewies lap the dyke,
And ate the kail for a' the tyke,
My ewie never play'd the like,
But tyc'd about the barnyard wa';
My ewie never play'd the like,
But tyc'd about the barnyard wa',

A better nor a thriftier beast
Nae honest man could weel hae wisit,
Puir silly thing, she never mist
To hae ik year a lamb or twa.
The first she had I gae to Jock,
To be him a kind of stock.
And now the laddie has a flock
Of mair nor thirty head to ca',
And now the laddie has a flock
Of mair than thirty head to ca'.
The neist I gae to Jean; and now
The bairn's sae braw, has fauld sae fu'.
That lads sae thick come her to woo,
They're fain to sleep on hay or straw.
I lookit aye at even' for her,
For fear the founmart might devour her.
Or some mischanter had come o'er her,
Gin the beastie bade awa'.
Or some mischanter had come o'er her,
Gin the beastie bade awa'.

Yet last ouk, for a' my keeping,
(Wha can speak it without weeping?)
A villain cam when I was sleeping,
And sta' my ewie, horn and a';
I sought her sair upo' the morn,
And down a'neath a buss o' thorn,
I got my ewie's crookit horn.
But ah, my ewie was awa'!
I got my ewie's crookit horn.
But ah, my ewie was awa'.
Oh! gin I had the loun that did it,
Sworn I have as weel as said it,
Though a' the world should forbid it,
I wad gie his neck a thrath:
I never met wi' sic a turn
As this sin' ever I was born,
My ewie wi' the crookit horn,
Puir silly ewie, stown awa'!
My ewie wi' the crookit horn,
Puir silly ewie, stown awa'.

HUGHIE GRAHAM.

There are several editions of this ballad.—This here inserted is from oral tradition in Ayrshire, where, when I was a boy, it was a popular song.—It originally had a simple old tune, which I have forgotten.

Our Lords are to the mountains gane,
A hunting o' the fallow deer,
And they have grippet Hughie Graham,
For stealing o' the bishop's mare.

And they hae tied him hand and foot,
And led him up through Stirling town;
The lads and lassies met him there,
Cried, Hughie Graham, thou art a loon.
Oh, lowse my right hand free, he says,
And put my braid sword in the same,
He's no in Stirling town this day
Daur tell the tale to Hughie Graham.
Up then bespoke the brave Whitefoord,
As he sat by the bishop's knee;
Five hundred white pence I'll gie you,
If ye'll let Hughie Graham gae free.
Oh, hau'd your tongue, the bishop says,
And wi' your pleading let me be;
For though ten Grahams were in his coat,
Hughie Graham this day shall die.
Up then bespoke the fair Whitefoord,
As she sat by the bishop's knee;
Five hundred white pence I'll gie you,
If ye'll gie Hughie Graham to me.
Oh, hau'd your tongue now, lady fair,
And wi' your pleading let it be;
Although ten Grahams were in his coat,
It's for my honour he maun die.
They've taen him to the gallows knowe,
He looked to the gallows tree,
Yet never colour left his cheek,
Nor ever did he blink his ee.
At length he look'd round about,
To see whatever he could spy:
And there he saw his auld father,
And he was weeping bitterly.
Oh, hau'd your tongue, my father dear,
And wi' your weeping let it be;
Thy weeping's sairer on my heart
Than a' that they can do to me.
And ye may gie my brother John
My sword that's bent in the middle clear;
And let him come at twelve o'clock,
And see me pay the bishop's mare.
And ye may gie my brother James
My sword that's bent in the middle brown;
And bid him come at four o'clock,
And see his brother Hugh cut down.
Remember me to Maggy, my wife,
The neist time ye gang o'er the moor;
Tell her she staw the bishop's mare,
Tell her she was the bishop's whore.
And ye may tell my kith and kin
I never did disgrace their blood;
And when they meet the bishop's cloak
To mak it shorter by the hood.

A SOUTHLAND JENNY.

This is a popular Ayrshire song, though the notes were never taken down before. It, as well as many of the ballad tunes in this collection, was written from Mrs. Burns' voice.

The following verse of this strain will suffice:—

A SOUTHLAND Jenny that was right bonny,
She had for a suitor a Norlan' Johnnie;
But he was siccan a bashfu' wooer
That he could scarcely speak unto her. [ler,
But blinks o' her beauty and hopes o' her sil-
Forced him at last to tell his mind till 'er;
My dear, quo' he, we'll nae longer tarry,
Gir' ye can love me, let's o'er the muir and marry.

MY TOCHER'S THE JEWEL.

This tune is claimed by Nathaniel Gow. It is notoriously taken from "The Muckin' o' Geordie's Byre." It is also to be found, long prior to Nathaniel Gow's era, in Aird's "Selection of Airs and Marches," the first edition under the name of "The Highway to Edinburgh."

THEN, GUIDWIFE, COUNT THE LAWIN'.

The chorus of this is part of an old song, one stanza of which I recollect:—

Every day my wife tells me
That ale and brandy will run me;
But if guid liquor be my dead,
This shall be written on my head—
Oh, guidwife, count the lawin'.

THE SOGER LADDIE.

The first verse of this is old; the rest is by Ramsay. The tune seems to be the same with a slow air called "Jacky Hume's Lament," or "The Hollin Buss," or "Ken ye what Meg o' the Mill has gotten!"

My soger laddie is over the sea,
And he'll bring gold and silver to me,
And when he comes hame he will make me
This lady;
My blessings gang wi' him, my soger laddie.

My doughty laddie is handsome and brave,
And can as a soger and lover behave;
He's true to his country, to love he is steady—
There's few to compare wi' my soger laddie.

Oh, shield him, ye angels, frae death in alarms
Return him with laurels to my longing arms,
Syne frae all my care ye'll pleasantly free me,
When back to my wishes my soger ye gie me.

Oh, soon may his honours bloom fair on his brow,
As quickly they must, if he get but his due;
For in noble actions his courage is ready,
Which makes me delight in my soger laddie.

WHERE WAD BONNY ANNIE LIE?

The old name of the tune is,— Whare'll our guidman lie?

A silly old stanza of it runs thus:—

Oh, where'll our guidman lie,
Guidman lie, guidman lie.
Oh, where'll our guidman lie,
Till he shute o'er the simmer?
Up amang the i'-bawkws,
The hen-bawkws, the hen-bawkws,
Up amang the hen-bawkws,
Among the rotten timmer.

Ramsay's song is as follows:—

Oh, whare wad bonny Annie lie?
Alane nae mair ye maunna lie;
Wad ye a guidman try,
Is that the thing ye're lacking?
Oh, can a lass sae young as I
Venture on the bridal tye?
Syne down wi' a guidman lie?
I'm fley'd he'd keep me waukin.

Never judge until ye try;
Mak me your guidman, I
Shanna hinder you to lie
And sleep till ye be weary.
What if I should waukin lie;
When the ho-boys are gane by,
Will ye telt me when I cry,
My dear, I'm faint and eerie.

In my bosom thou shalt lie,
When thou waukinie art, or dry,
Healthy cordial standing by
I'll presently revive thee.
To your will I then comply;
Join us, priest, and let me try,
How I'll wi' a guidman lie,
Wha can a cordial gie me.

GALLOWAY TAM.

I have seen an interlude (acted on a wedding) to this tune, called "The Wooing of the Maiden." These entertainments are now much worn out in this part of Scotland. Two are still Oh, Galloway Tam cam here to woo,
We'd better hae gien him the bawsent cow,
For our lass Bess may curse and ban
The wanton wit o' Galloway Tam.
A cannie tongue and a glance fu' gleg,
A buirdly back and a lordly leg.
The loon cried out wha sung the psalm.
"There's room on the stool for Galloway Tam!"

Ye lasses o' Galloway, frank and fair,
Tak tent o' yer hearts and something mair;
And bar your doors, your windows steek.
For he comes stealing like night and sleep:
Oh, sought frae Tam but 'wae ye'll win,
He'll sing ye dumb and he'll dance ye blin';
And aff your balance he'll coop ye then—
Tak tent o' the deil and Galloway Tam.

"Sir," quoth Mess John, "the wanton deil
Has put his birn 'boon gospel kiel,
And bound yere cloots in his black ban';"—
"For mercy loo'st!" quo' Galloway Tam.
"In our kirk-fau'd we maun ye bar,
And smear your fleece wi' covenant tar,
And pettle ye up a dainty lamb,"—
"Among the yowes," quo' Galloway Tam.

Eased of a twalmonth's graceless deeds,
He gaylie doff'd his sackcloth weeds,
And 'mang the maidens he laughing cam'—
"Tak tent o' your hearts" quo' Galloway
A cannie tongue and a glance fu' gleg, (Tam)
A buirdly back and a lordly leg,
A heart like a fox, and a look like a lamb—
Oh, these are the marks o' Galloway Tam.

LORD RONALD, MY SON.

This air, a very favourite one in Ayrshire, is evidently the original of Lochaber. In this manner most of our finest modern airs have had their origin. Some early minstrel, or musical shepherd, composed the simple artless original airs; which being picked up by the more learned musician took the improved form they bear.

O'ER THE MOOR AMANG THE HEATHER.

This song is the composition of Jean Glover, a girl who was not only a whores but also a thief, and in one or other character has visited most of the correction houses in the West. She was born, I believe, in Kilmarnock. I took the song down, from her singing, as she was strolling through the country with a sleight-of-hand blackguard.

COMIN' through the craigs o' Kyle,
Aman the bonny blooming heather,
There I met a bonny lassie,
Keeping a' her yowes thegither.

O'er the moor amang the heather,
O'er the moor amang the heather,
There I met a bonny lassie,
Keeping a' her yowes thegither.

Says I, my dearie, where is thy hame,
In moor or dale, pray tell me whether?
She says, I tent the fleecy flocks
That feed amang the blooming heather.

We laid us down upon a bank,
Sae warm and sunny was the weather,
She left her flocks at large to rove
Amang the bonny blooming heather.

While thus we lay she sang a sang,
Till echo rang a mile and farther,
And aye the burden o' the sang
Was o'er the moor amang the heather.
She charm'd my heart, and aye susyne,
I couldna think on any ither;
By sea and sky she shall be mine!
The bonny lass amang the heather.

TO THE ROSEBUD

This song is the composition of one Johnson, a joiner in the neighborhood of Belfast. The tune is by Oswald, altered, evidently, from "Jockie's Gray Breeks."

All hail to thee, thou bawmy bud,
Thou charming child o' summer, hail;
Ilk fragrant thorn and lofty wood
Does not thy welcome to the vale.

See on thy lovely faulted form,
Glad Phoebus smiles wi' cheering eye,
While on thy head the dewy morn
Has shed the tears o' silient joy.

The tuneful tribes frae yonder bower
Wr' sangs o' joy thy presence hail:
Then haste, thou bawmy, fragrant flower,
And gie thy bosom to the gale.

And see the fair, industrious bee,
With airy wheel and soothing hum,
Flies ceaseless round thy parent tree,
While gentle breezes, trembling, come.

If ruthless Liza pass this way,
She'll pu' thee frae thy thorny stem:
A while thou'lt grace her virgin breast,
But soon thou'lt fade, my bonny gem.

Ah! short, too short, thy rural reign,
And yield to fate, alas! thou must,
Bright emblem of the virgin train,
Thou blooms, alas! to mix wi' dust.

Sae bonny Liza hence may learn,
Wi' every youthfu' maiden gay,
That beauty, like the summer's rose,
In time shall wither and decay.

THE TEARS I SHED MUST EVER FALL.

This song of genius was composed by a Miss Cranstoun.* It wanted four lines to make all the stanzas suit the music, which I added, and are the first four of the last stanza.

The tears I shed must ever fall;
I weep not for an absent swain,
For time can past delights recall,
And parted lovers meet again.
I weep not for the silent dead,
Their toils are past, their sorrows o'er,
And those they loved their steps shall tread
And death shall join, to part no more.

Though boundless oceans roll between,
If certain that his heart is near,
A conscious transport glads the scene,
Soft is the sigh, and sweet the tear.
E'en when by death's cold hand removed,
We mourn the tenant of the tomb,
To think that even in death he loved,
Can cheer the terrors of the gloom.

But bitter, bitter is the tear
Of her who slighted love bewails;
No hopes her gloomy prospect cheer,
No pleasing melancholy hails.
Hers are the pangs of wounded pride,
Of blasted hope, and wither'd joy;
The prop she lean'd on pierced her side,
The flame she fed burns to destroy.

In vain does memory renew
The scenes once tinged in transport's dye;
The sad reverse soon meets the view,
And turns the thought to agony.
Even conscious virtue cannot cure
The pangs to every feeling due;
Ungenerous youth, thy boast how poor
To steal a heart, and break it too?

No cold approach, no alter'd mien,
Just what would make suspicion start;
No pause the dire extremes between,—
He made me blest, and broke my heart;
Hope from its only anchor torn,
Neglected, and neglecting all,
Friendless, forsaken, and forlorn,
The tears I shed must ever fall.

DAINTY DAVIE.

This song, tradition says, and the composition itself confirms it, was composed on the Rev. David Williamson's begetting the daughter of Lady Cherry-trees with child, while a party of dragoons were searching her house to apprehend him for being an adherent to the solemn league and covenant. The pious woman had put a lady's nightcap on him, and had laid him a-bed with her own daughter, and passed him to the soldiery as a lady, her daughter's bedfellow. A mutilated stanza or two are to be found in Herd's collection, but the original song consists of five or six stanzas; and were their delicacy equal to their wit and humour, they would merit a place in any collection. The first stanza is as follows:

Being pursued by the dragoons,
Within my bed he was laid down;
And we'll I wat he was worth his room,
For he was my dainty Davie.

Ramsay's song, "Lucky Nansy," though he calls it an old song with additions, seems to be all his own, except the chorus:

I was aye telling you,
Lucky Nansy, lucky Nansy,
Auld springs wad ding the new,
But ye wad never trow me.

Which I should conjecture to be part of a song, prior to the affair of Williamson.

The following is the version of "Lucky Nansy," by Ramsay, of which the poet speaks:

While fops, in soft Italian verse,
Ilk fair ane's een and breast rehearse,
While sangs abound, and sense is scarce,
These lines I have indixed:
But neither darts nor arrows here,
Venus nor Cupid shall appear,
And yet with these fine sounds I swear,
The maidens are delighted.

I was aye telling you,
Lucky Nansy, lucky Nansy,
Auld springs wad ding the new,
But ye wad never trow me.

Nor swan with crimson will I mix,
To spread upon my lassie's checks,
And syne th'unmeaning name prefix,
Miranda, Chloe, Phillis.
I'll fetch nac smile from Jove
My height of ecstasy to prove,
Nor sighing, thus present my love
With roses eke and lilies.

I was aye telling you, &c.

But stay—I had a'maist forgot
My mistress, and my sang to boot,
And that's an unco faut, I wot:
But, Nansy, 'tis nac matter.
Ye see, I clink my verse wi' rhyme,
And, ken ye, that a'tones the crime;
Forbye, how sweet my numbers chime,
And slide away like water!

I was aye telling you, &c.

Now ken, my reverend sonsy fair,
Thy runkled cheeks and lyart hair,
Thy haff-shut een and hodling air,
Are a' my passion's fuel.
Nae skyring gowk, my dear, can see,
Or love, or grace, or heaven in thee:
Yet thou hast charms enow for me,
Then smile, and be na cruel.

Leeze me on thy snawy pow,
Lucky Nansy, lucky Nansy;
Dryest wood will eithest low,
And, Nansy, sae will ye now.

Troth I have sung the sang to you,
Which ne'er another bard wad do;
Hear, then, my charitable vow,
Dear, venerable Nansy.
But if the world my passion wrang,
And say ye only live in sang,
Ken, I despise a slandering tongue,
And sing to please my fancy.

Leeze me on thy, &c.

BOB O' DUNBLANE.

Ramsay, as usual, has modernized this song. The original I learned on the spot from my old host in the principal inn there, is:

Lassie, lend me your braw hemp heckle,
And I'll lend you my thrissplin-kame;
My heckle is broken, it canna be gotten,
And we'll gae dance the bob o' Dunblane.

Twa gaed to the wood, to the wood,
Twa gaed to the wood—three came hame;
An it be na weel bobbit, weel bobbit, weel bobbit,
An it be na weel bobbit, we'll bob it again.

I insert this song to introduce the following anecdote, which I have heard well authenticated:—In the evening of the day of the battle of Dunblane, (Sheriff-Muir,) when the action was over, a Scots officer in Argyle's army observed to his Grace that he was afraid the rebels would give out to the world that they had gotten the victory.—"Weel, weel," returned his Grace, alluding to the foregoing ballad, "if they think it be na weel bobbit, we'll bob it again"

If love for others did not prompt a wife and mother to keep a tidy house and a bright clean kitchen a regard for her social standing in society ought to teach her to use Sapolio in all her house-cleaning work. 10c. a cake at all grocers.

LOVELL'S LIBRARY.
AHEAD OF ALL COMPETITORS.

The improvements being constantly made in "Lovell's Library," have placed it in the Front Rank of cheap publications in this country. The publishers propose to still further improve the series by having BETTER PAPER,
BETTER PRINTING, LARGER TYPE,
and more attractive cover than any series in the market.

SEE WHAT IS SAID OF IT:
The following extract from a letter recently received shows the appreciation in which the Library is held by those who most constantly read it:

"MERCHANTIL LIBRARY.
Baltimore, August 29, 1883."

"Will you kindly send me two copies of your latest list? I am glad to see that you now issue a volume every day. Your Library we find greatly preferable to the 'Seaside' and 'Franklin Square' Series, and even better than the 12mo. form of the latter, the page being of better shape, the lines better spaced, and the words better spaced. Altogether your series is much more in favor with our subscribers than either of its rivals.

"Benjulia" is a singularly interesting, and, in a way, fascinating creation. Mr. Collins can deal strongly with a strong situation, but he has done nothing more powerful than his sketch of Benjulia's last hours. Mr. Gallilee and Zoe are capital examples of genuine and unforced humor; and the book, as a whole, is thoroughly readable and enthralling from its first page to its last."— Academy.

Mr. Wilkie Collins' latest novel is certainly one of the ablest he has written. It is quite the equal of 'The Woman in White' and of 'The Moonstone,' consequently it may truly be described as a masterpiece in the secular line of fiction in which Mr. Collins not only excels but distances every rival in the walk of literature he has marked out for himself. 'Heart and Science' is in its way a great novel, certainly the best we have seen from Mr. Wilkie Collins since 'The Woman in White' and 'Armadale.'"—Morning Post.

"We doubt whether the author has ever written a cleverer story... An elegant and touching tribute to the blessedness and power of a true and loving heart. The book unites in a high degree the attractions of thrilling narrative and clever portraiture of character, of sound wisdom and real humor."—Congregationalist.

"'Wanda' is the story by which Ouida will probably be judged by the literary historian of the future, for it is distinguished by all her high merits, and not disfigured by any one of her few defects. In point of construction this most recent contribution to the fictional literature of the day is perfect; the dialogues are both brilliant and stirring, and the descriptive passages are masterpieces. Ouida is seen at her brightest and best in 'Wanda' the book thrills by its dramatic interest, and delights by its singular freshness and unconventional style. There are no more attractive characters in English fiction than Wanda and her peasant husband, and increased fame must result to the brilliant novelist from this her latest work."—St. Stephen's Review.

"We do not know anything Ouida has done that equals this, her latest novel, in power of delineating character and describing scenery. Wanda is a fine, high-souled character."—Citizen.

"A powerful and fascinating novel, deeply interesting, with excellent character portrayal, and written in that sparkling style for which Ouida is famous. 'Wanda' deserves to take rank by the side of the best of her previous novels."—Darlington Post.

"'Wanda' contains much that is striking. The central idea is finely worked out. We have seen nothing from Ouida's pen that strikes us as being, on the whole, so well conceived and so skilfully wrought out."—Spectator.

A BOOK THAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ:

WOMAN'S PLACE TO-DAY.

By MRS. LILLIE DEVEREAUX BLAKE.

1 vol., 12 mo., Handsome Paper Cover, No. 105 LOVELL'S LIBRARY, 20 Cents.
Handsomely Bound in Cloth, 50 Cents.

One of the sensations of last winter in New York City was the series of lectures delivered by Mrs. Lillie Devereaux Blake, in reply to the ten lectures of Rev. Morgan Dix, on every Friday evening. The reverend gentleman discussed Woman's position and duties, and, on the succeeding Sunday evening, Mrs. Blake replied with much wit and energy to his structures on her sex. The widespread interest excited by this intellectual duel has lead to the publication of Mrs. Blake's lectures, in book form, under the title "Woman's Place To-Day."

READ WHAT THE CRITICS SAY:

"These lectures are admirably written; and whether we agree with the opinions of the lecturer or not, deserve very serious attention."—American Literary Churchman.

"The brightest book from the pen of a woman."—The N. Y. World.

"Mrs. Blake has written a reply to the Rev. Morgan Dix, which will delight every lover of fair play to read. Although she glows with righteous indignation, she never looses her temper. If she calls her opponent "a respectable relic of the Middle Ages, it is not in anger but in sorrow. In her argument she routs the reverend gentleman, hip and thigh, with the whip of her wit, with the broadside of fact, with the energy of common sense, she drives him flying before her. It is a delightful tournament and every man in the land ought to witness it."—The Philadelphia Press.

"There is a very forcible presentation of arguments, not new, but none the less strong for that reason, in favor of affording a field for the restless energies of woman. The book is well worth reading, and is instructive in some points as well as entertaining."—Walter Edgar McCann in Baltimore News.

"The style is good."—R. H. Stoddard in Mail and Express.

"Her replies to the arguments and assertions of Dr. Dix are keen and happy, showing that she has no little vigor of mind and dialectic skill."—New York Star.

"Woman's Place To-Day" is a brilliant, humorous, witty and logical defence of woman's rights.―Cincinnati Transcript.

"In speaking of Dr. Dix, it seems that the reverend gentleman has very little left of him by the quick-witted and keen-eyed woman; indeed if Dr. Dix has habitually made statements open to similar refutations, and the women he has known have been ready with Mrs. Blake to show up his mistakes, it is little to wonder that he advocates a silence on their part."—The Washington Republic.

THE 200TH ISSUE OF LOVELL'S LIBRARY.

THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

By JOHN BUNYAN.

No. 200, in Lovell's Library .................. .......................... 20 cents

The publishers of Lovell's Library have signalized the issue of the 200th volume of their now successful series by the publication of Bunyan's renowned allegory, "The Pilgrim's Progress." A people's edition of this inimitable work of genius fittingly marks the progress of this library—is advance upon its competitors, and the favor and acceptance of its successive issues by the reading public of America. "The Pilgrim's Progress" is supposed to be a dream, and to allegorize the life of a Christian from his conversion to his death. His doubts are giants; his sins, a pedlar's pack; his Bible, a chart; his minister, Evangelist; his conversion, a flight from the City of Destruction; his struggle with besetting sins, a fight with Apollyon; his death, a toilsome passage over a deep stream, and so on.

"The style of Bunyan is delightful to every reader and invaluable as a study to every person who wishes to obtain a wide command over the English language. . . . For magnificence, for pathos, for vehement exhortation, for subtle disquisition, for every purpose of the poet, the orator and the divine, this homely dialect, the dialect of plain workingmen, was perfectly sufficient. There is no book in our libraries on which we could so readily stake the fame of the old unpolluted English language; no book which shows so well how rich that language is in its own proper wealth, and how little it has been improved by all that it has borrowed. . . . We are not afraid to say that, though there were many clever men in England during the latter half of the Seventeenth Century, there were only two creative minds. One of those minds produced the 'Paradise Lost'; the other, 'The Pilgrim's Progress.'"—Lord Macaulay.

TWO GREAT NOVELS.

GIDEON FLEYCE.

By HENRY W. LUCY.

1 vol. 12mo. Handsome Paper Covers. No. 96 of LOVELL'S LIBRARY. 20c.

"When 'Gideon Fleyce' has been read, the answer will be that Mr. Lucy has succeeded. He has devised an excellent plot, and he has told it admirably. It is partly political; it is partly a love story, though that element has comparatively a small share in it; and it is a novel of incident. Mr. Lucy's comments upon political matters are delightful." — SCOTSMAN.

"This is one of the cleverest novels we have read for a long time. The author is sure to take a high place among contemporary novelists, may perhaps some day prove his fitness to rank among the great masters of the craft." — SHEFFIELD INDEPENDENT.

"The novel has remarkable constructive excellence and striking situations. The flow of easy humour and the extraordinary perception of the ridiculous possessed by the ant or have here most facile display." — DAILY NEWS.

"A very clever novel, and full of promise as a first venture in fiction; a highly entertaining story, 'Gideon Fleyce' is so much above the average of novels that the accession of its author—especially as the creator of 'Napper'—to the rank of writers of fiction is deserving of a very hearty welcome." — ACADEMY.

"That is a powerful scene, and the whole of the sensational plot of which this scene is the central point, is managed with an ingenuity worthy almost of Wilkie Collins." — SPECTATOR.

"An excellent story, which has the double interest of an exciting plot with telling episodes and of very clever analysis of character." — TIMES.

THE GOLDEN SHAFT.

By CHARLES GIBBON, Author of "ROBIN GRAY," &c.

1 vol. 12mo. Handsome Paper Covers. No. 57 of LOVELL'S LIBRARY. 20c.

"Mr. Gibbon is to be congratulated on the character of 'Fiscal' Musgrave, which is as original as it is lifelike, and as attractive as it is original. The situation which chiefly displays it is well imagined, powerfully worked out, and sufficiently striking in itself." — ACADEMY.

"Excellent in every important respect; the story is interesting, the plot is most ingeniously devised, the characters are cleverly conceived and consistently drawn, while several of them stand out picturesquely in their quaint originality. Altogether, we may certainly congratulate Mr. Gibbon on his book." — SATURDAY REVIEW.

"Mr. Gibbon is at his best in this story. It contains some really powerful situations, and its plot is well worked out. The conceptions difficulties of the Fiscal, the father of the charming heroine, are well developed by Mr. Gibbon, and the story will be read with interest throughout." — MANCHESTER EXAMINER.

"Altogether, the 'Golden Shaft' is good, and fully equals, if it does not improve upon, anything Mr. Gibbon has previously written." — GLASGOW HERALD.

"It is pleasant to meet with a work by Mr. Gibbon that will remind his readers of the promise of his earliest efforts. The story of Thorburn and his family is full of power and pathos, as is the figure of the strong-natured Muegrave." — ATHENÆUM.

"On the whole, we have seen nothing before of Mr. Gibbon's writing so good as this novel." — DAILY NEWS.

The subjects treated in this volume, which is the production of two well known American writers, are Psychology, Clairvoyance and Theosophy. In the form of sketches they outline the philosophy of Psychology, and relate phenomena wholly outside of, and apart from Spiritualism, with which it is associated in the popular mind in this country. These two writers have much to say regarding Occultism and Theosophy, and, in a word, discuss the science of the soul in all its bearings. No more interesting book has ever appeared on these subjects. Much personal experience, which is always interesting, is given in its pages; and the authors who have chosen to be anonymous, have had remarkable results in their study of Spiritualism and Clairvoyancy, and are adepts in Psychological researches.

From all the varied avenues in which they have worked so perseveringly, they have brought together a highly gratifying mass of material. The volume is one in which agnostics, spiritualists, orthodox and scientific minds generally, will be deeply interested; and it is written in so earnest and frank a spirit, and in language so clear and graceful, that "Beyond the Sunrise," will win a welcome in every household. It will give a good cheer and inspiration wherever it is read.

"'WHIST, or BUMBLEPUPPY?' is one of the most entertaining and at the same time one of the soundest books on whist ever written. Its drollery may blind some readers to the value of its advice; no man who knows anything about whist, however, will fail to read it with interest, and few will fail to read it with advantage. Upon the ordinary rules of whist, Pembridge supplies much sensible and thoroughly amusing comment. EXTRACTS FROM NOTICES BY THE PRESS.

THE SATURDAY REVIEW — "If there ever was a book made up from beginning to end of laughter, yet not a comic book, or a 'merry' book, or a book of jokes, or a book of pictures, or a jest book, or a tomfool book, but a perfectly sober and serious book, in the reading of which a sober man may laugh without shame from beginning to end, it is the book called 'Vice Versa: or, a Lesson to Fathers'. ... We close the book, recommending it very earnestly to all fathers, in the first instance, and their sons, nephews, uncles, and male cousins next."

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"'Vice Versa' is one of the most diverting books that we have read for many a day. It is equally calculated to amuse the August idler, and to keep up the spirits of those who stay in town and work, while others are holiday making. ... The book is singularly well written, graphic, terse, and full of nerve. The school-boy conversations are to the life, and every scene is brisk and well considered."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"The whole story is told with delightful drollery and spirit, and there is not a dull page in the volume. It should be added that Mr. Anstey writes well, and in a style admirably suited to his amusing subject.'

THE SPECTATOR.—"Mr. Anstey deserves the thanks of everybody for showing that there is still a little fun left in this world. ... It is long since we read anything more truly humorous. ... We must admit that we have not laughed so heartily over anything for some years back as we have over this 'Lesson for Fathers.'"

THE ACADEMY.—"It is certainly the best book of its kind that has appeared for a long time, and in the way of provoking laughter by certain old-fashioned means, which do not involve satire or sarcasm, it has few rivals."

THE WORLD.—"The idea of a father and son exchanging their identity has suggested itself to many minds before now. It is illustrated in this book with surprising freshness, originality and force. ... The book is more than wildly comic and amusing: it is in parts exceedingly pathetic."

THE COURT JOURNAL.—"The story is told with so much wit and gayety that we cannot be deceived in our impression of the future career of F. Anstey being destined to attain the greatest success among the most popular authors of the day."

VANITY FAIR.—"The book is, in our opinion, the drollest work ever written in the English language."

TRUTH.—"Mr. Anstey has done an exceedingly difficult thing so admirably and artfully as to conceal its difficulties. Haven't for years read so irresistibly humorous a book."

"A GREAT WORK."

LABOR and CAPITAL,

-A-

NEW MONETARY SYSTEM,

By EDWARD KELLOGG.

Edited by his Daughter, Mary Kellogg Putnam.

1 Vol., 12mo., Handsome Paper Cover, No. 111 of Lovell's Library, 20 Cents.

"Labor and Capital" is a remarkable book. It shows how and why Capitalists get so large a part of the yearly productions of labor, and why the producers get so small a part. The first edition of this work was published in 1848, under the title of "Labor and Other Capital; or, the rights of each secured and the wrongs of both eradicated." At that time the publication of such a work by a rich and prosperous merchant of New York created considerable excitement and discussion among political economists. The author was a man of deep perception, and, in the state of the country, he foresaw with clearness all that has transpired in our financial history, during the past thirty years. If the system elaborated by Mr. Kellogg had been fully, instead of partially, adopted by Congress, the various steps which have been taken in the application of his theory would all have been anticipated. Mr. Kellogg believed that the Government of the United States should issue all money or currency that should be allowed to go into circulation. The present United States Treasury Note is a partial exemplification of this plan. The whole work has such an important bearing upon the financial and political state of the country to day that the publishers are justified in issuing it in a cheap form, thus placing it within the reach of all who are interested in the industrial problem.

A Characteristic Letter From

WENDELL PHILLIPS,

Boston, May 25th, 1883.

Mr. John W. Lovell,

Dear Sir:—I am (am I?) indebted to you for a copy of your reprint of "Labor and Capital," by Kellogg; one of the ablest and most convincing statements of the Financial Problem ever made; and proposing with unanswerable argument, the easiest, if not the only remedy for our troubles and dangers. I am glad that the loving devotion and rare ability of his daughter has made the work so perfect and clear in statement. She deserves well of the students of this question and has their gratitude.

Yours respectfully,

Wendell Phillips.

The demands now made by an educated musical public are so exacting that very few Pianoforte Manufacturers can produce Instruments that will stand the test which merit requires. SOHMER & CO., as Manufacturers, rank amongst these chosen few, who are acknowledged to be makers of standard instruments. In these days, when Manufacturers urge the low price of their wares rather than their superior quality as an inducement to purchase, it may not be amiss to suggest that, in a Piano, quality and price are too inseparably joined to expect the one without the other.

Every Piano ought to be judged as to the quality of its tone, its touch, and its workmanship; if any one of these is wanting in excellence, however good the others may be, the instrument will be imperfect. It is the combination of these qualities in the highest degree that constitutes the perfect Piano, and it is this combination that has given the "SOHMER" its honorable position with the trade and the public.
